Foreword

THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK was first published in 1926 and since the late 1950s has been published in annual two-volume editions, establishing itself as the authoritative reference work on the political and economic life of countries throughout the world.

The first volume of the two-part EUROPA YEAR BOOK: A WORLD SURVEY covers international organizations, the countries of Europe, Cyprus and Turkey. With its companion volume, which deals with the countries of Africa, the Americas, Asia and Australasia, it provides a wealth of detailed information on the political, economic, commercial and social institutions of the countries of the world, annually revised from authoritative sources.

The editor thanks the innumerable individuals and organizations throughout the world, particularly statistical offices and diplomatic missions, whose generous co-operation in providing current information for this edition is invaluable in presenting the most accurate and up-to-date material available, and acknowledges particular indebtedness for material from the following publications: the United Nations' Demographic Yearbook and Statistical Yearbook; the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations' Production Yearbook; and the Military Balance 1974-1975, published by the International Institute for Strategic Studies, 18 Adam Street, London, WC2N 6AL. Gross National Product figures are taken from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development estimates.

April 1975.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARISONS

The following tables provide a general comparison of population and economic statistics for every independent state (excluding the Vatican City) and every other territory with more than 25,000 inhabitants (excluding the Gaza Strip). An attempt has been made to provide comparable information under each heading and the figures presented refer to the latest period for which uniform data are available in each category.

Area figures refer to total area, including inland water. Unless otherwise indicated, population figures are mid-year estimates. Most of the data refer to de facto population (persons actually present in the area), though some are estimates of de jure population (persons normally resident). Figures for life expectancy are estimates, prepared in the Population Division of the United Nations, of the average number of years of life remaining to a new-born child if subject to the mortality conditions (recorded or assumed) of the period 1965-70. It should be stressed that the figures refer to the average life expectancy at birth for both sexes. In many developing countries mortality rates are high during the first few years of life, but those who survive infancy have a life expectancy much greater than the average at birth. It is also noteworthy that in all developed countries the life expectancy of females is greater than that of males.

Gross National Product figures can be taken as indicators of the comparative sizes of the various national economies, and Gross National Product per capita figures provide an index of the comparative wealth and poverty of the countries. Owing to unequal distribution of wealth a G.N.P. per capita figure can by no means be taken as an average income. Sources are quoted at the end of the tables, but it must be stressed that the G.N.P. and G.N.P. per capita figures are approximations and may be used only as a general index. In particular, a wide margin of error may be expected in estimates for socialist economies, and in G.N.P. per capita figures under $100, where the subsistence sector is unusually important and the degree of precision tends to decrease as the ratio of subsistence production to total G.N.P. increases. Figures refer to G.N.P. in U.S. dollars at market prices, with totals generally rounded to the nearest ten of the unit employed. Adjustments have been made to some published figures of G.N.P. per head to take account of revised population estimates.

THE UNITED NATIONS

First Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Founded in 1945 to maintain international peace and security and to develop international co-operation in economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems.

THE UNITED NATIONS CHARTER

PREAMBLE

We the peoples of the United Nations determined

TO SAVE succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and

TO REAFFIRM faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and

TO ESTABLISH conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and

TO PROMOTE social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

And for these ends

TO PRACTISE tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and

TO UNITE our strength to maintain international peace and security, and

TO ENSURE, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and

TO EMPLOY international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Have resolved to combine our efforts to accomplish these aims

Accordingly, our respective governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

ORIGIN

The United Nations was a name devised by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was first used in the Declaration by United Nations of January 1st, 1942, when representatives of twenty-six nations pledged their governments to continue fighting together against the Axis powers.

The United Nations Charter was drawn up by the representatives of fifty countries at the United Nations Conference on International Organization, which met at San Francisco from April 25th to June 26th, 1945. The representatives deliberated on the basis of proposals worked out by representatives of China, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States at Dumbarton Oaks in August-October 1944. The Charter was signed on June 26th, 1945. Poland, not represented at the Conference, signed it later but nevertheless became one of the original fifty-one members.

The United Nations officially came into existence on October 24th, 1945, when the Charter had been ratified by China, France, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States, and by a majority of other signatories. October 24th is now universally celebrated as United Nations Day.

PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

The purposes of the United Nations are:

- To maintain international peace and security;
- To develop friendly relations among nations;
- To co-operate internationally in solving international economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems and in promoting respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;
- To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in attaining these common ends.

The United Nations acts in accordance with these principles:

- It is based on the sovereign equality of all its members.
- All members are to fulfil in good faith their Charter obligations.
- They are to settle their international disputes by peaceful means and without endangering peace, security and justice.
- They are to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against other states.
- They are to give the United Nations every assistance in action it takes in accordance with the Charter, and not to assist states against which preventive or enforcement action is being taken.
- The United Nations is to ensure that states which are not members act in accordance with these principles in so far as it is necessary to maintain international peace and security.

Nothing in the Charter is to authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are purely the national concern of any state.

The official languages of the United Nations are Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish. Its working languages are Chinese, English and French. Spanish is also a working language of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council.

Membership of the United Nations is open to all peace-loving nations which accept the obligations of the United Nations Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

The original members of the United Nations are those countries which signed the Declaration by United Nations of January 1st, 1942, or took part in the San Francisco Conference, and which signed and ratified the Charter.

Other countries can be admitted by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. A two-thirds majority vote by the Assembly is required.

Members may be suspended or expelled by the General Assembly on recommendation of the Security Council. They may be suspended if the Security Council is taking enforcement action against them or expelled if they persistently violate the principles of the Charter. The Security Council can restore its rights to a suspended member.

SECURITY COUNCIL

Established as a principal organ under the United Nations Charter; first met January 17th, 1946. The task of the Security Council is to promote international peace and security in all parts of the world.

MEMBERS

Permanent members:

China
France
U.S.S.R.

United Kingdom
U.S.A.

Until December 1975: Byelorussian S.S.R., Cameroon, Costa Rica, Iraq, Mauritania.

Until December 1976: Guyana, Italy, Japan, Sweden, Tanzania.

ORGANIZATION

The Security Council has the right to investigate any dispute or situation which might lead to friction between two or more countries, and such disputes or situations may be brought to the Council's attention either by one of its members, by any member state, by the General Assembly, by the Secretary-General or even, under certain conditions, by a state which is not a member of the United Nations.

The Council has the right to recommend ways and means of peaceful settlement and, in certain circumstances, the actual terms of settlement.

In the event of a threat to or breach of international peace or an act of aggression, the Council has powers to take "enforcement" measures in order to restore international peace and security. These include severance of communications and of economic and diplomatic relations and, if required, action by air, land and sea forces.

All members of the United Nations are pledged by the Charter to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with special agreements, the armed forces, assistance and facilities necessary to maintain international peace and security. These agreements, however, have not yet been concluded.

The Council is organized to be able to function continuously. The Presidency of the Council is held monthly in turn by the member states in English alphabetical order.

Each member of the Council has one vote. On procedural matters decisions are made by the affirmative vote of any nine members. For decisions on other matters the required nine affirmative votes must include the votes of the five permanent members. This is the rule of "great power unanimity" popularly known as the "veto" privilege. As of December 1974, this right had been exercised 128 times, as follows: China (2), France (4), U.S.S.R. (107), United Kingdom (9), U.S.A. (6); and on one occasion by France, the United Kingdom and the U.S.A. together.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

In practice, an abstention by one of the permanent members is not regarded as a veto. Any member, whether permanent or non-permanent, must abstain from voting in any decision concerning the pacific settlement of a dispute to which it is a party.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL—ECOSOC

Promotes world co-operation on economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems.

Registrar: STANISLAS AGUARONE.

The court is composed of fifteen leading judges, each of a different nationality, elected with an absolute majority by both the General Assembly and the Security Council. Representation of the main forms of government and the different legal systems of the world are borne in mind in their election. Candidates are nominated in their own countries, with government supervision.

The judges are elected for nine years and may be re-elected; elections for five seats are held every three years. The Court elects its President and Vice-President for each three-year period. Members may not have any political, administrative, or other professional occupation, and may not sit in any case with which they have been otherwise connected than as a judge of the Court. For the purposes of a case, each side—consisting of one or more States—may, unless the Bench already includes a judge with a corresponding nationality, choose a person from outside the Court to sit as a judge on terms of equality with the Members. Judicial decisions are taken by a majority of the judges present, subject to a quorum of nine Members. The President has a casting vote.

JURISDICTION

The International Court of Justice operates in accordance with a Statute which is an integral part of the UN Charter. Only States may be parties in cases before the Court; those not parties to the Statute may have access in certain circumstances and under conditions laid down by the Security Council.

A review of the role of the Court is on the agenda of the General Assembly.

The Jurisdiction of the Court comprises:

1. All cases which the parties refer to it jointly by special agreement (there have been five such).
2. All matters concerning which a treaty or convention in force provides for reference to the Court. Nearly 700 bilateral or multilateral agreements make such provision. Among the more noteworthy: General Act for Pacific Settlement of International Disputes (1949), Treaty of Peace with Japan (1951), European Convention for Peaceful Settlement of Disputes (1957), Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs (1961), Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees (1967).
3. Legal disputes between States which have recognized the jurisdiction of the Court as compulsory for specified classes of dispute. Declarations by the following 45 States thus accepting the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court are at present in force: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Botswana, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, El Salvador, Finland, The Gambia, Haiti, Honduras, India, Israel, Japan, Kenya, Khmer Republic, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Portugal, Somalia, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Uganda, United Kingdom, U.S.A. and Uruguay.

Disputes as to whether the Court has jurisdiction are settled by the Court.

Judgments are without appeal, but are binding only for the particular case and between the parties.

Compliance with Judgments. States appearing before the Court undertake to comply with its Judgment. If a party to a case fails to do so, the other party may apply to the Security Council, which may make recommendations or decide upon measures to give effect to the Judgment.

Advisory opinions on legal questions may be requested by the General Assembly, the Security Council or, if so authorized by the Assembly, other United Nations organs or specialized agencies.

PAST CASES

JUDGMENTS

Forty-five cases have been referred to the Court by States. Some were removed from the list as a result of settlement or discontinuance, or on the grounds of a lack of basis for jurisdiction. Cases which have been the subject of a Judgment by the Court include:

Peru), Rights of Nationals of the United States of America in Morocco (France v. United States), Ambatielos (Greece v. United Kingdom), Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. (United Kingdom v. ## RECENT JUDICIAL ACTIVITY

(January to July 1974)

The Court held 14 public sittings and 70 private meetings.

In July 1976 in the two Fisheries Jurisdiction cases brought against Iceland in 1972 by the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany, the Court delivered judgment that Iceland was not entitled unilaterally to exclude the applicants' fishing vessels from areas between the 12-mile and 50-mile limits and that the governments concerned were under mutual obligation to negotiate for the equitable solution of differences concerning their fishing rights.

The Court continued its consideration of the two Nuclear Tests cases brought against France in 1973 by Australia and New Zealand. In July 1974, in public sittings at which France was not represented, it heard observations presented on behalf of the applicant States on the jurisdiction of the Court and the admissibility of the Applications.

- Public Administration

Executive Secretary: J. B. P. MARAMIS (Indonesia).

Various bodies were created by ECAFE, the predecessor of ESCAP, and are associated with ESCAP. These include: Committee for the Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin; Asian Highway Co-ordinating Committee; Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning; Asian Industrial Development Council; Committee for Co-ordination of Joint Prospecting for Mineral Resources in Offshore Asian Areas; Trade Promotion Centre; Asian Coconut Community; Asian Statistical Institute; Asian Centre for Development Administration.

FUNCTIONS

ESCAP'S three fields of activity are as follows: promoting regional co-operation in combating region-wide problems, increasing aid in sub-regional approaches, and helping individual Governments plan and carry out balanced development programmes.

Currently the Commission is stressing new priorities aimed at reducing mass poverty, population pressures and unemployment in Asia, with intensified efforts to solve agricultural problems, speed the application of science and technology to development, and at the same time avert environmental damage. The Executive Secretary has urged concentration on "those strategic areas which promise the greatest possible impact in the region".

Although ESCAP does not itself distribute capital aid, it has helped set up and attract funds for regional and sub-regional projects that, in turn, provide development assistance.

ANNUAL SESSIONS

At its yearly sessions the Commission as a whole examines the region's problems, reviews progress or setbacks, sets new goals and priorities, and may launch new operational projects. Recent sessions of ECAFE called for special efforts towards the goal of self-sustained growth and economic self-reliance for the region's developing countries.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCES

During its time of activity, ECAFE convened four ministerial conferences—in Manila in 1963 and 1965, in Bangkok in 1968 and in Kabul in 1970. The most recent session adopted the "Kabul Declaration"—a call for further efforts to expand regional trade, improve monetary mechanisms, and concerted action on a variety of other problems, with special aid to the least developed countries.

ACTIVITIES

(Up to September 1973; the former title of the Commission, ECAFE, was current at the time of writing). Special attention is being given to ways of achieving regional growth during the current United Nations Second Development Decade (1971-1980).

BUDGET AND STAFF

For 1973 ECAFE's regular annual budget totalled about U.S. $7.5 million, including funds for the 1973 share of costs for new building construction. ECAFE's budget (which forms part of the regular budget of the United Nations in the economic and social field) was supplemented by technical assistance funds, as well as certain funds from governments and institutions.

In 1973 the work of ECAFE proper was carried out by a staff of 161 professionals and 290 general-service employees whose posts were financed from the regular budget, plus 20 regional advisers and supporting staff members paid from technical assistance sources. Other staff members serve in the Mekong Office, the Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning, the Asian Highway Transport Technical Bureau, and the offshore prospecting project for East Asia (which have separate budgets). Overall, the 1973 list totals about 700.

MAJOR REGIONAL PROJECTS

MEKONG DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

The Mekong Project seeks to develop the water resources of the Lower Mekong Basin, including mainstream and tributaries, in terms of hydroelectric power, irrigation, flood control, drainage, navigation improvement, watershed management, water supply and related benefits. The project is directed by the Committee for the Co-ordination of Investigations of the Lower Mekong Basin consisting of the Khmer Republic, Laos, the Republic of

United Nations (Regional Economic Commissions)

Viet-Nam and Thailand, which operates under the auspices of ESCAP and the UNDP. Its work has been supported by 25 governments outside the region, a total of 16 United Nations agencies or bodies, and a number of foundations and business firms. (Further information on the Mekong Project appears in a separate chapter below.)

ASIAN HIGHWAY

The Asian Highway Project, approved by ECAFE in 1959, calls for a network of 64,363 km. in 15 countries. During the first United Nations Development Decade, ending in 1970, efforts were concentrated on establishing at least one through route from west to east, with connections to all other countries not served by that route. Route A-1, from Iran to the Republic of Viet-Nam (10,800 km.), considered one of the most important routes, is now 95 per cent complete (above minimum Asian Highway Standard). As for the entire network, more than four-fifths is now motorable in all weather.

Work on the project is guided by the Asian Highway Co-ordinating Committee, composed of representatives at ministerial level from member countries, which held its first meeting in April 1965. An Asian Highway Transport Technical Bureau, based with ESCAP and aided by the UNDP and member countries, seeks to carry out recommendations of the Co-ordinating Committee.

ASIAN INSTITUTE FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND PLANNING

The Asian Institute for Economic Development and Planning, established in 1964, provides training, on a regional basis, for government officials engaged in economic and social development programmes in Asia.

The Institute has trained some 2,000 participants from 25 countries in the ESCAP region, either in Bangkok or in "country courses" elsewhere. Besides undertaking research in support of its training programmes, the Institute provides the secretariat for the Association of Research and Training Institutes in Asia.

The Institute works as an autonomous institution under the aegis of ESCAP with support from the UNDP and participating governments, and with the co-operation of several United Nations specialized agencies, other international organizations and foundations. The management is vested in a Governing Council of which the Executive Secretary of ESCAP is Chairman ex-officio.

regional development policies; policies for reducing regional imbalances within ECLA countries in order to achieve integrated and speedier development; and science and technology, mainly with regard to the transfer of expertise, the assimilation of techniques and the development of Latin America. The Commission has held eleven sessions since its inception.

(a) Conference of Ministers which is vested with full powers to consider matters of general policy and the priorities to be assigned to the programme and other activities of the Commission. It reviews programme implementation and examines and approves the proposed programme of work, and considers reports submitted to it by the Executive Committee and the Technical Committee of Experts. The Conference of Ministers holds its meetings every two years. ## ACTIVITIES

Objectives. The work of the Commission is determined by decisions of its plenary sessions. Relations with Other Organizations: WHO maintains a liaison office at ECA. In co-operation with ITU work has begun on a pan-African telecommunications system. ECA also runs a Joint Agricultural Division in conjunction with FAO, and since 1974 a Joint ECA/UNIDO Division. UNDP's Regional Representative in Addis Ababa has special liaison duties with ECA.

Co-operation between ECA and the Organization of African Unity started with the signing of a UN/OAU agreement by the then Secretary-General of the United Nations, U Thant, and the then Secretary-General of the OAU, Diallo Telli, on November 15th, 1965. An ECA/OAU/UNESCO Inter-Secretariat Meeting was held in September 1972, and the eighth ECA/OAU Joint Meeting on Trade and Development was held in Geneva during August 1973.

The Conference of Ministers of Industry held in October 1973 was co-sponsored by ECA, OAU and UNIDO. ECA and OAU have also co-operated in creating the Association of African Trade Promotion Organizations.

INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT—IBRD (WORLD BANK)

1818 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20433, U.S.A.

Telephone: EXecutive 3-6360.

The World Bank was established on December 27th, 1945. Initially it was concerned with post-war reconstruction in Europe; since then its aim has been to assist the economic development of member nations by making loans where private capital is not available on reasonable terms, to finance productive investments. Nearly two-thirds of lending has been for development of electricity supply and transport. Loans are made either direct to governments, or to private enterprise with the guarantee of their governments.

MEMBERSHIP AND VOTING RIGHTS

(see Table on pages 26-28)

Only members of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) (see page 38) may be considered for membership in the Bank; membership in the Bank is a prerequisite for membership in the IDA.

Subscriptions to the capital stock of the Bank are based on each member's quota in the IMF, which is designed to reflect the country's relative economic strength. Voting rights are related to shareholdings.

ORGANIZATION

Officers and staff of the World Bank serve concurrently as officers and staff in the International Development Association (IDA) (see page 34). The World Bank and the IDA have five regional offices at their headquarters in Washington, each headed by a vice-president. In addition there is a vice-president, Projects Staff, who is responsible for general guidance and assistance to the regional offices. His staff consists of selected experts to provide the support necessary to assure uniform sectoral policies throughout the regional offices; certain specialists who cannot be practically allocated to single region and project units like population, tourism, urbanization and industry.

BOARDS OF GOVERNORS

All powers in each institution are vested in a Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor appointed by each member nation. Typically, a Governor is his country's finance minister, central bank governor, or a minister or an official of comparable rank. The Boards normally meet once a year.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

Each Board of Governors has delegated most of its powers to twenty Executive Directors, who meet as often as required and approve all loans. The Executive Directors are responsible for matters of policy. Each of the five largest shareholders (France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom and the U.S.A.) appoints a single Executive Director. The remaining 15 are elected for two-year terms by the Governors for other members, each Governor casting the number of votes to which he is entitled. Each Director appoints his own alternate. In the case of the Governors elected by more than one member, the alternate is normally the Governor from another of the countries in the electing group.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE

The Bank's capital is derived from members' subscriptions to capital shares, the calculation of which is based on their quotas in the International Monetary Fund (see page 41). On June 30th, 1974, the total subscribed capital of the Bank was $30,431 million. Of this amount, however, only the sum of about $3,043 million had been paid in, partly in gold or dollars and partly in local currencies. The remainder is subject to call if required to meet the Bank's obligations. Most of the Bank's lendable funds come from its borrowing in world capital markets. As of June 30th, 1974, the Bank's outstanding debt was $9,636 million. The Bank also replenished its funds through the sale of portions of its loans. These sales, the most part without the Bank guarantee, totalled $2,577 million by June 30th, 1974.

ACTIVITIES

Financial operations: the World Bank approved development loans totalling $3,218 million during the year ended June 30th, 1974. The figure was higher than any previous year. As in the previous year, special attention was given to the need to distribute the benefits of development more widely, with particular emphasis on the poorest countries.

World Bank group operations play a marginal though vital role in the global development effort. During the year, the World Bank made 105 loans to 49 countries.

The Bank's operations were supported by a near record level of gross borrowings, which totalled $1,853 million during the year. The estimated distribution of holdings of the Bank's debt by countries at the end of the fiscal year was about 24 per cent held by investors in the U.S.A., 26 per cent in the Federal Republic of Germany, 17 per cent in Japan, 6 per cent in Switzerland and 5 per cent in Kuwait. The remaining 20 per cent was held principally by central banks in about 70 countries.

Technical Assistance: usually carried out in the process of arranging the loans and credits, as staff from the Bank usually help to prepare and supervise projects.

There is also increasing financial provision which may be included as part of a loan or credit. In fiscal 1974 $99 million was allocated for technical assistance, as elements in 112 loans and credits.

There have also been four Bank loans in the year for pre-investment work, which has previously been financed either through the IDA or other agencies.

Since 1967 it has been the Bank's policy to make grants for technical assistance only in exceptional circumstances. If aid from the UNDP or other sources is not available, or suitable, the Bank may provide a grant of up to $200,000; three such grants have been made, for planning work, in fiscal 1974.

The Bank also serves as an Executing Agency for the UNDP; in 1974, it has agreed to carry out 30 new projects for which the UNDP has committed $9.9 million. Priority has been given recently to UNDP projects in institution-building, and also to development planning.

Two of the UNDP projects are being undertaken by the Bank's Economic Development Institute (see below), in the Sudan and Zaire.

Economic Development Institute: founded 1955. Training is provided for government officials at the middle and upper levels of responsibility who are concerned with development programmes and projects. Courses are in national economic management and project analysis.

The EDI has become one of the most important of the Bank's activities in technical assistance. In its overseas courses, the aim is to build up local capability to conduct projects courses in future. By the end of the 1970s as many as half of those taking part in the EDI's courses in Washington should be teaching staff from institutions overseas.

About 250 Fellows graduate in a year at the Washington courses, of which eleven are offered in fiscal 1975; the Institute is holding courses in the Lebanon, Ivory Coast, Brazil, Kuwait and Malaysia, and also contributes sessions to courses held by national or regional bodies.

Director: ANDREW M. KAMARCK.

Consultative Group for International Agricultural Research (CGIAR): founded 1971 under the sponsorship of the World Bank, FAO and UNDP. The Bank is chairman of the group and provides its secretariat.

The group was formed to raise financial support for international agricultural research work for improving crops and animal production in the developing countries. It has a Technical Advisory Committee of 13 experts.

Six institutions doing fundamental research on crops are assisted by the group: the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) based in the Philippines; the International Wheat and Maize Improvement Centre (CIMMYT), based in Mexico; the International Potato Centre (CIP), based in Peru; the two International Institutes for Tropical Agriculture, based in Colombia (CIAT) and Nigeria (IITA); and the International Crops Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT), based in India.

United Nations (Specialized Agencies)

Additionally, four programmes to improve livestock production are being supported, at the International Laboratory for Research in Animal Diseases (ILRAD) in Nairobi, Kenya; at the International Livestock Centre for Africa, to be established in Ethiopia; at the West African Rice Development Association in Nigeria; and, at various centres mentioned above, information is exchanged by the International Board for Plant Genetic Resources.

A research effort in the Middle East and North Africa has been proposed.

Annual contributions from members of the Consultative Group amounted to approximately $34 million in 1974. Members: 29, including the sponsors, five governments representing the developing regions, 13 donor governments, and principal foundations and development banks.

Executive Secretary: HAROLD N. GRAVES.

Aid Co-ordinating Groups: the Bank has taken the lead in forming groups to co-ordinate financial and technical assistance to developing countries. By 1973, it was chairman of 16 aid co-ordination groups organized to assist Colombia, Ethiopia, Ghana, India, Kenya, the Republic of Korea, Morocco, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, the Philippines, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, Tanzania, Thailand, Tunisia, Uganda and Zaire.

Twenty-six donor countries have been associated with one or more of these groups. Where appropriate, various international agencies and regional development banks also participate.

During the fiscal year 1974 nine of these groups held formal meetings; and the Bank was also involved with the groups for Indonesia and Turkey.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION—IDA

1818 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20433, U.S.A.

Telephone: EXecutive 3-6360.

The International Development Association began operations in November 1960. Affiliated to the World Bank (see page 29) IDA advances capital to underdeveloped countries on more flexible terms than those offered by the Bank.

MEMBERSHIP

ORGANIZATION

President and Chairman of Executive Directors: Chairman of the World Bank (ex-officio).

Officers and staff of the World Bank serve concurrently as officers and staff of IDA.

FINANCE

IDA's initial resources consist of members' subscriptions; by June 30th, 1974 these amounted to $1,063.5 million. (All references to subscriptions and contributions are expressed in the U.S. dollar of 1960, unless otherwise indicated).

IDA is authorized to accept supplementary contributions from the more developed group among its members, known as the Part I countries—Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Kuwait, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the U.S.A. Switzerland makes loans to IDA, although it is not a member.

Voting rights of all members are in proportion to their subscriptions, while the supplementary contributions carry no voting rights.

These resources are replenished as necessary by contributions from the more affluent member countries. The third general replenishment, amounting to $2,442 million, was almost entirely committed in fiscal 1974, and the subscriptions and contributions agreed for the fourth general replenishment were to become payable on completion of the formalities at the end of December 1974. These amount to $4,500 million, for credits in the fiscal years 1975 to 1977.

ACTIVITIES

Principles similar to those of the World Bank are followed by IDA in appraising projects, negotiating its credits and in requirements for procurement, disbursement of funds and reports on the progress of constructions. However, the terms upon which IDA lends are far more favourable; almost all credits so far have been for a period of 50 years, with a 10-year initial grace period and no interest charge; only a service charge of 0.75 per cent per annum is made; credits can thus be extended to countries which, for balance of payments reasons, could not assume the burden of repayment required for World Bank loans.

By June 30th, 1974, IDA has extended 508 credits totalling $6,814.2 million to 66 member countries.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The highest authority of the Fund is exercised by the Board of Governors, on which each member country is represented by a Governor and an Alternate Governor. Normally the Board of Governors meets once a year, but the Governors may take votes by mail or other means between annual meetings. The Board of Governors has delegated many of its powers to the Executive Directors. However, the conditions governing the admission of new members, adjustment of quotas, election of Executive Directors, as well as certain other important powers remain the sole responsibility of the Board of Governors. The voting power of each member in the Board of Governors is related to its quota in the Fund (see below).

BOARD OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

The twenty-member Board of Executive Directors, responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Fund, is in continuous session in Washington, under the chairmanship of the Fund's Managing Director. At present, five members (the U.S.A., the United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, France and Japan) each appoint one Executive Director, and the fifteen remaining Executive Directors are elected by groups of member countries with similar interests. As in the Board of Governors, the voting power of each member is related to its quota in the Fund, but in practice the Executive Directors operate by consensus.

The Managing Director of the Fund serves as head of its staff, which is organized into departments by function and area. As at September 30th, 1974, the Fund staff numbered 1,403 persons of 91 nationalities.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE AND DRAWING ARRANGEMENTS

Quotas. Each member is assigned a quota related to its national income, monetary reserves, trade balance and other economic indicators. A member's subscription is equal to its quota and is payable partly in gold (as a rule 25 per cent) and partly in its own currency. The quota approximately determines a member's voting power, the amount of foreign exchange it may purchase from the Fund, and its allocation of special drawing rights (SDRs) if the member is a participant in the Fund's Special Drawing Account.

The original quotas totalled some $9,000 million, and on September 30th, 1974, total quotas stood at SDR29,200 million.

Drawing Arrangements. Exchange transactions within the Fund take the form of members' purchases (i.e. drawings) from the Fund of the currencies of other members for the equivalent amounts of their own currencies. Fund resources are available to eligible members on an essentially short-term and revolving basis to provide members with temporary assistance to contribute to the solution of their payments problems. A member's entitlement to draw is determined after consideration of its circumstances and its likely ability, with the help of Fund resources, to overcome its problems within a short time.

Drawings are limited by provisions governing both the rate of increase and the total amount of the Fund's holdings of a member's currency expressed as a percentage of its quota. Gold-tranche purchases (i.e. purchases that do not bring the Fund's holdings of the member's currency to a level above its quota) are permitted more or less automatically.

A member's purchases of currency from the Fund must be repaid by repurchases or by the purchase of that member's currency by another member. As a general rule members undertake to repay within a period not exceeding 3 to 5 years. The exceptions are in the case of extended arrangements or oil facility purchases. Repurchases are made in gold, in SDRs or in those convertible currencies that are held by the Fund in amounts below 75 per cent of the respective members' quotas.

The main devices for assisting members in temporary difficulties are examined below.

General Arrangements to Borrow. An agreement was approved by the Fund in 1962, and subsequently extended until 1980, whereby ten industrial members, the Group of Ten, undertook to lend the Fund up to $5.5 thousand million in their own currencies, should this be necessary to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary situation. These General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) may be used by any member, subject to the approval of the Group of Ten.

Stand-by Arrangements. Members may enter into Stand-by Arrangements (introduced in 1954) with the Fund to ensure that drawings up to specified limits may be made within an agreed period provided the conditions of the arrangement are observed. By enabling members to negotiate credit in advance of actual needs, stand-by arrangements have become a valuable instrument in forestalling speculative attacks which would exacerbate or increase impending difficulties.

Extended Arrangements. An extended facility was established in September 1974, to provide medium-term assistance for members in special circumstances of balance of payments difficulty. Whereas the usual duration of a stand-by arrangement does not exceed 12 months, with repayment within a period of 3 to 5 years, an extended arrangement provides assurance of support by the Fund for a period of up to 3 years, with repayment within a 4- to 8-year period. The extended facility is likely to be beneficial for developing countries in particular.

Special Drawing Rights. Facilities for the expansion of international reserves were created in January 1970 with the introduction of SDRs which have become established as usable and acceptable reserve assets and as a substitute for gold in international payments. The value of SDRs to a participant in the Special Drawing Account rests basically on the obligation of other participants to accept them from him up to a prescribed ceiling in exchange for convertible currency. Participants are allocated SDRs in proportion to their IMF quotas and may use them bilaterally, in agreement with other participants, to buy back from them equivalent amounts of their own currencies; or to obtain convertible currency from participants designated by the Fund. A participant may use SDRs in these ways when it has a balance of payments need or in the light of adverse developments in its total reserves; but it may make repurchases of its currency from, or pay charges to, the Fund without being subject to the requirement of need.

Reconstitution provisions—a participant's average holdings of SDRs must not fall below a given proportion of the average of its net cumulative allocation in a given period—are designed to preclude the possibility of excessive reliance on SDRs to finance large or persistent balance of payments deficits.

Compensatory Financing of Export Fluctuations. Under this scheme, a primary-producing member which experiences a fall in export revenue—generally as a result of adverse movements in the world price of a commodity upon which it is heavily dependent—may make drawings which are excluded from the calculation of its gold-tranche position.

Buffer Stock Financing Facility. Established in 1969, this facility permits members to make drawings in connection with the financing of international buffer stocks of primary products.

Oil Facility. An oil facility under which resources are made available to assist members in meeting the impact of increased costs of petroleum and petroleum products was established in June 1974. Borrowing agreements to finance the oil facility during 1974 were completed in August 1974, when seven lenders agreed to lend the Fund up to the equivalent of SDR 2,800 million. By the end of October 1974, 26 member countries had made purchases under the oil facility totalling the equivalent of SDR 854.23 million.

ACTIVITIES DURING 1974

REFORM OF THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY SYSTEMInterim Committee

The Committee on the Reform of the International Monetary System and Related Issues was succeeded by an Interim Committee of the Board of Governors. Its task is to advise the Board of Governors on the management and adaptation of the international monetary system, to review developments in global liquidity and the transfer of real resources to developing countries and deal with sudden disturbances that might threaten the system. It will serve until a permanent Council of Governors with decision-making powers can be established.

Chairman: JOHN TURNER (Canada).

Development Committee

A Joint World Bank/Fund Committee, the Development Committee, was established; it will survey the development process and advise and report to the Boards of Governors of the Bank and the Fund on all aspects of the transfer of real resources to developing countries; it will make suggestions for action.

Chairman: HENRI KONAN BEDIE (Ivory Coast).

Amendments to the Articles of Agreement

Amendments proposed concern matters such as discouraging countries from setting up barriers to trade for balance of payments reasons, the "Link" between SDR allocation and development assistance, the establishment of a permanent Council of Governors, and the amendment of the present provisions concerning gold.

INITIAL PAR VALUES, PAR VALUE CHANGES

During the first nine months of the year initial par values for the United Arab Emirate dirham and the rial Omani were established with the Fund. The United Arab Emirates and Oman also agreed to avoid imposing restrictions on payments for current international transactions, or engaging in multiple exchange practices or discriminatory arrangements. Changes in par value were carried out with the concurrence of the Fund for the currencies of Costa Rica and Israel.

GENERAL ACCOUNT

Drawings on the Fund's General Account during the first nine months of 1974 totalled SDR 2,623.5 million, while repurchases totalled SDR 537.6 million. Total drawings since the beginning of Fund operations reached SDR 28,876.0 million at the end of September 1974, with repurchases totalling SDR 16,588.4 million. Stand-by arrangements were in effect for 10 countries totalling SDR 1,230.5 million.

SPECIAL DRAWING ACCOUNT

Valuation

For an interim period, a revised method of determining the exchange rate in SDRs for a currency was adopted: one SDR being equal to a unit related to relative values of currencies. The currencies initially included are those of the 16 countries that had a share in world exports of goods and services in excess of one per cent on average over the 5-year period 1968-72. The new valuation became effective on July 1st, 1974, and the Fund has since released daily the exchange rate for the SDR in terms of currencies.

Transactions

In transactions between participants during the first nine months of 1974, a total of SDR 708.9 million was used by 17 participants to obtain currency. During the same period the Fund's General Account received SDR 15.2 million in repurchases and SDR 28.5 million from participants in payment of charges relating to their use of the Fund's resources. In addition, the General Account received SDR 7.8 million as interest on its SDR holdings for the year ended April 30th, 1974, and SDR 1.0 million as reimbursement for the expenses of conducting the business of the Special Drawing Account.

The General Account transferred SDR 80.0 million to participants during the first three quarters of 1974. A total of SDR 70.2 million was acquired in order to promote reconstitution of participants' SDR holdings and SDR 6.4 million was transferred to those participants which elected to receive SDRs in payment of remuneration on their net creditor positions in the General Account for the fiscal year ended April 30th, 1974.

The General Account's holdings of SDRs at September 30th, 1974, were SDR 480.1 million.

FAO, the first specialized agency of the UN to be founded, was established in Quebec in October 1945. The Organization fights malnutrition and hunger and serves as an organizing and co-ordinating agency which brings together representatives of national governments, scientific bodies, non-governmental organizations, industry and banking to plan and carry out development programmes in the whole range of food and agriculture, including forestry and fisheries. It helps developing countries to promote educational and training facilities and institution-building.

THE WORLD FOOD SITUATION, DECEMBER 1974

At the end of 1974 the world food situation continued to be critical. Optimistic forecasts of record cereal harvests in North America had to be scaled down. Cereal crops in the U.S.S.R. and the Far East appeared to have fallen far short of the high levels reached in 1973. Thus, in spite of substantial gains in Africa, western Europe, Latin America and the Near East, world cereal production fell in 1974, for the second time in three years. The decline was estimated at 40 to 50 million tons against the need for a yearly increase of 25 million tons to keep up with the population growth.

Total world food production during 1974 appeared to have increased very little, if at all. There were substantial declines in the two regions where the food supply has the greatest importance: North America, the largest exporter of food, and the Far East, where most of the world's malnourished people are concentrated.

With the continued shortage of food, especially staple cereals, the situation of essentials for food production remained critical: shortages and high prices of chemical fertilizers continued, important pesticides were increasingly hard to procure, and a number of countries faced shortages of fuel and power for irrigation pumping.

Encouraging forecasts were received from India, where rains improved sowing conditions for grain crops due for harvesting in March 1975. Good sowing conditions for the 1974-75 winter crops were reported from U.S.A. and U.S.S.R.

ACTIVITIES IN 1974

The UN World Food Conference. The UN World Food Conference, for which FAO provided much of the basic servicing, took place in Rome in November 1974. It decided on action on the critical food situation: increased food production in developed and developing countries, improved consumption patterns and distribution, and a worldwide system of food security.

On the first point, the conference called for an International Fund for Agricultural Development to channel investment into agriculture in the developing world, contributions to be volunteered by the traditional donor countries and rich developing countries. An ultimate target of $5,000 million was proposed.

On the second point, the conference approved a commitment to provide a minimum of ten million tons of cereals as food aid each year beginning in 1975 and recommended a Committee on Food Aid Policies and Programmes to help co-ordinate national and multilateral efforts.

Thirdly, the conference recommended an International Undertaking on World Food Security, under which 57 developed and developing countries acknowledged that food security is a common responsibility of the entire international community. FAO's present early warning services will be expanded into a Global Information System on current trends in production and stocks, prices, export availabilities and import requirements.

The conference decided on the establishment of a World Food Council as a UN organ to co-ordinate the activities of agencies dealing with agriculture, serviced within the framework of FAO. It will be kept up-to-date on the progress of financial and technical assistance to agricultural production in developing countries by a consultative group on food production and investment in developing countries. The consultative group will be composed of bilateral and multilateral donors and representatives of developing countries, and will be staffed jointly by the World Bank, FAO and the UN Development Programme (UNDP). The FAO Council is also to set up a new Standing Committee on World Food Security.

Field Programmes. Approximately three-quarters of the funds received by FAO are spent on field activities and the largest source of finance is the UN Development Programme (UNDP). In 1974, about $72 million in UNDP funds were disbursed in some 550 large-scale and 800 small-scale projects which eventually will involve a total outlay of $465 million.

The FAO/Government Co-operative Programmes, through which donor countries channel part of their development aid funds through FAO, expanded. The 137 projects executed under such bilateral and multilateral arrangements represented a total value of $37.5 million, of which new projects approved in 1974 accounted for $18 million. Belgium, Kuwait, and the Arab Fund for Economic and Social Development contributed to Trust Fund projects for the first time, while Norway, Sweden and Switzerland expanded their participation. Oil-producing countries in the Near East contributed to large-scale projects, and further projects are in the stage of negotiation with the Gulf States.

In 1974, Israel and U.S.A. pledged their support to the Associate Expert Scheme, whereby donor countries finance the assignment of qualified young specialists to FAO, mainly for operational tasks in the field. Over 370 young men and women were in post at the end of the year, and recruitment was proceeding for another 100.

FAO assisted the United Nations Children's Fund in 114 countries, with technical support in food policy, applied nutrition activities at the family and community levels, production of protein-rich food, and development of community water supplies.

Co-operating with the UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control, FAO assumed full responsibility for a project which included an aerial survey of the hashish (cannabis) areas in Lebanon, and the promotion of sunflower cultivation as a substitute crop.

Sudan-Sahelian Relief Operations. Governments, international agencies and private organizations responded generously to the appeals made by FAO and UN for the six countries of the drought-stricken Sahel region: Chad, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal, Upper Volta. The Office for the Sahelian Relief Operation (OSRO) reported that contributions had included 1,137,000 tons of foodgrain, 49,600 tons of protective foods, 364 vehicles and over $10 million to the OSRO Trust Fund.

FAO services to agro-industrial development. These included agricultural engineering and farm management and ranged from participation in a $120 million project for control of river blindness in the Volta river basin and resettlement of the fertile riverine banks to the despatch of more than 11,000 samples of seed and other propagation material from the Organization's Seed Laboratory. The number of large-scale FAO forestry projects financed by UNDP rose from 11 in 1966 to 90 in 1974 with a budget of $62 million spread over two to five years. FAO provided operational assistance to fishery development through projects employing over 200 international experts. The FAO Fishery Committee for the Eastern Central Atlantic approved a four-year multi-million dollar project for the development and rational management of fish resources in the area from Gibraltar to the mouth of the Congo river.

Assistance in plant production and protection was directed towards improvement of grazing resources in arid areas, practical measures to secure seed improvement, expansion of food and industrial crops, and the war on plant diseases and pests.

FAO played a co-ordinating role in supporting international efforts to develop livestock industries, expand meat and dairy production, explore new sources of feed, and eliminate non-tariff barriers to the international meat trade. With the financial support of the European Economic Community and the FAO European Commission for the Control of Foot-and-Mouth disease, FAO was instrumental in arranging the supply and distribution of more than two million doses of vaccine and 30 jeeps for vaccine teams in Bulgaria, Cyprus, Greece and Turkey.

FAO organized 3,000 fertilizer trials and 6,000 demonstrations and set up an International Fertilizer Scheme to deal with urgent short-term requirements and to encourage local production of fertilizer in developing countries. Alternative sources of plant nutrients such as animal and human waste, peat and sewage were investigated. Plans are under way for soil monitoring, conservation projects and the publication of a World Map of Soil Degradation.

Large-scale field operations aimed at river management and irrigation and ground-water development are proceeding in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Freedom from Hunger/Action for Development. The FFH/AD programme aims to improve public awareness of development issues through local groups which encourage personal involvement. It provides facilities for study, research, discussion and action. Some one hundred FFH/AD National Committees concern themselves with the quality of aid and its effect on rural population, the need for institutional changes, innovations in education. Millions of dollars have been raised in both the Third World and in the industrialized countries to support self-help projects.

Investing in Development. 1974 was the tenth year of FAO's co-operation with the World Bank. During the decade, 140 projects prepared in FAO's Investment Centre in conjunction with 66 developing countries were approved for financing through loans and credits amounting to some $2,000 million. From January to mid-October 1974, projects formulated by FAO in 18 countries led to loans and credits totalling $420 million from the World Bank group (compared with $287 million in 1973). This included a $52 million loan to India.

Under the FAO/World Bank Co-operative Programme,

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

the International Development Association granted a $17 million interest-free credit to Burma.

FAO was given full responsibility to prepare some of the investment projects of the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), the African Development Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

Industry Co-operative Programms. A meeting of the Industry Co-operative Programme (ICP)—the United Nations programme for relating industry's managerial skills, technology and financial resources to agro-industrial development—was held in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in close co-operation with the UN Economic Commission for Africa (ECA).

The projects, some already in operation, include a research consortium programme in the Amazon area of Brazil, production of tomato paste and pulp and paper in Cameroon, maize cropping in Dahomey, edible oil development in Liberia, a food packaging plant and the use of diesel engines for the fishing industry in Sri Lanka, and the manufacture of pulp and mixed tropical hardwood in Venezuela.

At the invitation of the Secretary-General of the UN World Food Conference, ICP organized a preliminary Consultation of Agro-Industrial leaders in Toronto (September 1974) which was attended by 150 senior executives from 18 developed and 10 developing countries and officials of six UN agencies.

The Programme now numbers 100 member companies from 17 industrialized nations.

GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE—GATT

Villa le Bocage, Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 60 11, 31 02 11.

Established in 1948 to achieve a substantial reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade.

CONTRACTING PARTIES TO THE GATT

ORGANIZATION

(as of October 1973)

SESSIONS

Chairman (1973-74): H. KITAHARA (Japan).

The sessions of Contracting Parties are usually held annually, in Geneva.

The Session is the highest body of GATT. Decisions are generally arrived at by consensus, not by vote. On the rare occasions that voting takes place, each contracting party (member country) has one vote. Most decisions by vote are taken by simple majority; but a two-thirds majority, with the majority comprising more than half the member countries, is needed for "waivers", authorizations, in particular cases, to depart from specific obligations under the General Agreement. (When the members thus act collectively, they are referred to in GATT documents as CONTRACTING PARTIES). Outside the Sessions, votes may be taken by postal ballot.

COUNCIL OF REPRESENTATIVES

Chairman (1973-74): P. LAI (Malaysia).

Meets as necessary (generally about eight times a year) to deal with urgent and routine matters arising between sessions and to supervise the work of committees and working groups.

SECRETARIAT

Director-General: OLIVIER LONG (Switzerland).

The secretariat, numbering about 200 persons, consists of experts in trade policy and intelligence and an administrative staff. It prepares and runs the Sessions and services the work of the Council and the committees and working groups. It is also responsible for organizing the trade negotiations.

COMMITTEES AND WORKING PARTIES

A Trade Negotiations Committee was set up in September 1973 to direct the current "Tokyo Round" trade negotiations; it is expected to establish subsidiary bodies as necessary.

Standing committees exist to direct GATT work on industrial products; on agriculture; on trade and development issues; to carry on trade negotiations among developing countries; to examine the situation of countries using trade restrictions to protect their balance of payments; and to study import restrictions. There are further standing committees on cotton textiles and on anti-dumping practices as well as a committee to deal with budget, financial and administrative questions.

Working parties (ad hoc committees) are set up to deal with current questions, such as requests for accession to GATT; verification that agreements concluded by member countries are in conformity with GATT; or studies of issues on which the member countries will later wish to take a joint decision. Panels of Conciliation are sometimes set up to investigate disputes.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE CENTRE UNCTAD/GATT

Villa le Bocage, Palais des Nations, Geneva

Director (Promotions): HERBERT L. JACOBSON (U.S.A.).

Director (Programmes): V. E. SANTIAPILLAI.

Established by GATT in May 1964 to assist the developing countries in their export trade by providing information on export markets and marketing, and helping them both to develop their export promotion services and to train the personnel required for these services.

The Centre has been jointly operated since January 1968 by GATT and UNCTAD.

The centre's services at present comprise four main sectors: Market Information Service; Publications Programme; Trade Promotion Advisory Service; Training Programme.

AIMS

GATT is a multilateral treaty which lays down agreed rules for the conduct and furtherance of world trade and is accepted by countries responsible for over four-fifths of that trade. GATT provides a forum in which governments can negotiate for the further liberalization of world trade and in which differences on trade matters among the members can be settled. It is designed to achieve the objectives set out in the preamble to the Agreement where the Contracting Parties recognize that "their relations in the field of trade and economic endeavour should be conducted with a view to raising standards of living, ensuring full employment and a large and steadily growing volume of real income and effective demand, developing the full use of the resources of the world and expanding the production and exchange of goods, and promoting the progressive development of the economies of all the Contracting Parties."

THE AGREEMENT

GATT is based on a comparatively few fundamental principles. First, as directed in the famous "most-favoured-nation" clause, trade must be conducted on the basis of non-discrimination: all Contracting Parties are bound to grant to each other treatment as favourable as they give to any country in the application and administration of import and export duties and charges. Exceptions—principally for customs unions and free trade areas and for measures in favour of developing countries—are granted only subject to strict rules.

Second, protection should be given to domestic industry only through the customs tariff. The aim of this rule is to make the extent of protection clear and to make competition possible.

Third, a stable and predictable basis for trade is provided by the binding of the tariff levels negotiated among the Contracting Parties. These bound items are listed for each country in tariff schedules which form an integral part of the General Agreement. A return to higher tariffs is discouraged by the requirement that any increases are accounted for; consequently this provision is invoked rarely.

Consultation, to avoid damage to the trading interests of Contracting Parties, is another fundamental principle of GATT. Members are able to call on GATT for a fair settlement of cases in which they think their rights under the General Agreement are being withheld or compromised by other members.

There are "waiver" procedures whereby a country may, when its economic or trade circumstances so warrant, seek a derogation from a particular GATT obligation or obligations. There are also escape provisions for emergency action in certain defined circumstances.

Finally, GATT offers a framework within which negotiations are held for the reduction of tariffs and other barriers to trade and a structure for putting the results of such negotiations into a legal instrument.

ACTIVITIES

(to October 1973)

During GATT's first 25 years, six major trade negotiations took place under its auspices: in 1947 (in Geneva), in 1949 (Annecy, France), 1951 (Torquay, England), 1956 (Geneva), 1960-61 (Geneva, the "Dillon Round"), and 1964-67 (Geneva, the "Kennedy Round"). In addition, smaller-scale negotiations preceded the accession to GATT of certain countries. As a result, the tariff rates for thousands of items entering into world commerce were reduced, or bound against increase. The Kennedy Round negotiations alone reduced the average level of world industrial tariffs by about one-third. The concessions agreed upon in these negotiations have affected a high proportion of the total trade of GATT countries, and, indirectly, the trade of many non-members as well.

In September 1973, representatives of 102 nations, meeting at Ministerial level in Tokyo, launched new multilateral trade negotiations in GATT, with the intention of completing them in 1975. The Ministers decided that the negotiations, which will be largely based on technical preparations undertaken in GATT since 1967, should cover tariffs, non-tariff barriers and other measures which impede or distort international trade in both industrial and agricultural products, including tropical products and raw materials, whether in primary form or at any stage of processing, and that they will include, in particular, product of export interest to developing countries and measures affecting their exports.

In addition it was agreed that developing countries would participate on special terms, and that the negotiations should "aim to secure additional benefits for the international trade of developing countries so as to achieve a substantial increase in their foreign exchange earnings, the diversification of their exports, the acceleration of the rate of growth of their trade, taking into account their development needs, an improvement in the possibilities for these countries to participate in the expansion of world trade and a better balance as between developed and developing countries in the sharing of the advantages resulting from this expansion".

Eighty-three countries, including 19 developing countries not members of GATT, had by November 1973 announced their intention to negotiate.

The trade problems of developing countries have received increasing attention in GATT in recent years. In 1965 a new chapter on Trade and Development was added to the General Agreement; a key provision is that developing countries should not be expected to offer reciprocity in negotiations with developed countries. GATT members have also relaxed the "most-favoured-nation" rule to accommodate the Generalized Scheme of Preferences by developed for developing countries and to allow an exchange of preferential tariff reductions among developing countries.

Since 1962 an Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Cotton Textiles, concluded under GATT auspices, has regulated trade among some 30 major exporting and importing countries. At the end of 1973, negotiations were in progress to replace the Arrangement with a new agreement covering textiles not only of cotton but also of other fibres.

Payments are based on each member's share of the total trade between members. Contributions for 1973 totalled Swiss Francs 21,261,000.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION—ILO

1211 Geneva 22, Switzerland

The ILO was founded in 1919 to work for social justice as a basis for lasting peace. It carries out this mandate by promoting decent living standards, satisfactory conditions of work and pay and adequate employment opportunities. Methods of action include the creation of international labour standards; the provision of technical co-operation services; and research and publications on social and labour matters. In 1946, the Organisation became a specialized agency associated with the UN. The ILO was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1969.

private and public enterprises, trade union leaders, and technicians, primarily from the developing regions of the world. The ILO Director-General is Chairman of the Board of the Centre.

Director: (acting) RAYMOND S. MILNE (New Zealand).

ACTIVITIES

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR STANDARDS

One of the ILO's primary functions is the adoption by the International Labour Conference of Conventions and Recommendations setting minimum labour standards. Through ratification by member states, Conventions create binding obligations to put their provisions into effect. Recommendations provide guidance as to policy and practice. A total of 140 Conventions and 148 Recommendations have been adopted, ranging over a wide field of social and labour matters, including basic human rights such as freedom of association, abolition of forced labour and elimination of discrimination in employment. Together they form the International Labour Code. By November 1974 more than 4,000 ratifications of the Conventions had been registered by member states.

TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION

Technical co-operation continued to be a major ILO activity. More than $35.7 million from all sources, including the United Nations Development Programme, was spent in 1973 for the promotion of employment, the development of human resources and social institutions, and the improvement of living and working conditions. Of the total figure, 2.7 million was provided by bilateral aid agencies, and $1.9 million by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities. Regional distribution of expenditure in 1973 was as follows: Africa, $15.5 million; Latin America and the Caribbean, $5.8 million; Asia, $8.5 million; Europe, $1.46 million; Middle East, $2.15 million; inter-regional projects, $2.3 million.

WORLD EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMME

The employment objective has been incorporated by the United Nations as a key policy factor into the Second United Nations Development Decade. The ILO has the role of catalyst in bringing employment considerations to the fore in the activities of all agencies within the UN system, and for this purpose launched the World Employment Programme.

The aim of the programme is to assist decision makers in identifying and putting into effect specific employment-promoting development policies. This is accomplished through comprehensive employment strategy missions and exploratory country employment missions; through regional employment teams for Africa, Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean; and through country employment teams.

The programme also includes action oriented research activities which at this stage cover eight major project areas: technology and employment, income distribution and employment, population and employment, education and training and employment, rural employment promotion, urbanisation and employment, trade expansion and employment, and emergency employment schemes.

MEETINGS

Among meetings scheduled for 1975, besides those of the International Labour Conference and the Governing Body, are the following: Asian Regional Conference; Meeting of Experts on Migrant Workers; Joint Committee on the Public Service; Iron and Steel Committee; Chemical Industries Committee; Tripartite Advisory Meeting on Collective Bargaining.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

The 58th session, held in June 1973, adopted a Convention and a Recommendation on the minimum age for admission to employment and a Convention and Recommendation on the social repercussions of new methods of cargo handling in docks. It held a first discussion on the control and prevention of occupational cancer and on the right to paid educational leave. Presidents Kekkonen of Finland and Bourguiba of Tunisia addressed the Conference, which was attended by about 1,400 delegates, advisers and observers from 119 nations.

The 59th session took place in Geneva in June 1974 and considered the final adoption of international labour standards on occupational cancer and a Convention and Recommendation on paid educational leave. It held a first discussion on the protection of migrant workers, on promotion of rural workers' organizations, and on modernization of standards in vocational guidance and training.

The 60th session of the International Labour Conference will take place in Geneva in June 1975 and will consider the final adoption of international labour standards on protection of migrant workers, promotion of rural workers' organizations, and modernization of standards in vocational guidance and training. It will also discuss equality of opportunity and treatment for women workers, and the establishment of tripartite machinery to improve the implementation of ILO standards.

PLAN COMMITTEES

The Plan Committees are joint CCIR/CCITT committees responsible for preparing plans setting out circuit and routing requirements for international telecommunications and for giving estimates of the growth of international traffic. They comprise a World Plan Committee and four regional committees, for Africa, for Latin America, for Asia and Oceania and for Europe and the Mediterranean Basin.

A meeting of the World Plan Committee was held in Venice in October 1971, and the Regional Plan Committee for Asia met in Tokyo, Japan, in October 1974.

TORREMOLINOS CONFERENCE, 1973

Conditions of membership were examined. The Conference deleted the reference to "groups of territories" contained in the preceding Convention and abolished the Status of "Associate Member" given to territories or groups of territories not fully responsible for their international relations. Rhodesia was also deleted from the list of Members.

The new Convention came into force on January 1st, 1975.

TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION

ITU's programme of technical co-operation in developing countries is carried out within the framework of UNDP.

In 1973, 326 experts were on mission, 457 fellows were undergoing training abroad and $2,144,848 worth of equipment was delivered. The total cost of this assistance amounted to $10,742,667.

The three main objectives of ITU's activity in the field of technical co-operation continued to be: (a) promoting the development of regional telecommunication networks in Africa, Asia and Latin America; (b) strengthening telecommunications technical and administrative services in developing countries; and (c) developing the human resources required for telecommunications.

Fifty-five per cent of the Union's field experts were directly engaged in the training of telecommunication personnel in developing countries as organizers, advisers, lecturers or instructors.

The expenses incurred in connection with the training of telecommunication staff in 1973 represented approximately two-thirds of the total cost of the ITU field programme.

Considerable assistance was also provided by ITU in the specialized fields of telephony, telegraphy, radio-communications, frequency management, satellite communications, planning, organization, administration and management.

CONVENTION

The International Telecommunications Convention is the definitive convention of the Union, member countries being those who signed it in 1932 or acceded to it later. Since 1932 it has been superseded by new versions at six plenipotentiary conferences.

The Convention deals with the structure of the Union, the application of its own provisions and regulations, relations with the United Nations and other organizations, and special rules for radio.

REGULATIONS ANNEXED TO THE CONVENTION*TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE

The Telegraph and Telephone Regulations were adopted during the 1973 Geneva Telegraph and Telephone Conference. They deal with problems of telegraph and telephone rates and tariffs among ITU Member countries. These two Regulations lay down the rules to be observed in the international telephone service. Their provisions are applied to both wire and wireless telegraph and telephone communications so far as the Radio Regulations and the Additional Radio Regulations do not provide otherwise.

RADIO

The Radio Regulations include general rules for the assignment and use of frequencies and—the most important part of the Regulations—a Table of Frequency Allocations between 10 kHz and 275 GHz to the various radio services; broadcasting, television, radio astronomy, navigation aid, point-to-point service, maritime mobile, amateur, etc. Chapter III deals with the duties of the International Frequency Registration Board. The Regulations governing measures against interference follow. Subsequently, there are the administrative provisions for stations (secrecy, licences, identification, service documents, inspection of mobile stations).

Chapters VI and VII are concerned with personnel and working conditions in the mobile services, and Chapter VIII with radio assistance in life saving. The last two chapters deal with radiotelegrams and radiotelephone calls and miscellaneous stations and services. Partial revisions of the Radio Regulations are in force for Space Services (1965, 1973), the Aeronautical Mobile Services (1967), and the Maritime Mobile Service (1969, 1974).

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION—UNESCO

7 & 9 place de Fontenoy, 75700 Paris, France

Telephone: 566 57-57.

UNESCO was established in 1945 "for the purpose of advancing, through the educational, scientific and cultural relations of the peoples of the world, the objectives of international peace and the common welfare of mankind".

FUNCTIONS

In practice, UNESCO's activities take three main forms: encouraging international intellectual co-operation; operational assistance to its 135 member states; and the promotion of peace, human rights and mutual understanding among peoples. These activities are funded through a regular budget provided by member states and also through other sources, particularly the UNDP.

International Intellectual Co-operation

International intellectual co-operation is the basis of all UNESCO's work and involves the communication of knowledge, the comparison of experience and the exchange of ideas through a wide network of specialists. Apart from its professional staff, UNESCO can call upon educators, scientists, artists, writers and sociologists in national associations and international federations which regularly work with it and some of which it helped to establish. Typical activities include the convening of some hundred conferences and meetings a year; the co-ordination of international scientific efforts through mechanisms such as the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission; standardization of documentation procedures; providing clearing house services; provision of fellowships; and the publication of a wide range of specialized works including source books and works of reference. They also include the promotion of international agreements, for example the Universal Copyright Convention, which member states are invited to accept.

Operational Assistance

A major part of UNESCO's efforts have been devoted to operational assistance since the 1960s, when large numbers of newly independent nations joined the Organization and sought its help on development projects. Such help takes the form of expertise provided by missions which advise governments when projects are being planned and day-to-day technical assistance given by international experts posted to the projects when they become operational. Operational assistance ranges over projects such as functional literacy of workers involved in development undertakings; teacher training; the establishment of libraries and documentation centres; provision of training for journalists, radio, television and film workers, and improvement of scientific and technical education through to the training of planners in cultural development.

Promotion of Peace

Recognizing that "Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed", all UNESCO's activities are aimed at contributing to the promotion of peace, human rights and mutual understanding but a number are specifically directed to these objectives. Scientific research on problems of race is promoted by the Organization, which has also waged a continuous struggle against discrimination in education and undertaken programmes to improve the access for women to education. It has commissioned studies on various aspects of human rights and, through the associated schools which take part in its youth programme, has promoted activities to increase knowledge of international problems and improve mutual understanding.

ACTIVITIES IN 1973

UNESCO's programme of activities is wide, embracing continuing action, such as the provision of fellowships and the publication of around 200 issues of periodicals and more than 100 new publications yearly, as well as fixed-term projects. Around 130 conferences, ministerial meetings and specialized seminars are held every year and UNESCO maintains close relations with 188 non-governmental organizations, some of which carry out projects for specific parts of the Organization's programme.

Education. The aim of combining continuity with the flexibility to meet new needs can be seen in the education programme: continuity is shown by the maintained priorities and flexibility by a number of new measures designed to tackle the problems made clear by experience.

The priority which education still receives is shown by the budget figures: of $98,982,750 voted by the seventeenth General Conference for programme operations and services, $38,747,400 was allocated to the education sector, which was more than any other sector's allocation.

As its increasing involvement with pre-primary training shows, UNESCO regards education as a lifelong process; this "master concept", accepted after investigations around the world by the International Commission on the Development of Education, increasingly shaped UNESCO's projects and the planning of its Member States.

The need for rethinking and planning in education is reflected in the activities undertaken. For example, in November 1973, UNESCO convened a Conference of European ministers of education in Bucharest to consider changes in structures, curricula and methods in higher education. In 1974 preparations were made for a conference of education officials from the 25 "least developed" countries.

UNESCO continued to help member states in the development of national education policies and programmes for training abroad, through sending expert missions and granting study fellowships.

The 1973-74 biennium was to see the conclusion of the pilot projects undertaken by UNESCO in 12 countries to test methods of functional literacy instruction and the evaluation of the results with a view to introducing literacy components into economic development projects.

Work continued in assisting member states to develop education in their rural regions and studies were made on the access to education and employment for women in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Arab States.

Science. The worldwide shift in concern away from the growth of science and, towards the array of problems generated by such growth is reflected in UNESCO's programme for 1975-76 in the natural sciences and their application to development.

Because the majority of UNESCO member states are developing nations whose first priority is to get more of the benefits of science and technology, the network of regional offices has grown recently.

These offices aim to increase local participation in the work of UNESCO. A budget of $20,285,000 was voted for science activities in 1975-76.

Developing nations will be the first to benefit from a World Science Information System (UNISIST) launched in 1973 to try to keep up with the flood of two million books and articles turned out by the world's scientists and engineers every year. UNISIST will aim to improve links between existing information systems rather than set up yet another one.

Underlying the entire science programme is a new effort of introspection that has been termed "Science in the 1970s: the human implications of scientific advance".

To face up to charges that science and the technologies have caused the population explosion, an environmental crisis, a wasteful attitude towards world resources, social alienation and an increasingly problematic future for man, studies were launched as "Science in the 70s", a volume to review recent scientific advances and the problems they pose.

In its programme on "Man and the Biosphere", UNESCO runs 13 projects for scientific co-operation. These range from the "ecological effects of increasing human activities on tropical and subtropical forest ecosystems" to "the effects on man and his environment of major engineering works".

In these and other activities, UNESCO called on outside expertise, working for example through member associations of the International Council of Scientific Unions.

The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission based in UNESCO initiated a global investigation of pollution in the marine environment, and mounted an Integrated Global Ocean Station System intended to provide the kind of information about the sea that weather bureaux now supply about the atmosphere.

Also in the environmental sciences an International Geological Correlation Programme was launched in co-operation with the International Union of Geological Sciences.

UNESCO continued its assistance to member states in the realm of planning, offering post-graduate training programmes in the basic sciences, along with aid in research of particular relevance to the developing world, such as in the use of solar energy as a pollution-free source of power.

Culture. Having been regarded for generations as a luxury activity reserved for an élite, culture is now looked on as a necessity for everybody: this new concept lies behind the programme started in 1973, when the first Asian intergovernmental conference on cultural policies was held in Yogyakarta.

United Nations (Specialized Agencies)

UNESCO's Secretariat aimed to encourage the training of specialists of a new kind: planners in the field of cultural development, arts administrators and organizers of cultural events took steps to promote the establishment of two pilot centres, one in a developing country, the other in an industrialized state.

Studies were initiated on the situation of the artist in the modern world and of the problems of artistic creation and the nature and the forms this can take thanks to the means made available by modern technology. UNESCO continued its work of diffusing cultural works by publishing catalogues of colour reproductions, sending out travelling exhibitions of reproductions of great works of art, bringing out the Index Translationum (an international list of translations) and by supporting a programme of translation of important works of world literature.

The study of current trends forms part of a programme of studies on Asian, Arab, Latin-American, European and African cultures which UNESCO has been carrying out since 1966. A number of experts are co-operating on an eight volume General History of Africa. In 1973 a ten-year programme was started to promote African languages and oral traditions with two inter-connected aims: collecting and studying oral traditions to increase knowledge of African thought, institutions and values; promotion of African languages as instruments of cultural development and of lifelong education.

Preliminary studies were begun on the problems of exchanges of works of art between different countries and the preservation of historic quarters or cities in a modern environment. Two expert committees examined measures to protect works of art against theft and to improve insurance arrangements.

Preserving the cultural heritage continued as a priority aim; the project to transfer the threatened temples of Philae, Egypt, and the international campaigns to save Borobudur, Indonesia, and Moenjodaro, Pakistan, are both in progress.

Communication. In this field, 1974 saw the continuation of a programme to stimulate the production and reading of books which followed up the impetus given by International Book Year 1972. Among activities undertaken were the creation of an inter-professional committee of publishers, authors, librarians and booksellers at the international level to promote co-operation in this programme.

The Organization continued to advise member states on the development of national library, documentation and archives services, expert missions paying particular attention to mechanization. It expanded its own computerized documentation service and held its first seminar on the use of this service. There is also an international information system for research in documentation (ISORID). Member states are encouraged to set up national information transfer centres to co-operate with the system.

Assistance to member states in the field of communication research, policies and planning continued, and an international programme of communication research went forward under the advice of an international advisory panel. Encouragement of the exchange of information and documentation on communication was continued through information centres, seven of which have now been set up.

In 1974 a major communication training project was completed in India, and another one began. Equipment was provided for the Indian Institute of Film and Television, for a television training centre at which 200 production specialists and technicians can be trained per year.

An international conference held in 1974 by UNESCO adopted a convention on the distribution of programmes broadcast via satellites.

UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION—UPU

3000 Berne 15, Switzerland

Telephone: (031) 43 22 11.

By the Treaty of Berne, 1874, the General Postal Union was founded, beginning operations in July 1875. Three years later its name was changed to the Universal Postal Union. In 1948 UPU became a Specialized Agency of UN.

MEMBERSHIP

(see Table on pages 26-28)

ORGANIZATION

(as of December 1974)

CONGRESS

The Supreme body of the Union is Congress which meets every five years. Its duties are legislative and consist mainly of revision of the Acts. Seventeen Congresses have been held, and the eighteenth is to be held in Brazil in 1979.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Between Congresses, an Executive Council, created by the Paris Congress 1947, meets annually at Berne. It is composed of 40 member countries of the Union elected by Congress on the basis of an equitable geographical distribution. It ensures continuity of the Union's work in the interval between Congresses, supervises the activities of the International Bureau, undertakes studies, draws up proposals, and makes recommendations to the Congress. It is responsible for encouraging, supervising and co-ordinating international co-operation in the form of postal technical assistance and vocational training.

CONSULTATIVE COUNCIL FOR POSTAL STUDIES

At the Ottawa Congress 1957 a Consultative Committee for Postal Studies was established, which, at the Tokyo Congress 1969, became the Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS), whose 35 member countries meet annually, in principle at Berne. It is responsible for organizing studies of major problems affecting postal administrations in all UPU member countries, in the technical operations and economic fields and in the sphere of technical co-operation. The CCPS also provides information and opinions on these matters, and examines teaching and training problems arising in the new and developing countries.

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU

The day-to-day administrative work of UPU is executed through a permanent organ called the International Bureau stationed at Berne. It serves as an instrument of liaison, information and consultation for the postal administration of the member countries, provides secretarial services for UPU bodies and promotes technical assistance.

Director-General of the International Bureau: MOHAMED IBRAHIM SOBHI (Egypt).

AIMS AND FUCTIONS

The essential principles of the Union are the following:

1. Formation of one single postal territory.
2. Unification of postal charges and weight steps.
3. Non-sharing of postage paid for ordinary letters between the sender country and the country of destination.
4. Guarantee of freedom of transit.

5. Settlement of disputes by arbitration.

6. Establishment of a central office under the name of the International Bureau paid for by all members.

7. Periodical meeting of Congresses.

8. Promotion of the development of international postal services and postal technical assistance to Union members.

The common rules applicable to the international postal service and to the letter-post provisions are contained in the Universal Postal Convention and its Detailed Regulations. Owing to their importance in the postal field and their historical value, these two Acts, together with the Constitution and the General Regulations, constitute the compulsory Acts of the Union. It is therefore not possible to be a member country of the Union without being a party to these Acts and applying their provisions.

The activities of the international postal service, other than letter mail, are governed by Special Agreements. These are binding only for the countries which have acceded to them. There are eight such Agreements:

1. Agreement concerning Insured Letters and Boxes.
2. Agreement concerning Postal Parcels.
3. Agreement concerning Postal Money Orders and postal Travellers' Cheques.
4. Agreement concerning Giro Transfers.
5. Agreement concerning Cash on Delivery items.
6. Agreement concerning the Collection of Bills.
7. Agreement concerning the International Savings Bank Service.
8. Agreement concerning Subscriptions to Newspapers and Periodicals.

BUDGET

The Executive Council fixed 12,862,000 Swiss francs (U.S. $4,466,000 at November 1st, 1974) as the maximum figure for annual gross expenditure in the year 1975. This sum, and any extraordinary expenses, are borne by members. Members are listed in seven classes setting out the proportion they should pay.

PUBLICATIONS

UPU publications are listed in Liste des publications du Bureau international; all are in French, some also in English, Arabic and Spanish.

ACTIVITIES IN 1974

Guinea-Bissau was admitted to WHO, bringing the total membership to 140. Namibia was admitted as an associate member. The World Health Assembly, meeting in May in Geneva, adopted an effective 1975 working budget of $115,240,000, an increase of 5.92 per cent over the revised budget for 1974. The Assembly took a number of decisions on future policy.

Immunization programmes: The Assembly recommended that governments develop vaccination programmes against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, poliomyelitis, tuberculosis, etc.

Biomedical research: The Assembly recognized tropical parasitic diseases as one of the main obstacles to better health and socio-economic standards in tropical and sub-tropical countries, and called for intensified research in such diseases, whenever possible to be carried out in areas where they were prevalent.

World cancer programme: The Assembly recommended the setting up of a comprehensive international cancer research programme, in which research institutions in various parts of the world could participate on a voluntary basis.

Prevention of road accidents: Governments were urged to promote improved driver-licensing standards and traffic safety education programmes.

Human environment: The Assembly recommended that protection of human health should be the basis of the environmental policy of governments. Health agencies should fully participate in national environmental programmes.

Continuing education: Member states were asked to develop national systems of continuing education for the health professions, which were considered essential to assure the quality and coverage of health services.

Anti-malaria programme: Malaria is reappearing in some parts of the world, and has remained uncontrolled in others. The Assembly recommended that malaria control be given the highest priority.

Smallpox eradication: Indonesia was declared to have eradicated smallpox. The disease remains endemic in Ethiopia, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan. In 1967 it was endemic in 30 countries. 212,000 cases of smallpox had been reported by the end of October 1974, compared with the 1973 total of 195,000. However, the geographical area affected by the disease had been progressively shrinking. Over 90 per cent of the cases were occurring in less than 15 per cent of the surface area of the four countries concerned.

New influenza virus: A new variant of influenza A virus, which had appeared in the last quarter of 1973, spread widely in the northern hemisphere.

Resistance to antibiotics: Growing resistance of intestinal bacteria to a wide range of antibiotics was reported to WHO by a number of countries. The appearance of the drug-resistant organisms was ascribed to "prolonged and imprudent use" of antibiotics.

World Health Day

World Health Day, April 7th, 1974, was devoted to the theme "Better Food for a Healthier World". The day marked the twenty-sixth anniversary of the coming into force of WHO's constitution. "Smallpox: Point of no Return" is the theme selected for World Health Day, 1975.

Global Observing System: simultaneous observations are made by 9,000 land stations, 3,000 aircraft and 6,000 ships, and information is received from meteorological satellites. About 100 members have equipment to receive picture transmissions from the satellites.

Global Data Processing System: consists of world meteorological centres at Melbourne (Australia), Moscow (U.S.S.R.) and Washington, D.C. (U.S.A.), 23 regional meteorological centres and the national centres. The analyses are designed to assist the members in making local and specialized forecasts.

Services in the regions outside any national territory (outer space, ocean areas and Antarctica) are maintained on a voluntary basis by member countries.

PROGRAMME FOR EDUCATION, TRAINING AND RESEARCH

To meet the need for personnel, particularly in developing countries, regional training centres and seminars are organized and some 400 fellowships are awarded each year by a panel of experts of the Executive Committee.

Research work in the institutions of the member states is reviewed by the Commission for Atmospheric Sciences, which held its sixth session at Versailles in November 1973.

Global Atmospheric Research Programme (GARP): organized jointly with the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) (see page 396), to study the physical and mathematical basis of weather prediction. ##### NATIONAL COMMITTEES

UNICEF's direct link with the public is through some 30 National Committees, almost all in industrialized countries.

ACTIVITIES

Assistance is provided by the United Nations Children's Fund to projects of long-term value in maternal and child health, including family planning when requested, nutrition, village water supply, family and child welfare services, and formal and non-formal education, as well as for emergency relief and rehabilitation benefiting children.

About one-third of UNICEF's aid is devoted to helping establish and strengthen training institutions and schemes for national personnel in services benefiting children within countries. Supplies and equipment account for about four-fifths of UNICEF's aid, the rest being in local currency costs, much of it for training stipends. A major function of UNICEF's field staff is to help government ministries and departments plan the most effective use of UNICEF aid.

In 1973 assistance for emergency relief and rehabilitation was given in the Indochina Peninsula, Bangladesh, the drought areas in the Sahel and Ethiopia, and the provinces of Pakistan devastated by floods.

FINANCE

Commitments by UNICEF in 1973 (including funds-in-trust) totalled $89.6 million. During the year UNICEF received an income of $87.1 million and $8.7 million in funds-in-trust for meeting commitments approved by the Executive Board. Of the total revenue of $95.8 million, $81.4 million was for long-range programmes and general purposes and $14.4 million for relief and rehabilitation.

By source of revenue, 69.2 per cent comes directly from 124 governments as regular and special contributions, 18.4 per cent from private sources (campaign collections, greeting card profits and individual donations), 4.2 per cent from the United Nations system (UNFPA and emergency funds for Bangladesh and Pakistan) and 8.2 per cent from miscellaneous sources.

DISPLACED PERSONS

Apart from the Palestine refugees of 1948 who are registered with UNRWA considerable numbers of people have, since 1967, been displaced within the UNRWA areas of operations, and others have had to leave these areas. According to government estimates in June 1974 there were 210,000 displaced persons in East Jordan and 125,000 in Syria. Most of those in East Jordan receive rations from UNRWA, paid for by the Jordanian Government.

Additionally in the 1974-75 school year an estimated number of 60,000 refugee children received education in government schools and an estimated 8,800 in private schools in the host countries, partly with grants paid by UNRWA.

ACTIVITIES

For UNRWA's purposes, a Palestine refugee is one whose normal residence was in Palestine for a minimum of two years before the 1948 conflict and who, as a result of the hostilities, lost his home and means of livelihood. To be eligible for assistance, a refugee must reside in one of the "host" countries in which UNRWA operates, and be in need. A refugee's children and grandchildren who fulfil certain criteria are also eligible for UNRWA assistance. Most of the nearly 1.6 million persons registered with UNRWA by September 30th, 1974, were eligible for assistance.

Since 1950, UNRWA has fed and provided medical services for the needy among a registered refugee population which in September 1974 numbered 1,596,721, including 572,539 in refugee camps. It has also served 308 million meals to young children and distributed about 32,000 tons of clothing. An effective community health service has been built up with technical guidance from WHO and there has never been a major epidemic among the refugees in UNRWA's care. An education system has been developed with technical advice and guidance from UNESCO and in the 1974-75 school year there were 287,778 children in 574 elementary and preparatory schools operated by UNRWA. UNRWA also operates eight vocational centres (capacity: 4,424 trainees) for training young refugee men and women as teachers or in a variety of industrial and semi-professional skills, with the result that UNRWA has become one of the most important channels for this type of technical assistance in the Middle East.

June 1967

After the renewal of Arab-Israeli hostilities in the Middle East in June 1967, hundreds of thousands of people fled from the fighting and Israeli-occupied areas. UNRWA was additionally empowered by a UN General Assembly resolution to provide "humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis and as a temporary measure" for those persons other than Palestine refugees who were newly displaced and in urgent need. In practice, UNRWA has lacked the funds to aid the other displaced persons in east Jordan, Syria, and Egypt, and the Agency maintains no statistics concerning them. The main burden of supporting them has fallen on the Arab governments concerned. The Agency, as requested by the Government of Jordan in 1967 and on that Government's behalf, distributes rations to displaced persons in east Jordan who are not registered refugees of 1948. In June 1974, for example, 204,958 displaced persons in east Jordan were issued with rations.

In agreement with the Israeli government, UNRWA has continued to provide assistance for registered refugees living in the Israeli-occupied territories of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

October 1973

Some disruption of UNRWA services was caused by the renewed outbreak of Arab-Israeli hostilities in October 1973.

May and June 1974

In May and June 1974 Israeli attacks in Southern Lebanon resulted in damage to four refugee camps, including Nabatieh camp which was largely destroyed; 37 refugees were killed and 206 injured.

FINANCE

BUDGET

UNRWA's budget for 1975 is $108,917,000.

UNRWA's income is made up of voluntary contributions, almost entirely from governments, the remainder being provided by voluntary agencies, business corporations and private sources.

UNRWA's average expenditure per refugee per year is about $68, or 19 cents per day.

In 1974 cuts in services were averted when a deficit of about $10 million in the $86 million budget was covered by additional emergency contributions from the European Economic Community and the United States Government.

The rise in prices of all supplies, the continued appreciation of three of the local currencies against currencies of major importance in the Agency's income, and local increases in the cost of living (which in 1974 ranged from 11 per cent in Syria to 47 per cent in the Gaza Strip), have resulted in an expected deficit of $39 million in 1975, only $1 million less than UNRWA's total expenditure in 1967.

The observers in the Golan Heights maintain posts in and around the zone of separation and carry out inspections of the areas of limited armaments and forces; 90 observers are assigned to UNDOF.

UNTSO maintains field stations and liaison offices in Amman, Beirut, Cairo, Damascus, Gaza, Quneitra and Tiberias.

As of October 1974, UNTSO consists of 190 international civilian staff, 160 local personnel, and 298 military observers, including the 90 who are assigned to UNDOF, provided by the member states.

UNITED NATIONS EMERGENCY FORCE—UNEF*Ismailia, Egypt

Set up in October 1973 by Security Council resolution to supervise a full ceasefire on the Suez Canal front between Egyptian and Israeli forces. The original mandate of the Force had effect for six months and has since been extended by Security Council resolution until April 24th, 1975.

The UNEF hospital at Ismailia has 50 beds and 165 personnel.

FINANCE

A budget of $30 million for the first six months was granted by the General Assembly. Costs were expected to continue at the rate of $5 million per month after the initial period.

UNITED NATIONS DISENGAGEMENT OBSERVATION FORCE—UNDOF

Temporary Location of headquarters: Building of the Israel-Syria Mixed Armistice Commission, Damascus, Syria

UNITED NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR REFUGEES— UNHCR

Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Telephone: 34 60 11, 33 10 00, 33 20 00, 33 40 00.

Set up in 1950, the Office of the High Commissioner aims chiefly to provide international protection for refugees; it assists governments and private organizations in helping refugees wishing and able to return to their countries; other refugees are helped to settle in their present country of residence, or in third countries; emergency relief is provided when necessary.

ORGANIZATION

HIGH COMMISSIONER

High Commissioner (1966-78): Prince SADRUDDIN AGA KHAN.

Deputy High Commissioner: CHARLES H. MACE.

The High Commissioner is elected by the United Nations General Assembly on the nomination of the Secretary-General, and is responsible to the General Assembly and to ECOSOC.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee of the High Commissioner's Programme, established by ECOSOC, gives the High Commissioner policy directives in respect of material assistance programmes, and advice at his request in the field of international protection. It meets once a year at Geneva. Special sessions may be called to consider urgent problems. Members: representatives of thirty-one states.

ADMINISTRATION

Consists of the following divisions: External Affairs (including Fund Raising Public Information and Secretariat), Protection, Assistance (with five regional sections), Administration and Management. In addition there are 28 representatives and 10 correspondents, honorary representatives or consultants in various countries.

COMPETENCE

To qualify for assistance from UNHCR refugees must come within its mandate under the Statute. Also, the General Assembly may pass a resolution calling upon the High Commissioner to provide his good offices; or the Secretary-General may request his help in a particular situation.

The competence of the High Commissioner extends to any person who, owing to well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear or for reasons other than personal convenience, remains unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence, is unable or, owing to such fear or for reasons other than personal convenience, is unwilling to return to it. Refugees meeting these conditions are entitled to the protection of the Office of the High Commissioner irrespective of their geographical location. Refugees who are assisted by other United Nations agencies, or who have the same rights or obligations as nationals of their country of residence, are outside the mandate of UNHCR. The High Commissioner may also undertake special tasks in the wider framework of United Nations activities.

INTERNATIONAL PROTECTION

The main objective of international protection, the primary function of UNHCR, is to help refugees acquire the nationality of the country of residence when voluntary repatriation is not applicable, and in the meantime to safeguard their rights and interests and improve their status. UNHCR pursues these objectives through seeking to facilitate naturalization of refugees, promoting the conclusion of inter-governmental legal instruments in favour of refugees and encouraging governments to adopt legal provisions for their benefit.

The main legal instruments concerning refugees are the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, and the 1967 Protocol which extends provisions of the Convention to new groups of refugees. The application of these two instruments is supervised by UNHCR.

Other legal instruments directly or indirectly affecting the refugees include the 1954 Convention on the Status of Stateless Persons, the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, the 1957 Agreement and 1973 protocol relating to Refugee Seamen, the 1959 European Agreement on the Suppression of Visas for Refugees, and the 1969 Convention concerning the Specific Aspects of the Problems of Refugees in Africa.

MATERIAL ASSISTANCE TO REFUGEES EMERGENCY RELIEF AND SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Emergency relief is provided in the case of new refugee situations when food supplies and medical aid are required on a large scale at short notice. In recent years this has been the case many times in Africa where the World Food Program has provided considerable food supplies for the refugees' subsistence pending their first harvest.

Supplementary aid is provided for the neediest refugees and may take the form of supplementary feeding, medical aid, or clothing.

VOLUNTARY REPATRIATION

The Office assists refugees wherever possible to overcome difficulties in the way of their repatriation. In cases where no funds are available for their transportation to their homeland, arrangements for payment of the cost involved may be made by UNHCR under its material assistance programmes.

RESETTLEMENT

From its inception UNHCR has been actively engaged in the promotion of resettlement through emigration, in close co-operation with interested governments, the Inter-governmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM), the United States Refugee Program and voluntary agencies concerned with the resettlement of refugees. The task of UNHCR in this field is to negotiate with governments in an endeavour to obtain suitable resettlement opportunities for those refugees both able-bodied and handicapped who opt for this solution, to encourage governments to liberalize their criteria for the admission of refugees and to draw up special immigration schemes for them wherever possible.

INTEGRATION OF REFUGEES IN THEIR COUNTRY OF RESIDENCE

The object of local integration is to assist refugees to become self-supporting in their country of residence. In Europe, this is done either by granting refugees loans for establishment in agriculture, or by assisting them through vocational training or in other ways to learn a skill, or to establish themselves in gainful occupations. One major form of assistance to help refugees leave camps is to provide them with housing.

The new groups of refugees in Africa and some of the refugees in Asia are mainly assisted through local settlement in agriculture. In Africa consolidation of the settlement of refugees is effected through close co-operation between UNHCR and other members of the UN system which provide development assistance to the areas concerned.

The problem of needy individual refugees seeking employment or educational opportunities in urban areas of Africa, and who are mainly without agricultural background, claims special attention. Efforts to help them are made by the OAU Bureau for the Placement and Education of Refugees, while increased support is being given to special refugee counselling services. These are mainly provided by voluntary agencies in Botswana, Burundi, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Senegal, the Sudan and Tanzania, with the assistance of the governments concerned, of UNHCR and of other UN agencies.

FINANCE

The UNHCR material assistance programmes are financed from voluntary contributions made by governments and also from non-governmental sources. The revised target of the UNHCR programme for 1974 is $11,808,000 and that of 1975 is $12,656,000. These targets were approved by the Executive Committee at its twenty-fifth session held in October 1974.

In addition there is a $1,000,000 Emergency Fund on which UNHCR can draw to meet emergency situations.

Furthermore, essential complementary assistance outside the current programme, including the Education Account, is financed from Special Trust Funds donated to or channelled through UNHCR. The special tasks which may be undertaken by the High Commissioner are financed separately.

BUDGET

The UNHCR budget for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $10,904,000.

International Protection

The Office has pursued its efforts to encourage the adoption and implementation of international legal instruments affecting refugees. As of October 31st, 1974, 65 states had become parties to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, 58 to its 1967 Protocol. The 1969 Convention governing Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, adopted by the Organisation for African Unity, came into force in June 1974. In the same month, a Protocol to the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen was opened for signature. The 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness will enter into force in December 1975, having been ratified by the statutory number of countries (six).

Assistance

In 1973 the number of refugees assisted by UNHCR totalled over 285,000, the majority in Africa. This number was somewhat higher than in preceding years on account of the large number of Sudanese refugees who were helped to return to their country.

In Africa there was a continued movement of refugees from Burundi mainly into Tanzania, Rwanda and Zaire. By mid-1974 their numbers had reached nearly 120,000.

The continued flow of refugees from colonial territories, mainly into Senegal, Zaire and Tanzania, has necessitated increased assistance.

The changes in Portugal's policy on independence for its overseas territories in 1974 have led to a revision of the forms of assistance which UNHCR had planned to provide to these groups, in view of the likelihood of their voluntary repatriation.

The return of some 140,000 Sudanese refugees from the Central African Republic, Ethiopia, Uganda and Zaire has led to a marked decrease of activities in these countries. By contrast, the problems of refugees in urban areas has remained acute through limited employment or resettlement opportunities. Efforts were intensified to establish or improve counselling services available to them.

In Asia further progress was made towards the phasing out of assistance to refugee communities in several countries.

In Europe there was a further decrease, through resettlement overseas, of refugees in Spain, while in other countries the influx of non-European asylum seekers, many of them unqualified, again gave rise to problems of employment.

In Latin America, the assistance requirements of refugees in Chile following the events of September 1973 constituted the main component of UNHCR activities. Efforts to protect refugees were facilitated through the establishment, pending arrangements for resettlement, of "safe havens" which were operated with governmental authorization, by a newly formed National Committee for Aid to Refugees of voluntary agencies and churches. Resettlement opportunities on a temporary or permanent basis were obtained for more than 2,600 refugees, in response to the High Commissioner's appeals.

In the Middle East and North Africa there has been a steady increase in the number of individual refugees mostly of African origin.

Special Assignments

The operation bringing assistance to some 4,500 Asians of undetermined nationality expelled from Uganda in 1972 was brought virtually to a conclusion in April 1974. In response to the High Commissioner's appeals, permanent homes for these persons were offered by some 20 governments. A budget of $3.5 million contributed by governments helped meet the cost of their care and maintenance and transportation. The essential remaining problem concerned the reunion of Asians who had left Uganda for India, Pakistan or other African countries with family members admitted for resettlement elsewhere.

In South Asia, UNHCR was called upon to organize a large-scale repatriation involving the transporting of more than 240,000 people between Bangladesh, Nepal and Pakistan, financed by contributions of $12.2 million in cash and kind made by governments. The operation was concluded in June 1974.

A number of missions were undertaken by UNHCR to prepare appropriate assistance for nomads in the Sahel stranded without means of livelihood outside their country of normal residence, as a result of the drought.

An appeal was made by the High Commissioner to governments for financial support in reaching a target of $12 million for an initial programme of assistance in Laos and Viet-Nam, beginning in September 1974.

The role of Co-ordinator for United Nations Humanitarian Assistance in Cyprus was assigned by the Secretary General to the High Commissioner in August 1974. As of October 1974, $14.5 million in cash and kind was contributed by the international community towards a target of $22 million for immediate needs, notably the provision of food, medicaments, clothing and shelter. This assistance was provided in close co-operation with the International Committee of the Red Cross.

FUNCTIONS

The Agency is authorized:

1. To encourage and assist research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful uses throughout the world; and, if requested to do so, to act as an intermediary for the purposes of securing the performance of services or the supplying of materials, equipment, or facilities by one member of the Agency for another; and to perform any operation or service useful in research on, or development or practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

2. To make provision, in accordance with this Statute for materials services, equipment, and facilities to meet the needs of research on, and development and practical application of, atomic energy for peaceful purposes, including the production of electric power, with due consideration for the needs of the under-developed areas of the world.

3. To foster the exchange of scientific and technical information on peaceful uses of atomic energy.

4. To encourage the exchange and training of scientists and experts in the field of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

5. To establish and administer safeguards designed to ensure that special fissionable and other materials, services, equipment, facilities, and information made available by the Agency or at its request or under its supervision or control are not used in such a way as to further any military purpose; and to apply safeguards, at the request of the parties, to any bilateral or multilateral arrangement or, at the request of a State, to any of that State's activities in the field of atomic energy.

6. To establish or adopt, in consultation and, where appropriate, in collaboration with the competent organs of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies concerned, standards of safety for protection of health and minimization of danger to life and property (including such standards for labour conditions), and to provide for the application of these standards to its own operations as well as to the operations making use of materials, services, equipment, facilities, and information made available by the Agency or at its request or under its control or supervision; and to provide for the application of these standards, at the request of the parties; to operations under any bilateral or multilateral arrangement, or, at the request of a State, to any of that State's activities in the field of atomic energy.

7. To acquire or establish any facilities, plant and equipment useful in carrying out its authorised functions, whenever the facilities, plant, and equipment otherwise available to it in the area concerned are inadequate or available only on terms it deems unsatisfactory.

Information and Materials. Each member should make available such information as would, in the judgment of the member, be helpful to the Agency.

Members may make available to the Agency such quantities of special fissionable materials as they deem advisable and on such terms as shall be agreed with the Agency. On request of the Agency a member shall deliver to another member or group of members such quantities of such materials as the Agency may specify. The Agency shall be responsible for storing and protecting materials in its possession. It shall ensure that these materials shall be safeguarded against hazards of the weather, unauthorised removal or diversion, damage or destruction, including sabotage, and forcible seizure. In storing special fissionable materials in its possession, the Agency shall ensure the geographical distribution of these materials in such a way as not to allow concentration of large amounts of such materials in any one country or region of the world.

Projects and Safeguards. Any member or group of members of the Agency desiring to set up any research project for peaceful purposes may request the assistance of the Agency in securing special fissionable and other materials. For the purpose of considering the request, the Agency may send into the territory of the member or group persons qualified to examine the project.

With respect to any Agency project the Agency shall have the following rights and responsibilities:

1. To examine the design of specialised equipment and facilities, including nuclear reactors, and to approve it only from the viewpoint of assuring that it will not further any military purpose, that it complies with applicable health and safety standards.

2. To require the maintenance and production of operating records and progress reports.

3. To approve the means to be used for the chemical processing of irradiated materials solely to ensure that this chemical processing will not lend itself to diversion of materials for military purposes and will comply with applicable health and safety standards.

4. To send into the territory inspectors who shall have access at all times to all places and data and relevant persons.

ACTIVITIES

Technical Assistance and Training: Each year the IAEA provides 232 experts, lecturers and visiting professors to 54 developing countries; awards 739 fellowships for individual study and participation in training projects; and supplies equipment valued at $1,922,100 to 54 countries and 20 regional projects. Six regional and inter-regional training courses, two demonstration projects and three study tour-seminars are regularly held.

Food and Agriculture. In co-operation with FAO, the Agency programme covers research on the use of radiation and isotopes in six fields: plant improvement by induced mutation; control of destructive insects by the sterile-male technique; improvement of livestock nutrition and preparation of radiation animal vaccines; study of effects of chemical pollution in agriculture and food; preservation of food by irradiation; isotope studies on the efficiency of nitrogen and phosphate fertilizer. Over 200 research contracts and agreements are carried out in over 20 co-ordinated research programmes. In addition, 2 open symposia, 6-8 expert panels and several research co-ordination meetings are held each year; the proceedings are usually published.

Life Sciences. The Agency's programme, in co-operation with WHO, includes projects in the fields of medical applications of radioisotopes, dosimetry for intentional radiation applications and radiation biology. The Agency provides experts and equipment in these fields to member states, awards fellowships for individual study and organizes training courses and study tours, and makes agreements and contracts for research. There are about 70 current research contracts and agreements in the field of medical applications of radioisotopes, 10 in radiation dosimetry and 40 in radiation biology, many of these forming part of co-ordinated research programmes supported by work in the Agency's headquarters laboratory. Questions of intercomparison and standardization of techniques form an important part of the programme. Scientific meetings are linked with the programme. At present 2-3 open symposia, 4-6 meetings of expert panels and a number of smaller consultants' meetings dealing with the life sciences are organized each year and their proceedings published.

Physical Sciences. The Agency's programme in physical sciences is designed specifically for practical problems in the use of atomic energy; particularly the introduction of nuclear power into developing countries. Regular international conferences on fission physics, neutron inelastic scattering, and controlled nuclear fusion are held for this purpose. Panel meetings of experts are also frequently convened, usually on topics of special interest to the technical assistance programmes, such as: the utilization of neutron generators; pulsed neutron sources; low-energy accelerators; and the Mössbauer technique. In co-operation with UNESCO, FAO and other UN organizations, the Agency provides experts to member states in the application of nuclear techniques to water resource investigations. The Isotope Hydrology Laboratory provides analytical support to co-operative field studies in member states and to the IAEA/WMO isotopes-in-precipitation survey and distributes standards for stable isotope (D, <sup>18</sup>O) and tritium calibration. Applications of nuclear methods for raw materials exploration and for trace element analysis are being encouraged. Meetings concerned with homodynamics and analytical chemistry of nuclear materials are being sponsored. Analytical quality control programmes involving developing member states are being carried out.

Nuclear Power and Reactors. The Agency provides advice and assistance to member states on the technical feasibility, design, technology and economics of power reactor systems. Economic studies relating to nuclear power are made, including world energy needs and the future role of nuclear power. Using methodologies recently developed in a Nuclear Market Survey in 14 developing countries, the Agency can now make long-range generation planning studies. Member states are advised about the feasibility of installing any specific nuclear power plant, and assisted in the use of research reactors and in the exploration and evaluation of uranium reserves. Information is collected and disseminated on power and research reactors and on world resources of uranium. The Agency's role in co-ordinating research and developing an exchange of information is fulfilled by a number of international working groups, panels and training courses. Regional study groups have been used to stimulate reactor science and technology in developing countries.

Nuclear Safety and Environmental Protection. In co-operation with other international organizations, the Agency has established basic standards and recommendations relating to all aspects of radiation safety under normal and emergency conditions. Forty publications concerning these standards and recommendations have been issued, as well as numerous technical reports on the safe design and operation of nuclear facilities and utilization and handling of radioactive materials. IAEA regulations, revised 1972, for the safe transport of radioactive materials have been adopted as legal standards by many governments and are observed by nearly all international organizations concerned with transport. Studies are continuing on the development of environmental monitoring programmes and the application of radiation doses to the population. There has been increased emphasis on minimizing environmental contamination; work in progress includes: implementation of the London Convention governing disposals of radioactive wastes; and studies on the behaviour of radionuclides in marine and other environments. The Agency provided assistance to member states in assessing the safety of proposed and operating nuclear facilities, and in the selection of suitable sites for nuclear power reactors. First steps have been taken to organize regulatory activities by member states. Health and safety missions visited several research reactors.

Information and Technical Services. The International Nuclear Information System (INIS), the first international, decentralized and computerized information-handling scheme, began operations in 1970. INIS provides a world catalogue of technical information (INIS Atomindex) relating to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. Each year the IAEA organizes 10 to 15 large international conferences and some 40 smaller meetings, and publishes papers presented at these. The headquarters library contains approximately 30,000 books, 150,000 reports, 550 films and 1,440 serial titles. At the Nuclear Data Section, which collaborates with three other principal centres at Brookhaven (U.S.A.), Obninsk (U.S.S.R.) and the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) centre at Saclay (France), the world's neutron data are collected, reviewed and distributed, free of charge.

Safeguards. The Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) requires each of the signatories that has no nuclear weapons to conclude an agreement with the Agency. This agreement prohibits the diversion of nuclear fuels from peaceful uses to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. Of the 79 signatories not possessing nuclear weapons, 41 have signed such safeguard agreements, 22 of whom have significant quantities of nuclear material. Of these 41 agreements, 35 are in force (21 with states having significant quantities of nuclear material). The Agency has also signed a similar agreement with EURATOM and its Non-Nuclear Weapon Member States.

Six of the 20 states party to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Tlatelolco Treaty) have signed the safeguards agreement required by it, which also satisfies NPT requirements; two of these agreements are in force. IAEA safeguards are also presently applied under some 40 other agreements based upon the Agency's Safeguards System.

Where safeguards agreements have been concluded, and all formalities completed, the Agency is now applying safeguards to nuclear materials in 36 nuclear power stations, 110 reactors of other types and 142 other facilities. Manpower-saving techniques procedures and instruments are under continuous development, in order to implement the safeguards without unnecessarily intruding on the activities concerned.

Laboratories. The IAEA operates three laboratories, one in Seibersdorf, Austria, one at the Agency's headquarters in Vienna and one in Monaco devoted to the study of marine radioactivity. The Seibersdorf and Headquarters Laboratories, working jointly, provide services for many of the Agency's programmes in physics, chemistry, hydrology, nuclear medicine, dosimetry and agriculture. This work involves the analysis of hundreds of samples of plant material in fertilizer research, the preparation and inter-comparison of labelled compounds for use in nuclear medicine and the analysis of water samples for isotope content. The International Laboratory in Monaco studies health and safety aspects of radioactive pollution of the sea. It is anticipated to extend the programme to include studies on non-radioactive pollution.

International Centre for Theoretical Physics, Trieste, Italy. With the support of the Italian Government and other organizations, the Centre brings together scientists from the developed and the developing countries; its policy is to encourage those of the latter group to remain in their home countries and continue the work of scientific development there.

From 1970 the Centre has been operated jointly by IAEA and UNESCO. Each year it offers one or more lengthy seminars followed by a research workshop, as well as short topical seminars, training courses, symposia and panels. Independent research is also carried out. The programme concentrates on high-energy and elementary particle physics, solid-state physics, low-energy physics and the theory of nuclear reactions, plasma physics and mathematics and the computer sciences.

Supplying Fissionable Materials. The Agency is empowered by its Statute to serve as an intermediary in arranging the delivery of special fissionable materials to member states. By April 1974, 170 transfers of such material, some of them gifts, had been made to 36 recipient countries. All material supplied was for research reactors or other research purposes. Supplier States have been Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Sweden, the U.S.S.R., U.K. and the U.S.A. The fund of special fissionable material still available to the Agency for supply to its members is almost 5,000 kilograms of uranium-235 contained in enriched uranium. In addition, the Agency has in 1974 concluded agreements providing for the supply of two power reactors with a capacity of 650 MW(e) each from the U.S.A. to Mexico and one with a capacity of 632 MW(e) from the U.S.A. to Yugoslavia. These agreements also provide for the enrichment in the U.S.A. of the uranium necessary as fuel for these three reactors.

BUDGET

The agency is financed by regular and voluntary contributions from member states.

The Regular Budget for 1974, original appropriation, amounts to $22,564,000; the Regular Budget for 1975 will be $29,675,000. The target for voluntary contributions to finance the IAEA programme of technical assistance is $4.5 million.

WORLD FOOD PROGRAMME—WFP

Via delle Terme di Caracalla, 00100 Rome, Italy

WFP is a joint UN-FAO effort to stimulate economic and social development through aid in the form of food and to provide emergency relief. It became operational in January 1963 after parallel resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the FAO Conference to establish it in late 1961.

ORGANIZATION

Intergovernmental Committee: 24 members, 12 elected by ECOSOC and 12 by FAO.

Joint UN-FAO Administrative Unit: carries out the day-to-day activities of the WFP.

Executive Director: Dr. FRANCISCO AQUINO (El Salvador).

ACTIVITIES

Member governments of the United Nations and FAO make voluntary contributions of commodities, cash, and services (particularly shipping) to WFP, which uses the food for emergency relief for victims of natural and man-made disasters and for support for economic and social development projects in the developing countries. The food is supplied, for example, as an incentive in development self-help schemes, as part wages in labour-intensive projects of many kinds, particularly in the rural economy, but also in the industrial field, and in support of institutional feeding schemes where the emphasis is mainly on enabling the beneficiaries to have an adequate and balanced diet. Recipient governments are encouraged to take steps to replace the WFP aid as soon as each project, which may be for anything up to five years, comes to an end.

The steep rise in world commodity prices, especially cereals, during 1973-74 seriously reduced the value of WFP's resources. Forced to make severe cuts, the Programme now directs its aid more towards the least developed countries, the most vulnerable groups of the population and to projects designed to raise agricultural production.

As at September 30th, 1974, 625 development projects in 92 countries had been approved since the beginning of the Programme's operations at a total cost to WFP of $1,540,591,335. Broken down by region: in Latin America and the Caribbean, 92 projects in 23 countries; in North Africa and the Near East, 127 projects in 11 countries; in West Africa, 126 projects in 24 countries; in Mediterranean Europe and East Africa, 112 projects in 18 countries; in Asia and the Far East, 168 projects in 16 countries. In addition, 183 emergency operations have been undertaken in 75 countries at a total cost to the Programme of $142,064,966.

The biggest single project ever undertaken is for the development of the dairy industry in several areas of India at a total cost to the Programme of nearly $72 million.

RESOURCES

As at September 30th, 1974, the resources made available to the Programme through voluntary contributions by governments, including pledges for the period 1973-74, stood at a total of $1,198,831,092; $887,138,100 were in commodities and $311,692,992 in cash and services. A further $93,186,201 worth of food grains was made available to the Programme by signatories of the Food Aid Convention. The target set by the UN and FAO for the pledging period 1975-76 amounts to $440 million, of which $372 million have already been pledged.

UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT— UNCTAD

UNCTAD was set up as an organ of the UN General Assembly by a resolution of December 1964. It is a world-wide forum with the largest membership (147 states) of any international organization. Its aim is to evolve a co-ordinated set of policies, to be adopted by all its member states, designed to accelerate the economic development of the developing countries. In the context of this broad objective, UNCTAD's concern covers the entire spectrum of policies in both developed and developing countries which influence the external trade and payments and economic development of developing countries.

COMMODITY CONFERENCES

The United Nations Tin Conference, convened by UNCTAD to negotiate the Fifth International Tin Agreement, May 20th–June 20th, 1975. Agreement expires on June 30th, 1976.

ACTIVITIES

UNCTAD co-operates closely with other international organizations operating in the trade, development and financing fields and is actively engaged in technical assistance activities.

In 1974, UNCTAD contributed a major report on problems of raw materials and development to the sixth special session of the General Assembly, which adopted the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order. The Assembly set up an emergency operation, in which UNCTAD co-operates, to assist the developing countries most seriously affected by the economic crisis.

UNCTAD is currently (1974) concentrating on the following four priority areas: primary commodities; economic co-operation amongst the developing countries, particularly in respect of the increased financial resources of the oil-exporting countries; technological progress in the developing countries including revision of the international patent system and preparation of a universally applicable code of conduct on the transfer of technology; reform of the international monetary system, investment and finance in co-operation with the International Monetary Fund and other concerned organizations.

Other examples of recent or current activities are the negotiation of a Convention on a Code of Conduct for Liner Conferences; the preparation of a draft Charter on the economic rights and duties of states; review of the operation and effects of the generalized system of preferences (GSP) which has been implemented on UNCTAD's initiative; and a new study on indexation of prices to be completed by August 1975, of the influence of inflationary processes on world trade.

Trade relations among countries with different economic and social systems, the particular needs of land-locked developing countries, and special measures in favour of the least developed countries are among the subjects of continuing concern to UNCTAD.

BUDGET*1973: U.S. $14,970,000.1974 (Estimate): U.S. $16,069,000.

The estimated regular budget for the biennium 1976-77 is U.S. $39,424,000.

PUBLICATIONS

Publications in 1974 included Money, finance and development; The effects of the generalized system of preferences on economic integration among developing countries; Debt problems in the context of development; Berth throughput; Maritime transport of iron ore; Restrictive business practices in relation to trade and development of developing countries; International trade in cotton textiles and the developing countries; Developing island countries; A transport strategy for land-locked countries.

UNITED NATIONS EMERGENCY OPERATION

Launched at the Special Session of the General Assembly in April 1974, the Special Programme was designed to meet the immediate economic difficulties threatening the least developed countries.

EMERGENCY OPERATION

A special fund to be established under United Nations auspices as soon as possible, and at the latest by January 1975, to provide an alternative channel for normal development assistance after the emergency period.

A list of 32 countries in urgent need has been sent to potential donor countries. The requirements for the emergency operation were estimated as approximately U.S. $2,300 million for 1974 and the same amount for 1975. Four countries—Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Tanzania—accounted for 65 per cent of this estimate.

By September 1974 about U.S. $1,300 million had been committed for emergency assistance through bilateral and multilateral channels. In addition, the European Economic Community had made a conditional commitment of up to U.S. $500 million.

Ad Hoc Committee: composed of government representatives of 36 countries. Chair. RAÚL PREBISCH (Argentina).

UNITED NATIONS RESEARCH INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT—UNRISD

Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Established in 1964 as an autonomous UN activity to conduct research into problems and policies of social development and economic development during different phases of economic growth.

ORGANIZATION

(as at October 1974)

BOARD

Supervises the activities of the Institute. Members include representatives of the Secretary-General of UN, of two of the four Specialized Agencies directly concerned (ILO, UNESCO, FAO, WHO) in rotation, of the Economic Commission for Western Asia, and of the UN regional institutes for Asia, Latin America and Africa, as well as the Institute's Director and seven individuals nominated by the Commission for Social Development and elected by the Economic and Social Council.

Chairman: JAN TINBERGEN (Netherlands).

Members:

J. DELORS (France)
G. K. MYRDAL (Sweden)

E. B. SHLEDON (U.S.A.)

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Director: D. V. McGRANAHAN (U.S.A.).

Twelve research officers and assistants plus various experts and consultants.

FUNCTIONS

The Institute was created to conduct research into problems and policies of social development and relationships between various types of social development and economic development during different phases of economic growth. It was intended that the studies of the Institute should contribute to (a) the work of the United Nations Secretariat in the field of social policy, social development planning and balanced economic and social development; (b) regional planning institutes under the auspices of the United Nations; (c) national institutes in the field of economic and/or social development and planning.

The Institute was set up with the active support of the Social Commission of the United Nations (now the Commission for Social Development), which had for some time been emphasizing, in reports and resolutions, the importance of taking social factors into account in development planning and of achieving a balanced and integrated economic and social development policy. Intensified research on the means of achieving that goal was felt to be desirable.

UNITED NATIONS DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME—UNDP

New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Established in 1965 by the General Assembly to help the developing countries increase the wealth-producing capabilities of their natural and human resources, the UNDP replaced the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance and the UN Special Fund.

ORGANIZATION

EXECUTING AGENCIES

UN	IBRD	UNCTAD
ILO	ITU	UNIDO
FAO	WMO	IDB
UNESCO	IAEA	AfDB
ICAO	UPU	ADB
WHO	IMCO

The UNDP is responsible to the General Assembly, to which it reports through ECOSOC.

Governing Council: representatives of 48 countries, both industrial and developing; the policy-making body of the UNDP. One-third of the membership changes each year.

President (1974): NARCISO G. REYES (Philippines).

Administrator: RUDOLPH A. PETERSON (U.S.A.).

Deputy Administrators: BERT LINDSTRÖM (Sweden), I. G. PATEL (India).

Inter-Agency Consultative Board (IACB): composed of the UN Secretary-General and the Executive Heads of the UNDP's participating and executing Agencies; provides guidance and advice.

Secretariat: composed of an international staff from more than 60 countries.

REGIONAL BUREAUX

Headed by assistant administrators, the regional bureaux share the responsibility for implementing the programme with the administrator's office. A bureau for programme and policy co-ordination provides guidance and technical expertise for the Bureaux. Within certain limitations, large-scale projects may be approved and funding allocated by the administrator, and smaller-scale projects by the resident representative.

The four regional bureaux, all at the Secretariat in New York, cover: Africa; Asia and the Far East; Europe, the Mediterranean and the Middle East; and Latin America.

FIELD OFFICES

In each country concerned with the UNDP there is a Field Office, headed by the UNDP resident representative, who co-ordinates all UN technical assistance. He advises the government on formulating the country programme, sees that the field activities are carried out, and acts as the leader of the UN team of experts working in the country.

ACTIVITIES

The UNDP today is the world's largest programme of technical co-operation, working in partnership with over 130 governments. It is financed by voluntary contributions from almost every nation. Governments of the low-income countries with the United Nations and 16 other international agencies, are currently carrying out more than 7,000 UNDP-assisted activities which will cost almost $3,647 million. Expenditures on UNDP-assisted projects (1959-73) have equalled nearly $4,268 million, more than half of it paid by the developing countries themselves.

The UNDP's operations share the technical knowledge and skills, the personnel and facilities amongst the participating countries, and its main sphere of action is in the low-income countries.

In these countries the aid is organized in 3-to-5-year "Country Programmes", which consist of projects essential for meeting national development priorities and plans, while inter-country, inter-regional and global programmes are designed to meet geographically broader needs. The country programmes are drawn up by the developing nations themselves, with the help of UN system advisers, and approved by the UNDP's Governing Council. Each country is allotted an indicative planning figure representing the amount of aid that is expected to be available for the country programme. The projects assist the development efforts of low-income countries in one or more of five basic ways:

- (a) investigating the economic potential of natural resources and the like in a given area;
- (b) stimulating the flow of development capital;
- (c) technical education and training;
- (d) introducing modern productive technologies;
- (e) strengthening national and regional frameworks for development planning and administration.

Each year, these projects employ 10,000 international experts, provide over 7,000 fellowships for advanced study abroad, and supply more than $42 million worth of equipment. Over 1,350,000 men and women have received training.

Following the projects, further investment becomes possible, usually in enterprises such as irrigated agriculture, hydro-electric power, transport, industry, telecommunications, mining, forestry, fishing and livestock production. Since 1959 the follow-up investment from public and private sources, outside and within the countries concerned, has amounted to over $13,000 million.

UNITED NATIONS INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION—
UNIDO

Lerchenfelderstrasse 1, 1070 Vienna, Austria

Telephone: 43 50

Began operations in 1967, following a resolution of the General Assembly, to assist in the industrialization of the developing countries through direct assistance and mobilization of national and international resources.

ORGANIZATION

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Composed of 45 members elected by the UN General Assembly from among the members of the UN or its related agencies for a term of three years. Both developed and developing countries are equitably represented. Meets annually; responsible for the organization's policy and the programme for the year; co-ordinates all activities within the UN system in the field of industrial development. A subsidiary body of the Board, the Permanent Committee, holds two sessions a year.

President (1974): RAYMOND PROBST (Switzerland).

Secretary: ALMAMY SYLLA (Mali).

SECRETARIAT

Has overall responsibility for administration and research programmes and is in charge of operational programmes, in some cases as the executing agency of the UNDP. The Secretariat consists of the Office of the Executive Director, the Technical Co-operation Division, Divisions of Industrial Technology, Industrial Policies and Programming, and Industrial Services and Institutions, and a Division of Administration, Conference and General Services.

Executive Director: IBRAHIM HELMI ABDEL-RAHMAN (Egypt).

FIELD ORGANIZATION

A network of Industrial Development Field Advisers serves the developing countries. The Field Advisers are attached to the office of the Resident Representatives of UNDP.

FUNCTIONS

Activities cover macro-economic and micro-economic aspects of industrial development. At macro-economic level, questions concerning the formulation of industrial development policies, planning, programming, surveys, infrastructure and structure, institutional services to industry, etc. are considered. At micro-economic level, assistance is provided in problems of pre-feasibility and feasibility of industry or plant, investment and financing.

production and productivity, product development and design, technology and techniques, management, marketing, quality, research, etc.

Operational Activities

Technical assistance is provided on request to developing countries or groups of countries. Such assistance usually consists of expert services, but can also include supply of equipment or fellowships for training, such as in management or production.

Promotional Activities

Consist mainly in action taken by the Secretariat in providing contacts between industrialized and developing countries and identifying possibilities for the solution of specific problems in developing countries. Examples of promotional activities are: investment promotion programme, international sub-contracting scheme, information service and the partnership programme.

OPERATIONAL ACTIVITIES IN 1973

In the last two years UNIDO participated in country programming of assistance for 82 countries involving approximately $1,000 million of UNDP funds for a period of five years. UNIDO is expected to execute about 11 per cent of this assistance with about 780 field projects. Additionally, UNIDO is implementing 42 projects with $4 million UNDP contribution in 12 countries which have not yet had a country programme. UNIDO's assistance covers services of experts, training of the nationals of the developing countries and provision of equipment needed for the projects.

Special Industrial Services Programme: short-term assistance projects are approved for urgent problems, such as technical difficulties in manufacturing enterprises; advisory missions and survey teams are sent, and to a slightly lesser extent problems are solved by arranging subcontracts. About 165 new projects were approved in the first three-quarters of 1975, and $2.5 million was spent on current projects.

Fellowship Posts: in 1973, under all UNIDO programmes, 729 posts were taken by 729 people from 77 countries. In addition, 32 programmes of group in-plant training programmes and 36 seminars and symposia partly or wholly financed from UNDP/TA funds were organized in 1973 with 634 fellowship holders from developing countries. The majority of these programmes were, as in previous years, in the metalworking, mechanical textiles, pulp and paper, electrical, small-scale industries and development financing fields.

Special International Conference: convened by the UN General Assembly and held in Vienna, June 1971. The Conference was attended by representatives of 108 states as well as by a number of UN bodies. The agenda of the Conference included: (i) the long-range strategy and orientation of UNIDO's activities, including the Organization's role in the Second Development Decade and the transfer and adaptation of technology for the industrial development of the developing countries; (ii) the organizational structure of UNIDO; and (iii) the question of UNIDO's financing.

The Conference adopted a consensus resolution which recommended, in particular, the implementation of such measures as: formulating plans for industrial development; mobilizing domestic and external resources for industrial development; carrying out the appropriate social and economic reforms; developing industrial co-operation among the developing countries; special consideration of the industrialization needs of the least-developed among

Supporting Activities

Activities carried out by the Secretariat consisting mainly in research and investigation, organization of seminars, working groups, etc. on all subjects concerning industrial and technological development of developing countries. Special attention is given to such areas where research and analysis can lead to an improved performance in operational activities, transfer and adaptation of technology, etc.

the developing countries; creating conditions for the training of highly skilled national personnel. The resolution also recommended the appointment of a small group of high-level experts to formulate the long-range strategy for the activities of UNIDO. The consensus resolution also requested the Governing Council of UNDP to facilitate measures to ensure an increase in the level of UNDP funds allocated for industrial development and emphasized the importance of the Special Industrial Services programme of UNIDO. The second Special International Conference of UNIDO will take place from March 12th-26th, 1975, in Lima, Peru.

FINANCE

Administrative and Research Budget: part of the regular budget of the UN; total (1973) U.S. $16,800,000. The total UNIDO Budget for 1974 and 1975 is U.S. $30,798,000.

Regular Programme: amounted to $1.5 million in 1973, committed mainly to the financing of fellowship posts for training in industrialized countries. The remainder of the funds was used in financing experts engaged on field projects as well as a number of regional advisers attached to the Regional Economic Commissions in Africa, the Americas and Asia and the UN Economic and Social Office in Beirut.

General Trust Fund: voluntary contributions are made annually at a pledging conference. The Fund amounted in 1973 to $2.65 million. It is used both to support UNIDO's activities under other technical assistance programmes and to start new ones in such fields as the establishment of physical units (including foundries, workshops, etc.) in-plant training and other technical meetings, industrial information and plant design and laboratory testing.

Operational Programmes: financed from voluntary contributions by governments, from the UNDP, and from the UNIDO regular programme.

Special Industrial Services (SIS): financed through UNDP; these services provide, at short notice, emergency assistance to governments.

UNITED NATIONS FUND FOR POPULATION ACTIVITIES—UNFPA

485 Lexington Avenue, 20th Floor, New York, N.Y. 10017, U.S.A.

Created by the Secretary-General in 1967 to assist developing countries with high population growth rates and low national incomes, to expand the population activities of the UN system, and to innovate programmes in the population field. Placed under the authority of the UN General Assembly in 1972, with the Governing Council of UNDP as its governing body, under policy supervision of the Economic and Social Council.

ORGANIZATION

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Overall supervision of the Population Fund (as it is known) is entrusted to an Executive Director. The Executive Director has the authority in consultation with the Administrator of UNDP to approve projects up to a value of $1 million; projects involving larger amounts, as well as those of an innovative character, and comprehensive country programmes, are approved by the Governing Council of UNDP. The Executive Director exercises co-ordination with other organizations in the UN system through an Inter-Agency Advisory Board, composed of representatives of UN Agencies.

Executive Director: RAFAEL M. SALAS (Philippines).

EXECUTING AGENCIES

In most projects assistance is extended through member organizations of the UN system; the Fund may also call on the services of non-governmental organizations in this role and sometimes it acts as its own executing agency.

FIELD ORGANIZATION

UNFPA Co-ordinators, attached to the offices of the UNDP Resident Representatives, assist governments in formulating requests for aid and co-ordinate the work of the executing agencies in any given country or area.

FUNCTIONS

The aims and purposes as set out by the Economic and Social Council in 1973 are as follows:

- to build up, on an international basis, with the assistance of the competent bodies of the UN system, the knowledge and the capacity to respond to national, regional, inter-regional and global needs in the population and family planning fields; to promote co-ordination in planning and programming; and to co-operate with all concerned;

- to promote government awareness of social and economic implications of population problems; of the human rights aspects of family planning; and of possible strategies to deal with them, in accordance with the plans and priorities of each country;

- to extend systematic and sustained assistance to countries seeking to define and solve population problems;

to play a leading role in the United Nations system in promoting population programmes and to co-ordinate projects supported by the Fund.

The Fund was also assigned the supervision of preparations for the World Population Year, proclaimed by the United Nations for 1974. The projects supported include: collection and analysis of basic demographic data; provision of demographic research and training facilities; demonstration programmes in family planning connected with maternal and child welfare services; inclusion of courses on population subjects in such educational programmes as adult education, teacher training and agricultural extension; provision of contraceptive supplies and manufacturing materials, and formulation of population policies and the measures to be taken in accordance with the national development objectives.

ACTIVITIES

By mid-1973 the Fund was financing over 900 projects benefiting 92 countries and developing areas. Of these many were regional and inter-regional and included staff support to population units within the UN regional Economic Commissions. In addition, comprehensive country projects, through which a wide variety of inputs are provided to national population programmes, have been concluded with Chile, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Malaysia, Mauritius, the Philippines, Sri Lanka and Thailand, and one with the Republic of Korea is close to completion.

Africa. Since the continent suffers from a scarcity of census-based statistics, an African Census Programme, so far comprising 21 countries, has been launched under the sponsorship of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA). Besides providing funds for census activities, UNFPA has also strengthened ECA's statistics and population programme centres. The results of the censuses, for which UNFPA has planned to disburse over $11 million, are to help African countries in their development planning.

Asia and the Far East. Most countries have already embarked on government-sponsored population programmes. Besides assisting these, the Fund aids regional projects devoted to training, education and research. In a number of countries facilities for family planning are directly supported.

Middle East. Countries receiving UNFPA assistance include Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, as well as Saudi Arabia, Syria and Turkey. Activities supported are mostly related to demographic activities and training and research.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Latin America. Assistance has been given to expand the facilities of CELADE, the regional demographic centre located in Santiago, Chile, and its sub-centre in San Jose, Costa Rica. In 1972 Chile became the first Latin American country to sign an agreement with UNFPA, and other countries are expected to follow. Assistance is given to a wide range of census and training and research activities; in the Caribbean, where some governments have become concerned with their population growth rate, assistance is also given to family planning facilities.

WORLD POPULATION YEAR

To stimulate greater support and governmental recognition of the importance of population activities, the UN General Secretary designated 1974 as World Population Year.

United Nations (Other Bodies)

The Fund initiated a world-wide programme involving the joint efforts of governments, UN agencies and organizations, and bilateral and non-governmental organizations, directed toward increasing awareness of population problems.

The highlight of the Year was the World Population Conference held in Bucharest, Romania, in August 1974. The conference adopted a plan of action, to be ratified at the UN General Assembly, calling for a reduction in birth rates in developing countries by 1985, the provision of family planning advice and services to all who wanted them, greater assistance from the developed to the Third World and measures to guarantee the equality and status of women. The Vatican dissociated itself from the plan.

UNITED NATIONS DISASTER RELIEF OFFICE—UNDRO

Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Established in 1972 to co-ordinate and mobilize the relief to disaster areas provided by other bodies, and to co-operate in the prevention of disasters.

ORGANIZATION

DISASTER RELIEF CO-ORDINATOR

A Disaster Relief Co-ordinator was appointed at Under-Secretary-General level, in March 1972, to report directly to the UN Secretary-General. UNDRO is thus a separate entity, a distinct element within the UN Secretariat.

Co-ordinator: FARUK N. BERKOL (Turkey).

FIELD ORGANIZATION

UNDRO is represented in some 90 developing countries by the Resident Representatives of the UNDP, part of whose task consists in encouraging advance measures to ward off disasters, and to co-ordinate relief and reconstruction.

FUNCTIONS

UNDRO's essential function is that of co-ordination and the mobilization of aid provided by other bodies. The responsibilities laid upon the Office by the General Assembly call upon it to take action in disaster-prone and disaster-stricken countries, both before and after disasters. It is concerned at all times with the prevention, control and prediction of disasters and with preparedness and contingency planning. When disasters strike it is, of course, concerned with disaster relief itself. To do its job effectively it must also work closely with donors so that by advance planning the most effective use can be made of their generosity. Its purpose is to act as a catalyst to stimulate others, and act as a link between the many governments and institutions active in disaster situations.

ACTIVITIES

As news of external aid requirements begins to flow into UNDRO's Geneva Office, it is recorded on a 24-hour basis in the clearing house, which issues a series of disaster relief bulletins to governments and recognized institutions actively concerned with disaster relief. Thus UNDRO is progressively becoming a world information and action centre on disaster situations and relief measures.

The Co-ordinator is also authorized to receive cash contributions for disaster relief assistance in particular emergency situations.

Budget: The UNDRO budget allocated by the United Nations for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $1,018,000, of which $400,000 is allocated for disaster relief.

UNITED NATIONS ENVIRONMENT PROGRAMME—UNEP

P.O.B. 30552, Nairobi, Kenya

Telephone: 33930. Telex No. 22068

The United Nations Environment Programme was established in 1973 by the UN General Assembly to provide machinery for international co-operation in matters relating to the human environment.

ORGANIZATION

GOVERNING COUNCIL

Fifty-eight states are members (16 African, 13 Asian, 10 Latin American, 6 Eastern European and 13 Western European and other states). The main function of the Governing Council is to provide general policy guidelines for the direction and co-ordination of environmental programmes within the UN system. The first session met in June 1973 in Geneva, the second in March 1974 in Nairobi.

SECRETARIAT

The Secretariat serves as a focal point for environmental action and co-ordinates all environment activities within the UN system. The Environment Fund, administered by the Secretariat, is to finance new and existing environment activities. The agreed target for the first five years of its operation (1973-77) is approximately U.S. $100 million.

Executive Director: MAURICE STRONG (Canada).

ENVIRONMENT CO-ORDINATION BOARD

Under the Chairmanship of the Executive Director, the Board strives to ensure co-operation and co-ordination among all agencies and organizations in the UN system concerned with implementation of environmental programmes.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

UNEP aims to create new values and standards for exercising international responsibility in protecting and enhancing the life-sustaining resources of our planet earth.

The Governing Council, at its first session, decided on programme priorities and requested UNEP to take measures to meet such objectives as: preserving the health of the oceans; preventing the loss of productive soil; improving water quality; preserving threatened species of plant and animal life; improving the quality of rural and urban settlements; and mobilizing resources to help developing countries with environmental concerns.

Budget: The UNEP budget allocated by the United Nations for the biennium 1974-75 is U.S. $4,373,000. An additional $6,426,000 is allocated from resources of the Environment Fund.

FOREIGN TRADE COUNCIL

Established in 1974 to examine the system of foreign trade and study ways to introduce the common external tariff. Consists of government representatives. First meeting, July 1974, Lima, Peru.

ACTIVITIES

(to August 1974)

In August 1966, representatives from Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela met in Bogotá and signed a pact calling for accelerated regional integration measures to facilitate the establishment of a Latin American Common Market. In June 1967, at the close of the fifth Inter-American ECOSOC conference at Viña del Mar, the Andean Development Corporation (see below) was founded, and a Mixed Commission of ten delegates from the five countries was formed.

In July 1967 the Mixed Commission held its second meeting in Quito to draw up a sub-regional planning agreement. This agreement covers co-operation on development projects, particularly in the petrochemical, iron and steel, automotive and electronics industries, and also includes provisions for the eventual establishment of a common external tariff for the region and plans for co-ordinating national economic policies. The text of the agreement was approved by the Council of LAFTA Foreign Ministers in September 1967.

In July 1968, at a meeting at Cartagena, Colombia, the Mixed Commission agreed that the first integration measures should take effect in 1970 and that elimination of internal tariffs and the adoption of a common external tariff should be achieved by 1980.

In May 1969 the Mixed Commission, including a delegate from Bolivia, met in Cartagena, Colombia, to sign an Andean Regional Agreement (Acuerdo Regional Andino). Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru signed the pact, which calls for rapid reductions in tariff barriers, leading to the establishment by 1980 of a free trade area, and for integration of industry in the region. Timetables for the removal of tariffs and the forming of common external tariffs were varied, with special concessions granted to Bolivia and Ecuador, the less advanced nations party to the agreement.

The pact provides for a common policy on foreign capital, trademarks, patents, licences and royalties to be established, the co-ordination of the financial policies of the states, a joint system for industrial promotion and multi-national enterprises and the unification of the various systems of industry, agriculture and the creation of a common reserve fund.

The first step towards reduction of tariff barriers and other trade restrictions within the Group came on April 15th, 1970 with the coming into force of the Andean Regional Agreement. The 175 items to be traded freely between Chile, Colombia and Peru comprise the LAFTA Common List and include agricultural products, raw materials and a few items of industrial machinery. Bolivia and Ecuador who are also signatories to the Cartagena Agreement are expected to remove tariffs more gradually.

An agreement was signed by member countries in 1970 providing for the pooling of merchant fleets.

The joint financing of development projects by members of the Group was discussed at a meeting in June 1970 of representatives of banks in the region.

In October 1970 the Commission reached agreement on the gradual removal of basic customs duties as envisaged in the Cartagena Agreement. They would disappear by 1981. Later it was agreed that a minimum common external tariff should come into operation by the end of 1980.

In November 1970, the President of the Andean Group, Jorge Valencia Jaramillo, visited the Commission of the European Communities in Brussels. Discussions covered trade, investment policy and technical and financial co-operation. Further contacts during 1971 developed the suggestion that a Joint Committee should be set up between the Andean Group and the EEC and a sub-committee was formed in February 1973.

In December 1970 it was decided that from July 1971 foreign investors in all the member states wishing to qualify for preferential treatment would have to transfer 51 per cent of their shares to local investors over a period of 15 years in Colombia, Chile and Peru and 20 years in Bolivia and Ecuador. Except in cases which the Commission ruled to be exceptional, foreign-owned companies would not be allowed to repatriate dividends of more than 14 per cent. In June 1974 it ruled that as a sanction, those not complying with these terms would not benefit from the programme of trade liberalization.

Argentina and the Andean Group established a joint commission to further mutual assistance.

In November 1972 a joint Andean-Mexican Commission was created to initiate close co-operation and the Andean Development Corporation (ADC), the development-financing organ of the Group, established a system of consultation with the Central American Economic Integration Bank. A Health Council was created to co-ordinate national health policies.

Negotiations which began in March 1972 over Venezuela's application to join the Andean Group were concluded in February 1973 when Venezuela became the sixth member of the Group. In May a 30 per cent inter-airways fare reduction came into force.

The representatives of the Group set up a joint Hispano-Andean Commission with Spain in June 1973 to establish mutual collaboration over a wide range of fields. Two separate bureaux were created in Lima and Madrid and Spain undertook to grant financial assistance to the ADC.

In July 1974 preparations were begun to introduce common legislation on the problems of migrant workers. Two meetings were held in 1974 between the telecommunications corporations of the member states and government officials. The creation of nationalized boards for telecommunications was discussed.

Andean Development Corporation (Corporación Andina de Fomento): Centro Avenida Libertador, esquina Negrín, Av. Libertador, piso 2, Caracas, Venezuela; the development-financing organ of the Andean Group.

ing and research facilities in the educational, professional, technical and administrative spheres.

To collaborate more effectively for the greater utilization of their agriculture and industries, the expansion of their trade, including the study of the problems of international commodity trade, the improvement of their transportation and communication facilities and the raising of the living standards of their people.

To promote South-East Asian studies.

To maintain close and beneficial co-operation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims and purposes, and explore all avenues for even closer co-operation among themselves.

ACTIVITIES

Economic Co-operation and Development. The establishment of an Organization for Asian Economic Co-operation was agreed in principle and steps were taken to intensify trade among member countries by relaxing or eliminating regulations and restrictions on the free flow of trade. Efforts were also made to increase trade between the region and the rest of the world. The ASEAN Geneva Committee (AGC) was formed on March 7th, 1973 to deal with matters concerning multilateral trade negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The private sector was also to play a greater part in promoting economic development and developing industry. In this connection a Confederation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry was established in April 1972 to facilitate closer co-operation among the private sector of the member countries.

Joint Research and Technology. There was a wide exchange of technical experts and training facilities were made available for nationals of other member countries. Experts from ASEAN countries have met to draw up comprehensive joint programmes to look into the problems of food technology involving the processing of foodstuffs, corrosion of metals, water resources and national development.

Education. Exchanges of teachers and students and increased facilities for teaching the language, history and geography of member countries. In this respect ASEAN scholarships are being awarded to deserving students in higher education and to undergraduates.

Transport and Tourism. The Malaysian and Thai national airlines have pooled services and it was planned that the Philippines join the pool at a later date. A project for a joint airline to operate supersonic aircraft was under discussion. The possibility of a U.S. $250 million Asian Shipping Line is being studied under a joint agreement between ASEAN countries, signed in June 1968. A minimum fleet of 600,000 d.w.t. is envisaged to maintain services to U.S.A. and Europe as well as within the region. The Asian Highway projects are now under construction and have been making headway satisfactorily. The telecommunications network in the ASEAN region has been greatly strengthened through the establishment of various microwave and troposcatter links. ASEAN is actively working on tourist promotion and by now certain projects have been completed with the purpose of making ASEAN a tourist area. ASEAN nationals can now visit the ASEAN countries on a 7-day visa-free period. ASEAN Common Collective Travel Documents for Package Tours have also been introduced. This Document, which is intended for package tours within the ASEAN region, may be used in lieu of a passport.

Cultural Exchanges. Tours by theatrical and dance groups, holding of art exhibitions, and exchange of radio and television programmes, films and visual aids. Cultural exchanges and social workers' exchange programmes are also being carried out.

TRIPARTITE MEETING

Composed of Ministers of Economy and Finance and Directors of Central Banks. Generally meets more than once a year. The High-Level Committee was set up on the basis of agreement reached at the Tripartite Meeting of December 1972.

FUNCTIONS

The Central American Common Market was established under the Tratado Multilateral de Libre Comercio e Integración Económica Centroamericana and the Tratado de Integración Económica Centroamericana. It visualizes the eventual elimination of all tariffs and barriers between members, and the establishment of a common external tariff for the rest of the world. So far practically all internal barriers have been removed and agreement has been reached on 98 per cent of the items in the regional customs classification; uniform tariffs now apply to 87 per cent of these items and the others are to be equalized over a five-year period. Intra-regional trade increased from $34 million in 1960 to $388.5 million in 1973.

It was intended that there would be a common customs administration, unified fiscal policy, a regional industrial policy and co-ordinated regional policies in public health, labour, education, transport and agriculture.

ORGANIZATION

THE CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

The Consultative Committee is the highest deliberative body of the Colombo Plan and consists of Ministers, representing the member governments, who meet annually. Their meeting is preceded by a meeting of senior officials who are directly concerned with the operation of the Plan for their various countries. The officials work on a number of committees and identify the most important issues for discussion by the Ministers. Since 1962 one of the committees has had for discussion each year a special topic selected the previous year. The work of the committees is reported to the Ministers for ratification. The Annual Report of the Consultative Committee is also prepared by the officials from material provided by all the member countries and it is also finally approved by the Ministers. The Consultative Committee meets in a different member country each year. All members take part on equal terms and the meetings are attended by representatives of the Observers (above) and the Colombo Plan Bureau as a participating body.

THE COUNCIL FOR TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION IN SOUTH AND SOUTH-EAST ASIA

It serves as a co-ordinating and receiving body. It has also been charged by the Consultative Committee with the responsibilities of carrying out information activities on the Colombo Plan as a whole. It is composed of representatives of member governments, who are generally their diplomatic representatives in Colombo, but at times from representatives sent for that purpose. The executive arm of the Council is the Colombo Plan Bureau.

THE COMMONWEALTH

Commonwealth Secretariat: Marlborough House, Pall Mall, London, SW1Y 5HX

The Commonwealth is an association of the United Kingdom and 33 former dependencies throughout the world, including nearly a quarter of the world's population.

MEMBERSHIP

The Commonwealth has no written constitution. The relationship between its members is to some extent defined by legislation, notably the Statute of Westminster, but for the most part rests on agreed constitutional conventions. The Commonwealth is not a federation, for there is no central government, nor are there any rigid contractual obligations such as bind the members of the United Nations. Membership is granted only by consent of all the members and the right of secession is implicit.

The Commonwealth includes the self-governing states associated with Commonwealth members and the remaining dependent territories. These are also eligible for Commonwealth technical assistance and take part in a variety of Commonwealth activities. They enjoy varying and increasing degrees of self-government, and several are approaching independence.

HEADS OF STATE AND HEADS OF GOVERNMENT

Fifteen member countries of the Commonwealth are monarchies and 19 are republics. All Commonwealth countries accept Queen Elizabeth II as the symbol of the free association of the independent member nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth. Of the 19 republics, the offices of Head of State and Head of Government are combined in 12: Botswana, Cyprus, The Gambia, Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Nauru, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia. The two offices are separate in the remaining 7: Bangladesh, Guyana, India, Malta, Singapore, Sri Lanka and Western Samoa.

Of the monarchies, the Queen is Head of State of the United Kingdom and of 10 others, in each of which she is represented by a Governor-General: Australia, the Bahamas, Barbados, Canada, Fiji, Grenada, Jamaica, Mauritius, New Zealand and Trinidad and Tobago. Lesotho, Malaysia, Swaziland and Tonga are also monarchies, where the traditional monarch is Head of State and the Queen is accepted in her function of Head of the Commonwealth.

The Governors-General are appointed by the Queen on the advice of the ministers of the country concerned. They are wholly independent of the Government of the United Kingdom.

HIGH COMMISSIONERS

Governments of member countries are represented in other Commonwealth countries by High Commissioners who have a status equivalent to that of Ambassadors.

WITHDRAWALS

Ireland withdrew from the Commonwealth on April 18th, 1949; South Africa withdrew on May 31st, 1961; and Pakistan withdrew on January 30th, 1972.

ORGANIZATION

MEETINGS OF HEADS OF GOVERNMENT

Meetings are private and informal, and operate not by voting but by consensus. A communiqué is issued each time. Meetings are held at intervals of one to three years, in different capitals in the Commonwealth in turn. Latest meeting: Kingston, Jamaica, in April and May 1975.

COMMONWEALTH SECRETARIAT

The Secretariat, established by Commonwealth Heads of Government at their meeting in London in July 1965, operates as an international organization at the service of all Commonwealth countries. Created as "a visible symbol of the spirit of co-operation which animates the Commonwealth", it is responsible to Commonwealth governments collectively and is the main agency for multi-lateral communication between them. It promotes consultation and disseminates information on matters of common concern to member governments, services the meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government, Ministers and officials, and assists appropriate agencies in the fostering of Commonwealth links.

Because of its neutral position the Secretariat has served in cases of dispute and it has also carried out, on request, special assignments requiring demonstrable impartiality.

Although no city or country can be regarded as the centre of the Commonwealth, heads of government decided, chiefly because of communications and diplomatic convenience, that the Secretariat should work from London.

The cost of the Secretariat is borne by Commonwealth Governments in agreed shares based on the UN formula.

The Secretariat is staffed from member countries and the Secretary-General, appointed by the Heads of Government for a period of five years, is equivalent in rank to a senior High Commissioner. He is assisted by two Deputy Secretaries-General (one with general responsibilities, the other with responsibility for economic matters) and two Assistant Secretaries-General, one with responsibility for educational and medical matters and the other being the Managing Director of the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation (CFTC).

The Secretariat budget for 1974/75 was £1,141,340.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE

Marlborough House came into use as a Commonwealth centre in 1962, to serve as a centre for Commonwealth meetings in London. In addition to the Secretariat, it houses offices for Heads of Government and their accompanying delegations and staffs, and the Commonwealth Foundation.

MEETINGS OF FINANCE MINISTERS

Since 1959 the finance ministers of the Commonwealth have met annually before the meetings of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. The meetings are held in various Commonwealth centres: the most recent were in London in 1972, Dar es Salaam in 1973 and Ottawa in 1974. Recently discussions have been concerned with international monetary reform and future trading relations between the Commonwealth and the enlarged EEC. Other subjects discussed have included the international negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and development assistance.

OTHER CONSULTATIONS

The Secretariat has assisted consultations between member countries negotiating associations or trade agreements with the EEC, and has conducted economic studies of the individual problems of certain of these countries at their request.

There have been meetings of Commonwealth Trade Ministers and of experts on tourism. The Secretariat also prepares annual reports on Commonwealth trade and collects and issues statistics on certain commodities.

Other Commonwealth conferences in the economic field are: the Commonwealth Forestry Conference, meeting usually every five years, assisted by the Standing Committee on Commonwealth Forestry; the Royal Agricultural Society of the Commonwealth, which meets every two years; and the Commonwealth Engineering Conference, meeting every four years.

A Commonwealth conference on metrification was held in April 1973.

ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

COMMONWEALTH PREFERENCE

Commonwealth Preference is a system of tariff preferences operating among Commonwealth states and territories (except Rhodesia), South Africa, South West Africa (Namibia), Burma and the Republic of Ireland. Members accord a preferential tariff rate on imports from the Commonwealth, which is lower than both Most Favoured Nation and general rates of duty. The system is not, however, necessarily reciprocal. For example, Commonwealth countries in Africa enjoy tariff preferences on their exports to Britain, but few of them accord preferences to British goods.

Factors which have reduced the advantages of the system are: the raising of some protective tariffs even within the Commonwealth; and world-wide cuts in tariffs encouraging trade outside the system. As a result, intra-Commonwealth exchanges declined as a share of the total trade of Commonwealth countries from two-fifths in the mid-1950s to one-fifth in 1973. In 1954 the Commonwealth took 48 per cent of British exports, but by 1973 the proportion had fallen to 16.6 per cent. Meanwhile, British exports to the EEC increased, exceeding exports to the Commonwealth for the first time in 1970.

DEVELOPMENT AID

The flow of official aid in the Commonwealth in 1973 amounted to £350 million. In the field of technical assistance, more than 21,300 experts and advisers were provided in the year, and 13,200 students and trainees were financed.

Many Commonwealth members, including the developing countries, make significant contributions to multilateral assistance programmes. In 1970-71 the developing Commonwealth countries provided 710 experts for the United Nations Development Programme and the UN Regular Programme; the majority came from India, but 20 other Commonwealth countries also provided experts.

COMMONWEALTH FUND FOR TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION (CFTC)

The CFTC replaced a Programme for Technical Co-operation which was financed largely on a bilateral basis by developed Commonwealth members. Activities began in the new framework in 1971 with a multilateral fund now composed of contributions from all members of the Commonwealth.

Overall direction comes from a Board of Representatives, comprising one representative from each participating government. An eleven-man Committee of Management, appointed by the Board, supervises the general operations of the Fund. The Commonwealth Secretary-General is Chairman of this Committee.

The Fund provides technical assistance for economic and social development. Its three programmes—general technical assistance, education and training, and export market development—are designed to meet the priorities of the developing Commonwealth countries. Assistance is available to developing member countries, states associated with Commonwealth members, dependent territories and Commonwealth intergovernmental organizations and agencies.

A team of experts is maintained on the Fund's headquarters staff to undertake short-term advisory visits in response to urgent requests for advice on matters such as the negotiation of mineral agreements, legislation on the exploitation of off-shore areas, and the restructuring of primary industries. The majority of projects undertaken by the Fund, however, are carried out by advisers and consultants, recruited in developing countries as well as developed Commonwealth countries, who are engaged on contracts. Most of these experts are appointed in advisory capacities, but since 1973 the Fund has also been able to provide operational experts in selected cases.

General Technical Assistance Programme: arranges help in a wide range of fields, including economic planning, transport, public administration, tourism, port development, constitutional legislation, national accounting and statistics.

Education and Training Programme: supports the training of personnel from developing countries in other Commonwealth developing countries; preference is given to technical and middle-level managerial staff, and to vocational and non-institutional forms of training. Through this programme countries can more easily share their facilities and so assist in each other's development, and personnel can be trained under conditions appropriate to their future employment.

Export Market Development Programme: assistance includes market research and is geared to the expansion of exports. Projects include studies on the implications of enlargement of the EEC, studies on the export market potential for particular commodities, and the financing of regional trade promotion seminars.

The CFTC is financed by voluntary contributions from all Commonwealth governments. Beginning with resources of £400,000 for 1970-72, the Fund is now operating with a plan of expenditure exceeding £3 million.

THE COMMONWEALTH AND THE EEC

Britain's membership of the EEC entails the gradual ending of Commonwealth Preference as Britain participates in the EEC's Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and applies the Community's Common External Tariff (CET) against non-EEC countries. The developing countries of the Commonwealth have, therefore, been offered preferential arrangements with the whole of the enlarged Community.

African, Caribbean and Pacific countries: negotiations were in progress during 1973-74 for an agreement, replacing the Yaoundé Convention, between the EEC and 46 developing countries. The Commonwealth countries taking part were:

AFRICA		CARIBBEAN	PACIFIC
Botswana	Mauritius	Bahamas	Fiji
The Gambia	Nigeria	Barbados	Tonga
Ghana	Sierra Leone	Grenada	Western Samoa
Kenya	Swaziland	Guyana
Lesotho	Tanzania	Jamaica
Malawi	Uganda	Trinidad
	Zambia	and Tobago

The negotiations were concerned with reciprocal trading preferences; a European Development Fund for grants and loans to the 46; guaranteed income for exporters of primary products; technical assistance; and certain joint institutions.

Until negotiations were completed, the Community was to extend the Yaoundé Convention, and the Arusha Agreement, and Commonwealth Preferences were to continue, although these were being phased out over a five-year period.

Asian Commonwealth countries: these are included in the EEC Generalized Preference scheme, which allows duty-free quotas of manufactures and semi-manufactures from a wide variety of countries. Hong Kong, a British Dependency, is also included.

Developed Commonwealth countries: on Britain's accession the EEC has altered its tariff for imports of such materials as newsprint, wood pulp and alumina from the developed Commonwealth.

New Zealand has been guaranteed access for at least 80 per cent of present sales of butter to Britain, and at least 20 per cent of previous sales of cheese, at the average 1969-72 prices, by the end of the first five years of British membership of the EEC. During the third year the Community will review the situation for butter and decide on suitable measures for ensuring beyond 1977 the continuation of special arrangements for New Zealand butter.

Gibraltar, as a territory within Europe of a member of the EEC, could be brought within the scope of the Treaty of Rome; however, Gibraltar is excluded from the customs area, the Common Agricultural Policy and the Value Added Tax system of the Community.

Association agreements: the Community has negotiated preferential trading agreements, which do not include aid, with Malta, Cyprus and India.

Sugar: the Commonwealth Sugar Agreement of 1951, between the United Kingdom and the sugar producing countries in the Commonwealth, expired at the end of 1974. From then on, the EEC had guaranteed to import 1.4 million tons of sugar from these countries. The price was to be agreed whilst negotiating the new terms of association during 1975. Britain is to continue to import further amounts of sugar under a separate agreement.

DECLARATION OF COMMONWEALTH PRINCIPLES

Agreed by the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting at Singapore, January 22nd, 1971.

The Commonwealth of Nations is a voluntary association of independent sovereign states, each responsible for its own policies, consulting and co-operating in the common interests of their peoples and in the promotion of international understanding and world peace.

Members of the Commonwealth come from territories in the six continents and five oceans, include peoples of different races, languages and religions, and display every stage of economic development from poor developing nations to wealthy industrialized nations. They encompass a rich variety of cultures, traditions and institutions.

Membership of the Commonwealth is compatible with the freedom of member-governments to be non-aligned or to belong to any other grouping, association or alliance. Within this diversity all members of the Commonwealth hold certain principles in common. It is by pursuing these principles that the Commonwealth can continue to influence international society for the benefit of mankind.

We believe that international peace and order are essential to the security and prosperity of mankind; we therefore support the United Nations and seek to strengthen its influence for peace in the world, and its efforts to remove the causes of tension between nations.

We believe in the liberty of the individual, in equal rights for all citizens regardless of race, colour, creed or political belief, and in their inalienable right to participate by means of free and democratic political processes in framing the society in which they live. We therefore strive to promote in each of our countries those representative institutions and guarantees for personal freedom under the law that are our common heritage.

We recognize racial prejudice as a dangerous sickness threatening the healthy development of the human race and racial discrimination as an unmitigated evil of society. Each of us will vigorously combat this evil within our own nation.

No country will afford to regimes which practice racial discrimination assistance which in its own judgment directly contributes to the pursuit or consolidation of this evil policy. We oppose all forms of colonial domination and racial oppression and are committed to the principles of human dignity and equality.

We will therefore use all our efforts to foster human equality and dignity everywhere, and to further the principles of self-determination and non-racialism.

We believe that the wide disparities in wealth now existing between different sections of mankind are too great to be tolerated. They also create world tensions. Our aim is their progressive removal. We therefore seek to use our efforts to overcome poverty, ignorance and disease, in raising standards of life and achieving a more equitable international society.

To this end our aim is to achieve the freest possible flow of international trade on terms fair and equitable to all, taking into account the special requirements of the developing countries, and to encourage the flow of adequate resources, including governmental and private resources, to the developing countries, bearing in mind the importance of doing this in a true spirit of partnership and of establishing for this purpose in the developing countries conditions which are conducive to sustained investment and growth.

We believe that international co-operation is essential to remove the causes of war, promote tolerance, combat injustice, and secure development among the peoples of the world. We are convinced that the Commonwealth is one of the most fruitful associations for these purposes.

In pursuing these principles the members of the Commonwealth believe that they can provide a constructive example of the multi-national approach which is vital to peace and progress in the modern world. The association is based on consultation, discussion and co-operation.

In rejecting coercion as an instrument of policy they recognize that the security of each member state from external aggression is a matter of concern to all members. It provides many channels for continuing exchanges of knowledge and views on professional, cultural, economic, legal and political issues among member states.

These relationships we intend to foster and extend, for we believe that our multi-national association can expand human understanding and understanding among nations, assist in the elimination of discrimination based on differences of race, colour or creed, maintain and strengthen personal liberty, contribute to the enrichment of life for all, and provide a powerful influence for peace among nations.

It will develop trade between member states in agricultural and industrial products, through the establishment of an area of organized trade; and it will develop regional economic co-operation policies, in particular as regards industry and transport.

Non-manufactured, crude products may be imported and exported within the Community without internal taxes.

Industrial products of member states, when exported to other member states, may benefit from the special preferential system based on a Regional Co-operation Tax, which replaces the import taxes of the separate states. Certain products remain subject to special agreements.

CMEA TRADE

Foreign trade is one of the most important forms of economic co-operation between member states of CMEA. Trade between member states was planned by yearly agreements until 1951 and thereafter by long-term bilateral and multilateral trade agreements linked to the development plans of the member countries. In 1956 the standing Commission for Foreign Trade was set up. Trade between member countries comprises more than 60 per cent of their foreign trade which is wholly conducted through state monopolies. Member countries engage in trade with socialist non-members on the basis of long-term agreements. Accordingly a long-term trade agreement was drawn up with Yugoslavia for the years 1966-70 with the result that the volume of trade between member countries and Yugoslavia doubled in this period compared with the period 1961-65.

The commission is competent to examine complaints made either by a contracting party, or in certain cases, by an individual, non-governmental organization or group of individuals that the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms has been violated by one or more of the contracting parties. If the commission decides to admit the application, it then ascertains the full facts of the case and places itself at the disposal of the parties in order to try and reach a friendly settlement. If no settlement is reached, the commission sends a report to the Committee of Ministers in which it states an opinion as to whether there has been a violation of the Convention. It is then for the Committee of Ministers or, if the case is referred to it, the Court to decide whether or not a violation has taken place.

The following may bring a case before the Court, provided that the High Contracting Party or Parties concerned have accepted its compulsory jurisdiction or, failing that, with the consent of the High Contracting Party or Parties concerned: the Commission, a High Contracting Party whose national is alleged to be a victim, a High Contracting Party which referred the case to the Commission, and a High Contracting Party against which the complaint has been lodged. In the event of dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter is settled by the decision of the Court. The judgment of the Court is final. The Court may, in certain circumstances, give advisory opinions at the request of the Committee of Ministers.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL WORK PROGRAMME

In December 1974 the Committee of Ministers adopted the seventh Intergovernmental Work Programme, covering the period 1973-74. The programme is divided into four chapters: man's cultural development and permanent education; the adjustment of laws and administrative machinery to present-day living conditions; the improvement of man's physical environment in the town and in the country; development of economic and social structures and improvement of public health conditions.

ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

The Council has as its main objective in this field the protection of the individual in a European economy.

Work is being carried out on the improvement of consumer protection, in such fields as developing Europe-wide measures to put an end to misleading advertising, and ensuring consumer representation on official bodies. A committee of governmental experts is examining the scope and effects of recent trends towards press concentration in member states and is considering what measures of economic assistance to the press would be appropriate to prevent concentration from reaching the point where it might seriously threaten the public right to freedom of expression and information.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

A number of conventions and agreements have been elaborated, as well as a fellowships scheme administered through the Council.

Multilateral Treaties: Among these instruments, the European Social Charter in force since February 1965, covering at present Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland, Italy, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom, lays down the rights and principles which are the basis of the Council's social policy, and guarantees a number of social and economic rights to the citizen. It complements the European Convention on Human Rights, which guarantees certain civil and political rights.

A number of international instruments in the field of social security have been concluded within the framework of the Council of Europe, including the European Code of Social Security and its Protocol. The Code covers medical care, sickness benefit, unemployment benefit, old-age benefit, employment injury benefit, family benefit, maternity benefit, invalidity benefit and survivor's benefit. In addition, two European interim agreements on social security aim to establish equality of treatment for nationals of member states. These agreements are to be replaced by the European Convention on Social Security, which was opened for signature by the Committee of Ministers in December 1972. Most of the provisions will apply automatically as soon as the Convention enters into force but others will be subject to the conclusion of additional multilateral or bilateral agreements.

Other important conventions are on social and medical assistance, on the adoption of children and on au pair placement. The European Convention on the Social Protection of Farmers, guaranteeing farmers protection comparable to that of other groups, was opened for signature in May 1974.

Resolutions Containing Recommendations: Resolutions containing recommendations to member governments have been adopted by the Committee of Ministers in several fields of social policy, social welfare and labour law. Such resolutions are conceived as blueprints for specific concerted action in the social field.

Fellowships: The Council of Europe administers a fellowships scheme for the training of social services personnel drawn from member countries, and an annual research fellowships programme involving the study, by a group of three or four specialists, of subjects chosen by the Council of Europe Social Committee.

Current Fields of Study: at the end of 1974 the studies concerned unemployment among young people, the employment of women, the social protection of nomads, safety services in firms, a European card for the seriously handicapped and the social security protection of retired wage-earners and housewives. Studies on safety in the engineering and chemical industries are being carried out in eight member countries.

HEALTH

The Council is working towards the pooling of medical techniques and equipment between member states. A programme of medical fellowships enables members of the medical profession and personnel of public health departments to become acquainted with new methods and techniques practised in other European countries and to participate in research of common European interest.

European Agreements provide for special facilities for the medical treatment of war cripples and other injured, for the exchange of blood-group and tissue typing reagents, for a system of supply of blood and blood products through a network of blood transfusion centres, for common standards for the training of nurses, and for the duty-free importation on loan of medical and surgical equipment. Eight member countries and Spain have concluded Administrative Arrangements setting up an "excepted sanitary area" under the terms of Article 104 of the International Sanitary Regulations. Eleven states are working towards harmonization of their legislation in several fields, such as the pharmaceutical field, the health control of foodstuffs and the use of pesticides. The Convention on the Elaboration of a European Pharmacopoeia entered into force in May 1974. Eight countries so far are participating in the establishment of a European Pharmacopoeia, the first volume of which was published in 1969 and the second in 1971. A supplement to the second volume was published in 1973.

New fields of study at present include organization of care in and outside hospitals, organization of preventive services for mental illness, training of medical and paramedical personnel.

Studies on various aspects of drug dependence have been carried out. A programme is being elaborated with a view to organizing activities on a European level.

Eight member states co-operate in the field of rehabilitation and carry out activities towards harmonization in its various aspects: medical and functional treatment, educational training, occupational and vocational rehabilitation.

POPULATION

In 1971 a Committee of Demographic Experts was established to keep a continuing watch on population trends and their implications. The Committee is currently engaged on a five-year study of fertility trends, age structures, migration and stationary population.

Since 1950 the Council has been concerned with refugee and over-population problems and is now engaged in improving the material, legal and psychological situation of migrant workers and is preparing a European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers and a range of other recommendations to governments on the reunion of migrant workers' families; equality of treatment between national and migrant workers; equivalence of professional diplomas for car mechanics; and a model work contract. Language classes for migrant workers and special experimental classes for their children are sponsored each year.

Annual programmes of vocational training grants for student-instructors and instructor-trainees have been in operation since 1964.

In 1955 a European Resettlement Fund was created to make loans to governments for the resettlement of refugees and to help in problems of over-population. Twelve countries contribute to the Fund which by the end of 1974 had granted loans totalling over $160 million.

LEGAL CO-OPERATION

The European Committee on Legal Co-operation has general responsibility for the preparation and implementation of the Council's inter-governmental activities in the legal field. It normally meets twice a year. Most of the specialized committees of legal experts work under its direction.

In addition, the Ministers of Justice of member states of the Council of Europe meet from time to time for the purpose of stimulating co-operation in the legal field. The eighth conference was held in Stockholm in May 1973 and the ninth in Vienna in May 1974.

Among the more important legal conventions concluded within the framework of the Council of Europe are those on establishment, the peaceful settlement of disputes, patents (application, classification, unification of substantive law), extradition, commercial arbitration, compulsory motor insurance, pirate broadcasts, information on foreign law, multiple nationality, foreign money liabilities, liability of hotelkeepers, consular functions and bearer securities, and state immunity.

PENAL LAW AND CRIMINOLOGY

The European Committee on Crime Problems is the main body of the Council of Europe working on penal law, penology and criminology. It is assisted by a Criminological Scientific Council composed of specialists in law, psychology, sociology and related sciences. It organizes every year a conference of directors of criminological research institutes.

The activities of the European Committee on Crime Problems have in recent years resulted in Conventions on extradition, on mutual assistance in criminal matters, on the punishment of road traffic offences, on the supervision of conditionally sentenced and conditionally released offenders, on repatriation of minors and the international validity of criminal judgments. Several resolutions arising out of the work of the European Committee on Crime Problems have been adopted by the Committee of Ministers and concern the mass media and the protection of young people, the status, selection and training of prison staff, the setting-up of a simplified procedure to deal with minor road traffic offences, measures for the supervision and after-care of conditionally sentenced or conditionally released offenders and hidden criminality.

Various studies in penal law, penology and criminology are at present being carried out by thirty Expert Committees.

EDUCATION AND CULTURE

The Council for Cultural Co-operation was founded in 1962 to draw up proposals for the cultural policy of the Council of Europe and to allocate the resources of the Cultural Fund, which finances the cultural programme of the Organization. It is assisted by three permanent committees: higher education and research, general and technical education and out-of-school education and cultural development. All member states of the Council of Europe are represented on these bodies, together with Finland, Spain and the Holy See.

The educational and cultural programme is based on two main concepts: permanent education and cultural development. As regards education, which represents some 80 per cent of the programme, there are four sectors: a general sector (covering problems common to education as a whole) and three sectors corresponding to the traditional branches of the educational systems. The eighth conference of the European Ministers of Education was held in Bern in 1973; the main topic was "Education for the 16 to 19 age group".

A major project on the teaching of modern languages was introduced at the request of the Ministers of Education. Priority has subsequently been given to finding ways of making the early introduction of modern language teaching as advantageous as possible.

Great attention is paid in all three branches of education to the present and future applications of modern media ranging from films and closed-circuit television to multi-media systems and satellites.

Education—general: Steering groups have been set up to supervise the work on permanent education, which is to be devoted to pilot experiments on educational technology and on educational research, which is aiming towards co-operative research between member states.

Higher education and research: The work is centred on reform and development, on the harmonization of interests concerned with planning and administration, on the mobility of students, staff and research workers, on the equivalence of qualifications and on research co-operation. It is carried out in close co-operation with university authorities who are represented with governments on the Committee.

General and technical education: Inter-governmental co-operation in tackling educational problems common to European countries began with an emphasis on comparative studies (history, geography, civic education, school guidance, teacher training, etc.), as well as with the assembly of basic material on school systems. The emphasis is now placed on obtaining guidelines for the development of key sectors of the educational system, such as technical and vocational education, the further training of teachers, examinations and continuous assessment, pre-school and primary education, the sixteen to nineteen age group. There is also a long-standing project for co-production of educational films for schools.

Out-of-school education: In adult education the problems of the organization and content of this branch of education within a system of permanent education and questions of new technologies of out-of-school education are prominent. Particular attention is being paid to the provision of a learner-centred education, to the application of new technologies and to the training of adult educators.

Cultural development: Projects to provide data to enable governments and local authorities to redefine their policies on needs of the population, choice of facilities, management and investments are under way. Action is also being taken to ensure the promotion of greater aesthetic, social and scientific awareness among individuals. A long-term programme is carried out to promote sport. Research into youth problems is also promoted. A number of traditional projects are being continued including European art exhibitions which demonstrate the interdependence of national cultures and the Cultural Identity Card which offers special facilities to research workers.

Youth: The European Youth Centre's aim is to enable young people to supplement their knowledge of European problems and participate more fully in European developments. The Committee adopted a resolution setting up a European Youth Foundation. Its main purpose is to help youth organizations to finance activities of European interest. It began operations in 1973.

Documentation and Publications: A documentation centre for education in Europe was established in 1964. In 1967 it was linked with a new service for information on educational research. The main educational publications of the Council for Cultural Co-operation are published in the series Education in Europe. Other works of a more technical character are also produced. Three periodicals Education and Culture, Newsletter and Bulletin of the Documentation Centre for Education in Europe are available to specialists free of charge.

ENVIRONMENT

The European Committee for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (created in 1962) advises the Committee of Ministers on environmental questions. It prepares policy recommendations and promotes European co-operation in this field. A European Water Charter was made public in Strasbourg in May 1968 when a European information campaign on water problems was launched. 1970 was proclaimed Nature Conservation Year by the Committee of Ministers. A European Conservation Conference was held in Strasbourg in February 1970, which ended with the adoption of a declaration on the management of the natural environment of Europe. One of the most important recommendations concerned the convocation of a ministerial conference on the Environment, which was held in March 1973 in Vienna.

The European Information Centre for Nature Conservation, created in 1967, publishes a quarterly review, Naturopa, in English, French, German and Italian, and a monthly newsletter in seven languages.

A committee of experts on air pollution was created in 1966 with tasks similar to those of the above-mentioned Committee. A declaration of principles of air pollution control, prepared by this committee, was approved by the Committee of Ministers in 1968.

The European Committee for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources has elaborated a new medium-term work programme.

An ad hoc Committee of Experts has recently drawn up a draft European Convention for the protection of international watercourses against pollution. The draft is under consideration by the Committee of Ministers.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES AND REGIONAL PLANNING

The Council of Europe provides a particularly appropriate framework for European co-operation in local authorities and regional planning questions. In 1952 the Council formed a committee on local and regional affairs within the Consultative Assembly, and, in 1955, the European Conference of Local Authorities, as a common forum for elected representatives of local and regional government from member states. The conference held its tenth plenary session in Strasbourg in September 1974; the chief concerns of the conference are regional planning and the protection of the environment.

In 1967 the Committee on Co-operation in Municipal and Regional Matters was set up to enable senior officials from ministries responsible for local government affairs in the member states to meet.

In 1970 the first European conference of ministers responsible for regional planning was held. Through the European Conference of Local Authorities it aims to enable representatives of the municipalities and regions of the member states to play a part in European co-operation. It also seeks their opinions on the local and regional effects of European integration.

The Committee on Co-operation in Municipal and Regional Matters assists co-operation between governments in local government questions, with a view to enabling national governments to exchange experience and ensure, as far as is possible and necessary, that the various national structures and legislations develop in harmony. Amongst the activities of this Committee are those aimed at the strengthening of the structures of local and regional government and their adaptation to the requirements of modern society and European unification.

The European conference of ministers responsible for regional planning has set itself the task of laying the foundations of a European regional planning policy, with a view to ensuring a more balanced use of the European territory and the harmonious development of its various regions.

At their first conference in 1970, the ministers responsible for regional planning in the states represented agreed to co-operate in instituting between the participating countries a standing exchange of information on policy legislation, experience and current developments in the field of regional planning; co-operation in the field of long-range forecasting and establishment of regular co-operation between public research institutes concerned with regional planning; co-ordination in time and space of plans and measures relating to regional planning in frontier areas; meetings and discussions between officials and research workers in the field of regional planning, in order to harmonize and improve their training and familiarize them with the policies and techniques in use in other European states; harmonization of terminology, statistics and cartographical methods.

The second conference was held at La Grande Motte (France) in September 1973.

MONUMENTS AND SITES

The Committee on Monuments and Sites has three aims: to promote, at European and national level, close co-operation between public authorities responsible for historic buildings and those responsible for town and country planning, thus ensuring the integration of conservation measures in the activities of national and regional planners; to awaken the interest of European peoples in the cultural, social and economic value of their common architectural heritage, with the help of local authorities, non-governmental organizations, press and television, and youth and educational organizations; to provide technical assistance to those national and local public authorities which request it.

In 1973 the Committee launched a wide campaign which culminated in 1975 in the European Architectural Heritage Year, based on the slogan "A Future for our Past".

CONVENTIONS AND AGREEMENTS

EXTERNAL RELATIONS

Agreements providing for co-operation and exchange of documents and observers have been concluded with the United Nations and its Agencies, and with most of the European inter-governmental organizations. Particularly close relations exist with the European Communities, OECD, EFTA and Western European Union. Members of the European Parliament hold an annual joint meeting with members of the Consultative Assembly.

Israel is represented in the Consultative Assembly by observers, and certain European non-member countries have been invited to participate in or send observers to certain meetings of technical committees and specialized conferences.

Relations with non-member states, other organizations and non-governmental organizations are co-ordinated within the Secretariat by the Directorate of Political Affairs inside which an external relations division was established in 1972.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

The Treaty sets out the aims of the Community as to strengthen the ties between the member states in order to achieve a balanced economic growth, "the benefits of which shall be equitably shared". The main provision is for the Common Market, which for the first time is established as such in a legal text.

In addition to the general agreement to maintain a common customs tariff, the following arrangements have been made:

Tariffs and trade: the three countries pledge that they will not enter into any agreements with third countries whereby tariff concessions are not available to all three partners. There is free transit of goods within the community, and imports from outside the community are not subject to duty whilst in transit across one member state to another. There are some restrictions, however, on certain agricultural goods. There are arrangements for joint action to prevent loss of trade to areas outside the Community.

Industrial development: three measures have been taken: firstly, it was important that there should be an attempt to harmonize the fiscal incentives for industry in each country; therefore a working party was set up to investigate this whole subject and is currently preparing a report. Secondly, the Transfer Tax system was brought into force. This is intended to help deal with trade deficits that might result from community membership. A state which has a deficit with the other two in trade in manufactured goods may impose transfer taxes on the imports concerned in order to compensate for the deficit. The scheme is subject to certain conditions, and is intended only as a provisional measure.

Thirdly, the East African Development Bank was set up, described under a separate heading below.

Monetary policy: subject to exchange control laws that still apply, the Treaty provides for the free exchange of currency notes at official par value without exchange commission. Current account payments may be made between the three countries, but the partner states retain powers to control capital movements. The Governors of the three Central Banks meet at least four times a year.

EAST AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Kampala, Uganda

Established in 1967, the Bank's aims are as follows:

To provide financial and technical assistance to promote the industrial development of the member states; priority is given to industrial development in the relatively less developed countries and about 77 per cent of ordinary and special funds are to be invested in Tanzania and Uganda over consecutive five-year periods.

To further the aims of the East African Community by financing, wherever possible, projects designed to make the economies of the member states increasingly complementary in the industrial field.

To co-operate with national development agencies in Agriculture: The provisions of the Treaty relating to the Common Market have so far been applied with respect to manufactured goods only; it is hoped that in future a common agricultural market can be evolved, with a single system of prices and distribution.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS

Enlargement of the Community: Accession of new members is provided for. In 1968 negotiations were opened between the East African Community and Zambia, Ethiopia, Somalia and Burundi, who had all applied to join the Community.

An earlier suggestion had been to set up an Economic Community of Eastern Africa whose members were to be the East African Community, Zambia, Ethiopia and Burundi, and possibly Somalia, Malawi and Rwanda. The plan was discussed at a conference at Lusaka in 1965, sponsored by the UN Economic Commission for Africa; progress has gone no further than the initialling of a draft treaty in the following year at Addis Ababa, and the creation of a Provisional Council.

The Arusha Agreement: this trading agreement, with a number of concessions on both sides, links the three East African States with the European Economic Community. East African exports to the EEC are free of duty, but quotas are in force for coffee, cloves and tinned pineapple. In the other direction, there is a list of some sixty products that are admitted free of duty.

This agreement expired on January 31st, 1975.

The new Convention of Association: the three member states are included in the group of African, Caribbean and Pacific countries negotiating through a common spokesman for a new Convention of Association with the European Economic Community. The negotiations were intended to end in December 1974, enabling the parties to enter into the new association at the exact date when both existing arrangements, namely the Yaoundé Convention and the Arusha Agreement, expire. If this could not be achieved, these arrangements were to be provisionally extended.

the three countries in financing operations, and also with other institutions, both national and international, that are interested in the industrial development of member states.

The Bank's members are the three governments together with such other non-governmental bodies, enterprises and institutions whose membership is approved by the governments. Total initial subscriptions by the governments totals Sh. 120 million and the total authorized capital is Sh. 400 million. The Bank is administered by a Board of Directors appointed by the members.

Director-General and Chairman: IDDI SIMBA.

Directors: P. NDEGWA, S. K. MUKASA, E. P. MWALUKO.

DEPARTMENT OF LEGAL AFFAIRS

Legal assistance to member broadcasting organizations and permanent secretariat of the Legal Committee.

TECHNICAL CENTRE

Comprises the Technical Directorate, the Eurovision Control Centre, the Receiving and Measuring Centre, and the Technical Committee Secretariat.

Director: R. GRESSMANN (Federal Republic of Germany).

AIMS

To represent the members and establish relations with other broadcasting organizations or groups; promote research and the exchange of information on broadcasting; assist the development of broadcasting; seek the solution, by means of international co-operation, of any differences that may arise; supervise international broadcasting agreements.

ACTIVITIES 1974

Legal: The essential task of the EBU Legal Committee is to supervise international conventions dealing with the rights that those who collaborate in or provide services for programmes can claim, or the rights that broadcasting organizations themselves can claim for their programmes. The Legal Committee is now giving close attention to all the problems raised by the growth of cable television and also the cable distribution of radio programmes. It has drafted several model contracts between the distributor and the television broadcaster whose programmes are distributed.

In 1974, at a diplomatic conference in Brussels, a treaty was adopted which is intended to prevent the unauthorized distribution of programmes which have been broadcast by satellite.

EBU also assisted UNESCO during the year in the preparation of a draft copyright law for use in the developing countries of Africa.

Technical: the main categories of technical work are:

(a) Operations: includes the supervision and technical planning of international transmissions, and policy formulation on future trends in broadcasting practice. In 1974 a remote-switching system was introduced for Eurovision.

European Broadcasting Union

(b) Research and development: some of the research undertaken specifically requires a combined effort based internationally; attention is also given to problems posed by the introduction of new techniques.

Radio Programme Committee: f. 1964 to organize programme exchanges, which include music, drama, sports and educational programmes; the EBU concert seasons are broadcast live simultaneously in the member countries; exchange of musical publications; exchange of new ideas on radio programming.

An annual public jazz concert is held.

Television Programme Committee: organizes programme exchanges and news transmissions, within Eurovision and with other continents via satellite; exchanges recorded television material, including agricultural and educational programmes and films; organizes screening sessions and staff training courses.

In February and March the fourth of a series of workshops was held for producers and directors of children's television near Copenhagen, Denmark.

Eurovision: f. 1954; a permanent sound and vision network covering Europe and North Africa; 27 television services in 23 countries are linked. Israel and Jordan are connected by satellite. The technical aspects are organized at the technical centre, in Brussels. Eurovision's most important application is in the exchange of television news; in 1974 a mid-day news exchange was introduced, to supplement the afternoon and early evening exchanges. In October an experimental daily news exchange by satellite with the United States and Europe was introduced.

In 1973 (last complete statistical year) 663 programmes (709 in 1972) of a duration of 981 hours (1,139 in 1972) were transmitted on the Eurovision network and received by an average of 6.1 television services (10.4 in 1972). 5,423 news items were originated (4,564 in 1972) to an average of 12.6 television news services, giving a total of 68,155 relays (58,574 in 1974).

THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

THE EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY—EEC (The Common Market)

THE EUROPEAN ATOMIC ENERGY COMMUNITY—EURATOM

No final decision has been made on a headquarters for the Communities. Meetings of the principal organs take place in Brussels, Luxembourg and Strasbourg.

The ECSC was created in 1951 to pool the coal and steel production of the six original members (see below). It was seen as a first step towards a united Europe. The EEC and EURATOM were established in 1957, the former to create a Common Market and approximate economic policies, the latter to promote growth in nuclear industries. Political union is regarded as the ultimate aim of the Communities.

MEMBERS

Belgium	Federal Republic of Germany	Luxembourg
Denmark*	Ireland*	Netherlands
France	Italy	United Kingdom*

ORGANIZATION

The three Communities are legally separate, having been established by separate treaties, but they share central common institutions.* The four chief institutions are:

The Commission, which formulates policy and implements it;

The Council of Ministers, whose consent the Commission must seek before it can implement policy;

The European Parliament, which supervises the work of the executive organs;

The Court of Justice, which rules on the interpretation and application of the treaties.

In addition there are a number of consultative bodies and some special financial agencies.

* Originally each of the Communities had its own Commission (High Authority in the case of the ECSC) and Council, but a treaty transferring the powers of these bodies to a single Commission and a single Council came into effect in July 1967. It is planned eventually to merge the Communities and replace the three treaties by a single one. For this reason the Communities are often referred to in the singular, even in official publications, as "the Community".

Council of Ministers of the European Communities

170 rue de la Loi, Brussels, Belgium

The Council of Ministers has the double responsibility of ensuring the co-ordination of the general economic policies of the member states and of taking the decisions necessary for carrying out the Treaties.

The Council is composed of representatives of the member states, each Government delegating to it one of its members. In practice more than one minister from each member state may be present. The office of President is exercised for a term of six months by each member of the Council in rotation according to the alphabetical order of the member states. Meetings of the Council are called by the President acting on his own initiative or at the request of a member or of the Commission.

The conclusions of the Council can usually be taken by a majority vote; where conclusions require a qualified majority, the votes of its members are weighted as follows: France, Germany, Italy, and the U.K. 10, Belgium and the Netherlands 5, Denmark and Ireland 3, Luxembourg 2 (Total 58). Majorities are required for the adoption of any conclusions as follows: 41 votes in cases where the Treaty requires a previous proposal of the Commission, or 41 votes including a favourable vote by at least six members in all other cases. Abstentions by members either present or represented do not prevent the adoption by the Council of conclusions requiring unanimity. When the Council acts on a proposal of the Commission, it must, where the amendment of such a proposal is involved, act only by means of a unanimous vote; as long as the Council has not so acted, the Commission may amend its original proposal, particularly in cases where the European Parliament has been consulted. The Council may request the Commission to undertake any studies which the Council considers desirable for the achievement of the common objectives, and to submit to it any appropriate proposals.

PERMANENT REPRESENTATIVES

Preparation and co-ordination of the Council's work is entrusted to a Committee of Permanent Representatives, meeting in Brussels, consisting of the ambassadors of the member countries to the Communities, and aided by committees of national civil servants.

Court of Justice

Centre Européen Plateau de Kirchberg, Luxembourg

President of the Court:

ROBERT LECOURT (France)

Presidents of the Chambers:

ANDREAS DONNER (Netherlands)

Judges:

RICCARDO MONACO (Italy)

PIERRE PESCATORE (Luxembourg)

JOSSE MERTENS DE WILMARS (Belgium)

HANS KUTSCHER (Federal Republic of Germany)

Advocates-General:

GERHARD REISCHL (Federal Republic of Germany)

JEAN PIERRE WARNER (U.K.)

The primary task of the Court of Justice is to ensure the observance of law and justice in the interpretation and application of the Treaties setting up the three Communities. The President of the Court is appointed by the Judges from among their members for a renewable term of three years. The Judges and Advocates-General are appointed for renewable six-year terms by the Governments of the member states. A partial renewal of the Court takes place every three years, affecting four and five Judges alternately as well as two Advocates-General. The Court has full jurisdiction to settle all disputes within the Communities and to award penalties. It may review the legal validity of acts (other than recommendations or opinions) of the executives and is competent to give judgment on appeals by a member state or the executives on grounds of incompetence, of errors of substantial form, of infringement of the Treaties or of any legal provision relating to their application, or of abuse of power. Any natural or legal person may, under the same conditions, appeal against a decision addressed to him or against a decision which, although in the form of a regulation or decision addressed to another person, is of direct and specific concern to him.

The Court is also empowered to hear cases concerning compensation for damage, disputes between the Communities and their employees, fulfilment by member states of the obligations arising under the Statute of the European Investment Bank, arbitration clauses contained in any contract concluded, under public or private law, by or on behalf of the Communities and disputes between member states in connection with the objects of the Treaties, where such disputes are submitted to it under the terms of a compromise. It also gives pre-judicial rulings at the request of national courts on the interpretation of the Treaties or of Community legislation.

European Investment Bank

2 Place de Metz, Luxembourg

Board of Governors: Generally the Finance Ministers of the nine member states.

Board of Directors: There are 18 directors and 10 alternates. France, Germany, Italy and the U.K. nominate three directors and two alternates; Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands each nominate one director and, jointly, one alternate; Denmark and Ireland each nominate one director, and the Commission nominates one director and one alternate.

Management Committee:

President: YVES LE PORTZ (France).

Vice-Presidents: SJOERD BOOMSTRA (Netherlands),

LUCA ROSANIA (Italy), HORST-OTTO STEFFE (Germany), Sir RAYMOND BELL (U.K.).

Members: The nine Governments of the Community.

The task of the European Investment Bank is to contribute, by calling on the capital markets and its own resources, to the balanced and smooth development of the Common Market in the interest of the Community. For this purpose, the Bank is to grant loans and guarantees on a non-profit-making basis to facilitate the financing of projects for developing less-developed regions, for modernizing or converting enterprises or for creating new activities which are called for by the progressive establishment of the Common Market where such projects by their size or nature cannot be entirely financed by the various means available in each of the member states, and projects of common interest to several member states which similarly cannot be entirely financed by each of the member states.

Subscribed capital was raised to 2,025 million units of account (one unit = U.S. $1.20 at Dec. 1974) on enlargement. The amounts are subscribed by the member states as follows:

	million units
France . . . . .	450
Federal Republic of Germany . . . . .	450
United Kingdom . . . . .	450
Italy . . . . .	360
Belgium . . . . .	118.5
Netherlands . . . . .	118.5
Denmark . . . . .	60
Ireland . . . . .	15
Luxembourg . . . . .	3

The new member states will pay up to 20 per cent of their share of the subscribed capital, together with their contribution to the reserves, in five instalments up to June 30th, 1975. The Bank's own funds will then amount to approximately 600 million units of account.

Long-term loan and guarantee contracts signed by the Bank in 1972 totalled 526.8 million units of account, covering 36 individual operations and three global loans. Italy continued to receive the largest share (216 million units). 402 million units of account of the total went to promote regional development.

Official Administrative Committees

Monetary Committee. Advises the Commission and Council of Ministers on monetary matters, promotes the co-ordination of national monetary policies and reviews the monetary and financial situation of member countries and the general payments system. Consists of two members nominated by each of the Nine and two from the Commission.

Medium-term Economic Policy Committee. During 1965 and 1966 prepared a draft five-year programme setting out foreseeable trends in the Community economy and making general policy recommendations. The programme, adopted by the Council in February 1967, was to be brought up to date and expanded each year, to provide a framework for co-ordination of national economic policies and for the various common policies to be worked out at Community level. Comprises representatives of national governments and of the Commission.

Budgetary Policy Committee. Composed of leading officials responsible for drawing up the budgets of member governments, and of Commission representatives.

Consultative Bodies

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COMMITTEE

(2 rue Ravenstein, Brussels)

President: A. LAPPAS.

Vice-Presidents: H. CANONGE, A. MASPRONZ.

Members: 144 persons representing economic and social fields, 12 each from Belgium and the Netherlands, 24 each from France, Germany, Italy and the U.K., 9 from Denmark and Ireland, and 6 from Luxembourg. One-third represent each side of industry and one-third the general economic interest. Appointed for a renewable term of four years by the unanimous vote of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities (Euratom is also represented in this Committee). Members are appointed in their personal capacity and are not bound by any mandatory instructions.

The Committee is advisory and is consulted by the Council of Ministers or by the Commission of the European Communities, particularly with regard to agriculture, free movement of workers, harmonization of laws and transport.

ECSC CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE

Members: Not less than 60 and not more than 81 representing, in equal proportions, producers, workers and consumers and dealers in the coal and steel industries.

The Committee is advisory and is attached to the High Authority (Commission). Its members are appointed by the Council of Ministers for two years and are not bound by any mandate from the organizations that designated them in the first place.

Agricultural Advisory Committees. Sixteen advisory committees, one for each major commodity, give advice to the Commission. The committees are composed of representatives of various professional organizations.

In addition to the consultative bodies listed above there are some 400 pressure groups representing every type of interest within the Community (such as the farming organizations just referred to). All these hold unofficial talks with the Commission.

Special Funds

Unit of Account (u.a.)

The Community system of accounting is based on the unit of account (u.a.), which is equivalent in value to the United States dollar before August 1971. As at December 1974, the parity was 1 u.a. = U.S. $1.20.

SOCIAL FUND

The Fund was established under the EEC Treaty to improve opportunities for employment within the Community by covering 50 per cent of expenses incurred by a member state in retraining or resettling workers or in granting benefits to workers whose employment was temporarily reduced. A reform of its operations took effect from May 1972, under which, the Social Fund was called upon to act directly in two main forms: (a) action by the Fund, decided on by the Council of Ministers (acting on a qualified majority) when the employment situation is threatened by measures taken in pursuit of Community policy (industrial, commercial, agricultural, monetary, etc.); (b) action on behalf of certain industries, enterprises or regions in the case of difficulties not arising directly from the functioning of the Common Market. Handicapped persons, elderly persons, women, young people, etc., may benefit from the latter kind of aid. The reform was an important step towards harmonizing social policies within the Community. Help from the old Social Fund in 1974 amounted to 52.8 million u.a., for retraining and resettlement. Assistance for pilot projects in the year amounted to 0.6 million u.a.

The new Social Fund provided assistance amounting to 254.5 million u.a. during 1974, most of which was also for retraining schemes.

EUROPEAN AGRICULTURAL FUND

Created in 1962 the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (or FEOGA as it is known after its French initials) is administered by the Commission. The Guidance Section contributes credits towards the structural reform of agriculture. The Guarantee Section, under which the bulk of the Community's budget has always been spent, acts in two ways. The prices of imports are kept at a threshold price by means of variable import levies, and the internal market is supported by the authorities who are committed to buy at an intervention price. Export refunds are also provided by this section. In comparison with other Community expenditure the relative importance of the Agricultural Fund is gradually diminishing. It is the intention of the Commission to replace credits allocated for price policy (intervention buying) by increasing credits for structural policy.

EUROPEAN MONETARY CO-OPERATION FUND

Created on April 6th, 1973, the Fund was intended to begin by taking over tasks already being carried out between member states. It will take over the running of the Community's special narrow margin system whereby members' currencies fluctuate against each other within limits of 2.25 per cent, compared with the 4.5 per cent permitted under international rules. The Fund will also put the settlement of debits and credits under the scheme on a multilateral basis, acting as a clearing agent, instead of leaving the two countries concerned in a support operation to settle bilaterally.

In addition it will take over the management of the Community's system of short-term credits, which central banks can grant to a partner in temporary balance of payments difficulties.

EUROPEAN DEVELOPMENT FUND

This fund was set up in 1958 to make non-repayable grants to the 18 African states associated with the Community by the Yaoundé Convention (see below External Relations of the Community). The first fund allocation was for $581 million for the period 1958-63. For the second allocation of $800 million during 1964-69 the fund also provided aid to the territories other than the 18, namely those still linked to European member states. Under the second Yaoundé Convention the Third European Development Fund was fixed at $1,000 million of which $918 million was scheduled for the 18. In December 1974 total commitments from the Third Fund had risen to $793.7 million since operations began in January 1971. Only a fraction of the Second Fund remained to be disbursed. Community aid to the developing countries emphasizes investment to boost production and modernize economic and social infrastructure, general technical co-operation and measures to encourage marketing and sales promotion.

With the new agreement between the EEC and the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries, a Fourth Fund was to begin operations in 1975. A decision had not yet been reached on the amount by the end of 1974.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT FUND

The Paris summit meeting of 1974 approved the establishment of the Regional Fund of 1,300 million units of account to be shared among the poorer regions of the Community over the period 1975-78.

This is to include the transfer of 150 million u.a. of credits not committed from the Agricultural Fund's guidance section. The fund is to be shared out in the following proportions:

Belgium . . . . .	1.5
Denmark . . . . .	1.3
France . . . . .	15.0
Federal Republic of Germany . . . . .	6.4
Ireland . . . . .	6.0
Italy . . . . .	40.0
Luxembourg . . . . .	0.1
Netherlands . . . . .	1.7
United Kingdom . . . . .	28.0

A sum of 6 million u.a., left over by a reduction in the shares of other members, was allotted to Ireland.

The Fund will be available for both private and public projects. According to the Commission's original proposals the Fund could contribute up to 15 per cent of the total cost of a private project; and up to 30 per cent of the public expenditure on new infrastructure. More generally, the Fund can contribute up to 50 per cent of the total national regional aid in each case.

The first 300 million u.a. were to be spent in 1975, followed by 500 million in each of the succeeding years.

AIMS AND ACTIVITIES

The ECSC achieved its chief aims—a common market for coal and steel—in the 1950s. The goals of the EURATOM treaty are still being developed. The EEC, whose treaty lays out a much more far-reaching task than the other two treaties, set itself a transition period of 12 years in the first instance to establish a Common Market. Towards the end of the transition period the Heads of State or Government of the Six met at The Hague, in December 1969, and, declaring that the transition period was over, agreed to advance towards full economic and monetary union. After the negotiations for the enlargement of the Community, the Heads of State or Government of the Nine met in Paris in October 1972 and affirmed the principle of advance towards full European union. This is to be the subject of a series of reports which the main institutions of the Community are to present by June 1975; the Belgian Prime Minister, Mr. Leo Tindemans, was also invited to submit a further report by the end of the year.

COMMON MARKET

Free Movement of Goods. In accordance with the EEC treaty the Community established between 1958 and 1968 a customs union covering the exchange of all goods, the prohibition of customs duties on exports and imports between member states, and the adoption of a common external tariff in relations with third countries. Quota restrictions on internal trade were abolished by 1962, while the removal of internal tariff barriers had been achieved by July 1st, 1968. Common markets for coal and steel and for nuclear materials had been achieved by 1955 and 1959 respectively. While tariff barriers have been removed, however, (or in the case of the new members are being removed) the free movement of goods is in practice restricted by a great many non-tariff barriers, such as national regulations on health and safety. The Commission proposes to deal with these as soon as possible.

Free Movement of Persons. Free movement of workers between member countries became effective on July 1st, 1968. Workers may seek employment anywhere in the Community, though governments retain the right, in some cases, to restrict free movement of labour. Community workers now enjoy equal treatment in every important field relating to unemployment, including matters relating to taxation, social insurance and dependants. Medical treatment on the same basis as that received by nationals is also available. (See below, Social Policy, for further details.)

Free Movement of Services. The Right of Establishment—the right to engage in business and supply services anywhere in the Community—is provided for in the EEC treaty. Progress has been slow in this field because of inherent difficulties such as the problem of mutual recognition of differing professional qualifications, though some progress has been achieved in banking, nursing and insurance. Many aspects of company law also require to be harmonized.

Free Movement of Capital. This is also provided for in the EEC treaty. In practice the provisions have only been implemented in a modest way. Free movement of capital is, however, entailed by the plan to achieve full economic and monetary union.

Approximation of Fiscal Policy. From January 1st, 1973, a single system of Value Added Tax was applied throughout the six original member countries, and applied throughout the new member countries from April 1st, 1973. The rates themselves differ, but will be harmonized eventually.

A first series of proposals to harmonize excise duties was approved in 1972 by the Commission. Calls have also been made for the harmonization of some direct taxes, the removal of double taxation, and the harmonization of company taxation.

COMMON POLICIES

Agriculture. The main features of the common policy on agriculture, adopted by stages since 1962, are:

- (a) the establishing of a common market for almost all major agricultural commodities—cereals, pigmeat, eggs and poultry, rice, milk and dairy products, beef and veal, fruit and vegetables including manufactures thereof, wine, oils and fats, sugar, non-food horticultural products, tobacco, flax and hemp, seed, fish, hops;
- (b) support buying, through the Agricultural Fund (see p. 181), to ensure that prices do not fall below agreed levels;
- (c) a system of protective levies on agricultural imports from third countries;
- (d) the rationalization of Community agriculture.

For much of the 1960s the activities of the Community in the agricultural sector lay in support buying. The agricultural rationalization programme was revived in the "Manholt Plan" proposed by the Commission in 1968, which aimed at increasing the average size of farms, encouraging the movement of labour off the land, and reducing the amount of land in the Community devoted to agriculture. Action to realize these aims was taken by the Council in directives of 1972. In November 1973 a number of significant proposals were made by the Commission. These were: reducing the amount spent under the Guarantee section of the Agricultural Fund by about 1,000 million units of account by 1978 (mainly in the cereals sector and in dairy products); the reduction of demand/supply imbalances existing for certain products, notably butter; and the simplification of some of the mechanisms for implementing the Common Agricultural Policy, by reducing the number of regulations (some 200) relating to this sector. The Commission stressed that for these proposals to succeed a certain financial sacrifice on the part of producers would be required.

Transport. The bases for a common policy covering road, rail and inland water transport were agreed in 1965. In December 1968 a timetable was adopted, affecting primarily road transport and the harmonization of conditions of competition. Community licences for cross-frontier road transport were first issued on a limited scale in 1968 to eliminate the normal international transport formalities. In October 1971 agreement was reached on common rules for cross-frontier passenger transport and on the revision of maximum driving-times for short-distance road transport. In May 1972 it was decided to adopt before 1980 common rules for the maximum size and weight of lorries crossing frontiers.

Competition. Both the EEC and ECSC treaties make provision for action against practices which restrict or distort competition in intra-Community trading (competition within individual countries is excluded). Since 1961 the Commission has ruled on a large number of inter-company restrictive agreements and has become increasingly active in the anti-trust field. Following the failure of its case against the American company, Continental Can, the Commission made proposals in 1973 for strengthening the provisions of the EEC treaty on anti-trust law.

Current priorities are greater road safety and the co-ordination of infrastructure investments.

Coal and Steel. The ECSC treaty, signed on April 18th, 1951, came into force on July 25th, 1952. By the end of 1954 nearly all barriers to trade in coal, coke, steel, pig-iron and scrap iron had been removed. The Community fixes prices and imposes fines on firms infringing treaty rules. The ECSC provides financial aid to, settles and retrain workers whose jobs are put at risk by technical developments in the coal and steel industries. Funds for this are raised by levies on coal and steel production, the rates for which are decided annually. Research and administrative expenses are also covered by these funds. The ECSC is additionally empowered to facilitate the carrying out of investment and redevelopment programmes by granting loans to enterprises or by guaranteeing other loans which it may contract.

Credit operations have increased considerably in 1974; up to the end of November, loans amounted to 350 million u.a., compared to 286 million in 1973 and 188 million in 1972. The loans in the eleven months included 238 million u.a. for the iron and steel industry, 53 million for the coal industry and 12 million for thermal power stations; loans for reconversion amounted to 42 million u.a., and housing loans 4.2 million.

Crude steel and rolled steel production in the Community and the three applicant states rose from 250.7 million metric tons in 1972 to 272 million in 1973. Coal production for 1973 was estimated as approximately 254.3 million metric tons, equivalent to 178 million tons of oil.

Nuclear Energy. The treaty setting up EURATOM came into force on January 1st, 1958.

EURATOM's role is to create "the conditions necessary for the speedy establishment and growth of nuclear industries in the Community" by stimulating and co-ordinating public and private research in atomic energy, by ensuring the free flow of information, and by encouraging the building of power reactors. EURATOM also has various responsibilities of a regulatory character, establishing common laws and rules in the atomic field throughout the Community. A common market in nuclear materials was introduced on January 1st, 1959, which eliminates internal import and export duties on nuclear products; a common tariff is applied to third countries; assistance is granted to the free movement of specialized labour, and a common insurance scheme against nuclear risks has been established.

The supply of nuclear fuel is supervised or negotiated by an Agency, financially independent and with an option on the purchase of materials within the Community. Contracts with third countries are the exclusive right of the Agency. EURATOM is also the exclusive owner of special fissile materials.

Research: a four-year programme was set out for EURATOM's research activities by the Council of Ministers in February 1973, which is to cost 160 million u.a. and includes a move away from purely nuclear research.

The programme is to be carried out at the Joint Research Centre or under various types of contracts with bodies in the member countries. Ispra is the largest of the four establishments of the Centre. A second is in operation (the Central Nuclear Measurements Bureau) at Mol, Belgium; a third is at Karlsruhe (the European Transuranium Elements Institute); the Dutch Petten Centre is the fourth under an agreement which came into force in 1962.

The main field of research is the safety of reactors. Research into non-nuclear fields will include environmental protection, industrial standards and satellite prospection of the earth's resources.

Co-operation with other countries and organizations: An important section of EURATOM's research work falls under agreements for joint research with other countries and international organizations.

EURATOM is participating in the research projects of the Nuclear Energy Agency of the OECD, including the building and operation of the high-temperature gas-cooled DRAGON reactor at Winfrith Heath in Dorset, United Kingdom.

Five of the Six (all except France) signed the treaty on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons which came into force in 1970. Under the treaty the IAEA became responsible for control and inspection in all non-nuclear weapon-states, but at the end of 1972 the IAEA and the Community agreed that inspection would be carried out by the Community, with the IAEA merely verifying the activities of the inspectors.

Industrial, Scientific and Technological Policy. In March 1970 the Commission outlined a plan for a common industrial policy aimed at stimulating the growth of industry and technology on a Continent-wide scale.

In June 1972 the Commission proposed that the Community's overall responsibility for scientific research and technological development should be recognized, that the information and instruments to carry this out should be provided, that a 300 million dollar grant for research and development should be provided for 1973-75, and that new guidelines should be decided for EURATOM's Joint Research Centre, whose activities would go beyond the nuclear sector. Committees were proposed to develop this programme.

At the Paris summit in October 1972, the Heads of State or Government decided to establish "a single industrial base for the Community as a whole". This meant the elimination of technical, fiscal and legal barriers hindering mergers between firms, the "rapid adoption of a European company statute", the "opening up of public sector purchases", the promotion "on a European scale of competitive firms in the field of high technology", the transformation and conversion of declining industries", and the maintenance of competition.

In January 1974 the Council approved the scientific and technological policy programme presented to it by the Commission. The main features of the programme were: the creation of a committee for scientific and technical research (CREST) charged with the co-ordination of all aspects of national research policies not subject to military or industrial secrecy; co-operation with the European Science Foundation; action on research projects in support of Community policy in various fields; and a pilot project on a technological forecasting unit.

Energy. A protocol on a common energy policy was signed in 1964 and basic principles for a policy were approved by the Council in 1969 but progress has been hampered by the fact that the different sectors of energy supply fall under the provisions of different treaties, and by the variations in the world energy market.

In January 1972 the Council agreed that member states should notify the Commission each year of investment plans for oil, natural gas and electricity, and of import programmes for hydrocarbons (petroleum and natural gas). During 1972 the Commission prepared proposals for a policy on the trading and procurement of hydrocarbons.

At the Paris summit in October 1972 the Heads of State and Government invited the Community institutions to "formulate as soon as possible an energy policy guaranteeing certain and lasting supplies under satisfactory economic conditions". The need for such a policy was re-emphasized at the Copenhagen summit meeting in December 1973, and also in a resolution adopted by the Council of Ministers which committed the Community to working out a long-term energy policy.

As far as a medium-term energy policy is concerned, the Commission set out a "New Strategy" in May 1974, aiming to increase the Community's independence of oil supplies from abroad.

In November 1974 the Commission approved objectives for 1985. It recommended an increase in use of nuclear energy, the maintenance of coal production, an increase in coal imports, stabilization of consumption of crude oil and an increase in use of natural gas.

It estimated that a 15 per cent saving of energy by 1985 was possible.

At their meeting in Paris in December 1974, the heads of Government discussed the possibilities for co-operation between oil exporting and oil importing countries.

Economic and Monetary Union. In February 1971 the Council decided on a ten-year, three-stage plan creating a zone where persons, goods, services and capital would be able to move more freely, and where firms would be able to develop on a Community scale. Features of the first stage (to the end of 1973) were the narrowing of exchange rate margins, the creation of a medium-term reserves pool, the co-ordination of short and medium-term economic and budgetary policies, meetings of finance ministers and central bank governors, adoption of a joint position on international monetary issues, harmonization of taxes, creation of a European Monetary Co-operation Fund, and the economic development of backward regions in the Community.

The currency crisis of 1971 prevented the implementation in that year of the narrowing of exchange rate margins, but the whole plan was re-launched in March 1972, this time with the participation of the four countries then acceding (Denmark, Ireland, Norway and the U.K.). The narrower margins procedure came into effect on May 1st, but in June the U.K. floated the pound and withdrew from the agreement. Denmark and Ireland also withdrew from the agreement, although Denmark re-entered it in October of the same year.

At the 1972 summit it was decided that fixed but adjustable parities between currencies were essential, and mechanisms for defence and mutual support would be set up.

A common attitude to international monetary reform was to be adopted based on fixed but adjustable parities, convertibility, regulation of the world supply of liquidities, reduced reserve roles for national currencies, effective and fair adjustment, equal rights for all, the need to lessen the unstabilizing effects of short-term capital movements, and the taking into account of the interests of developing countries.

The Monetary Co-operation Fund was established on April 6th, 1973, in Luxembourg, but its operations have been limited owing to the separate floats of the currencies of member countries. In January 1973, Italy joined Ireland and the United Kingdom by floating its currency and in January 1974 France also floated its currency.

Employment and Social Policy. The ECSC treaty gave skilled workers the right to move freely from one country to another while retaining their benefit rights and continuity of contributions. Grants and loans for the retraining and resettlement of workers, where necessary, were provided. The EEC and EURATOM treaties sought to widen the application of these provisions and workers now have the right to the main unemployment benefits anywhere in the Community. Other connected rights, such as the right to retire in any country, are being introduced.

In November 1970 the Six decided to try to harmonize social security policies, prepare a Community social budget and continue their studies in depth on factors influencing employment. The reform of the Social Fund (see p. 181) was adopted in February 1971, coming into operation in 1972. The Council agreed in 1972 to study the situation of migrant workers in the Community.

A Social Action Programme for 1974-76 was formally adopted by the Council in January 1974. Seven immediate actions were announced, the first three of which were carried out at the June 1974 Council meeting. The Ministers agreed to allow assistance for the handicapped and for migrant workers from the Social Fund; approved an action programme for handicapped workers; also a European General Industrial Safety Committee was set up, and the Mines Safety and Health Commission was given wider competence.

The agenda for the next meeting covers standardization of laws relating to mass dismissals, a directive concerning the principle of equal pay for equal work between men and women, the fixing before 1975 of the principle of the 40-hour week and (before 1976) of a four-week annual holiday, and the setting up of a European Foundation for the improvement of the environment and of living and working conditions.

The Commission had also undertaken to submit a second set of proposals to the Council concerning:

1. an initial action programme for migrant workers;
2. a European vocational training centre;
3. harmonization of laws for the protection of workers, rights in the case of mergers.

Further proposals were expected to be made to the Council, for a further series of priority actions, during 1974:

1. action to achieve equality between men and women in employment, training and promotion;
2. an initial action programme for health and safety at work;
3. the legal framework to permit specific measures to combat poverty.

Finally, two significant aspects of the Programme were being dealt with outside the system of proposals to the Council as outlined above. These are:

1. measures to co-ordinate employment policies and social protection policies;
2. measures to involve workers in the decision-making process in their companies, and to involve both management and labour in the activities of the EEC.

Regional Policy. Following a Commission memorandum of October 1969 an annual review of depressed regions, the establishment of a permanent committee on regional development and the creation of an interest-free rebate fund for regional development have all been under consideration.

The Heads of State and Government decided at the Paris summit that "high priority" should be given to correcting regional imbalances. They invited the Commission to prepare a report on the regions without delay and make appropriate proposals. They undertook to co-ordinate regional policy in future, and, accordingly, invited the institutions to create a Regional Development Fund (see page 181).

The Agricultural Fund, the Social Fund, ECSC funds and European Investment Bank assistance have also contributed to the backward regions of the Community.

Environment Policy. A special unit on environmental problems was established in 1971 and in the following year the Commission presented a programme for the protection of the environment, pinpointing industrial pollution, with special reference to the Rhine.

The communiqué of the Paris summit emphasized the importance of an environmental policy, and invited the Community institutions to establish, before July 31st, 1973, a programme of action with a specific timetable.

In April 1974 the Commission put forward detailed proposals embodying three different types of project: the reduction and prevention of pollutants and nuisances; the improvement of the environment and of the quality of life; and co-operation with relevant international organizations.

Educational Policy. The Education Ministers of the Six met for the first time in November 1971 to discuss the proposals for a European university and for mutual recognition of academic qualifications made in the EEC treaty. They agreed to create a European postgraduate university institute in Florence and to set up a group to study the creation of a European education development centre. The Florence institute was consequently established; courses were planned for 600 postgraduate students.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

Under the EEC treaty European states may apply for full membership of the Community, while overseas countries having special relations with member states and other countries in the world are invited to form Association agreements with the Community. Trade links and other agreements are also possible and the Community has a common policy in most aspects of its trade relations with third countries. The Community participates as a unit in GATT arrangements and, from January 1st, 1973, all countries were obliged to trade with the Community as a unit.

Association in Europe. Association agreements have been signed between the Community and Greece (1962), Turkey (1964), Malta (1971) and Cyprus (1972). Since the Greek military coup of 1967 the agreement with Greece has been in suspense, but during 1974 discussions with the EEC were opened by the new Greek government. Negotiations with Turkey for entry into a transition period, with mutual tariff reductions over 22 years, concessions on Turkish farm exports and financial aid, were concluded in 1970. The Maltese agreement is a two-part preferential one, intended to lead to customs union after ten years. Proposals to improve the agreement are under consideration.

Association with Overseas Territories. The EEC treaty provided for links with overseas states and territories having special relations with member states (i.e. colonies, etc.). Many of the territories thus designated had achieved independence by 1961 and the Community offered to re-negotiate. As a result 17 African states and Madagascar entered into an Association with the Community known as the Yaoundé Convention.

Yaoundé Convention. There have been two Conventions (1964-69 and 1969-75) under which the following states are associated with the Community: Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo People's Republic, Dahomey, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Rwanda, Senegal, Somalia, Togo, Upper Volta and Zambia. The Association provides for a free trade area, a system of financial aids for social and economic development in the Yaoundé states, and for several institutions of Association. Financial aid is provided through the European Development Fund (EDF), set up by the Community in 1958, to make non-repayable grants to the overseas territories. Under the second Yaoundé Convention EDF resources were increased to 1,000 million dollars, of which 918 million was for the 18. The bulk of this was scheduled for grants, but some was for "soft" loans, and 90 million was a normal loan from the European Investment Bank.

Commonwealth "Associates". In a Protocol attached to the Treaty of Accession, signed in January 1972, the Community offered to create relationships with developing Commonwealth countries. These could be of three sorts: (a) participation in the Yaoundé Convention when it came to be renegotiated in 1975; (b) participation in a less comprehensive convention; (c) simple trade agreements.

African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries. In July 1973 the Community invited 42 developing states (the 19 Yaoundé associates, the 19 Commonwealth "associates", plus Ethiopia, Liberia, Sudan and Guinea) to a conference in Brussels, at which it was agreed that official talks would begin in October 1973.

Negotiations were begun for an agreement replacing the Yaoundé Convention. By the end of 1974 the number of states in the ACP group had increased to 46. The concluding round of negotiations at ministerial level was expected to be held in January 1975.

The new association was to provide reciprocal trade concessions, with the exception that the developing countries might introduce tariffs to protect their own industries. The ACP countries will receive assistance for five years from a Fourth European Development Fund, the size of which was yet to be agreed in January 1975. The Commission had offered a Fund of 3,000 million u.a., whilst the ACP states were insisting on 8,000 million.

Two other problems were yet to be dealt with at the January meeting: the stabilization of export receipts, and the price of sugar. Under the stabilization scheme, the EEC would compensate for a slump in export earnings from an agreed list of primary products. It had not been agreed whether this assistance was to be repayable later, in times of boom.

As regards sugar, the Community had offered to guarantee the internal EEC price as a minimum offer, leaving the overseas sugar producers free to negotiate higher prices; the producers, however, were hoping for a higher guaranteed price.

Trade Agreements. The Community has concluded a number of other agreements with third countries and is gradually evolving an overall policy on external trade.

Agreement with EFTA. In November 1970 the Community began talks with the non-applicant members of EFTA—Austria, Finland, Iceland, Portugal, Sweden and Switzerland—who were seeking closer association but not full membership. In July 1972 bilateral free trade Agreements were signed. The industrial sector is the only one generally covered by the Agreements though special arrangements are made for a few agricultural products. The free trade system achieved under EFTA is to be preserved and extended to the Community over a transition period. For certain "sensitive" products an extended transition period is provided. Procedures to ensure harmonious free trade and guarantee equal treatment for products originating in third countries are laid down. There are special provisions for trade in coal and steel, for the abolition of quotas and certain taxes, and for the abolition of practices restricting competition. A joint committee meets twice a year.

Mediterranean Agreements. Links with Mediterranean countries include Association agreements with Greece, Turkey, Malta and Cyprus (see above) and, under provisions laid down in the EEC treaty, with Tunisia and Morocco (came into force in September 1969 for five years). Negotiations for an association with Algeria are under way. There are also preferential trade agreements with Spain and Israel (in force since October 1970) and with Egypt and Lebanon (in force from January 1973). A free trade agreement exists with Portugal under the arrangement with EFTA (see above) and a non-preferential trade agreement exists with Yugoslavia (in force since May 1970).

European Communities

The idea of a "global" approach to the Mediterranean area was raised in the Council in June 1972, and in October the Commission submitted proposals for an approach to the whole region, including the gradual creation of a Mediterranean free trade area, arrangements for technical and financial aid, and other general measures of co-operation.

U.S.A. The Community has had many trade links with the U.S.A. In February 1972 the Community and the U.S. laid the basis for wide-ranging talks in the context of GATT which began in 1973.

Eastern Europe. Common rules have been formulated for trade with the state trading countries of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Latin America. In June 1971 the Community and 22 Latin American states agreed to set up machinery for a permanent dialogue to strengthen political and economic co-operation. Non-preferential trade agreements with the EEC were signed by Argentina in November 1971, Uruguay in April 1973 and Brazil in December 1973.

Asia. India signed a special trade co-operation agreement with the Community on December 17th, 1973. Agreements on particular commodities have been or are being negotiated with most non-Communist Asian countries. Common rules apply for trade with the Communist countries.

Generalized Preferences. In July 1971 the Community introduced a scheme of generalized preferences to 91 developing countries. Under the scheme exemption from customs duties is granted on manufactures and semi-manufactures imported from the developing countries. It was decided in June 1972 to extend the scheme to a further 12 countries from January 1973. In June 1973 it was also decided that Romania, Malta and Turkey should benefit under the scheme from January 1974.

FINANCE

The basic scale of contributions to the EEC budget from the six original members, as amended in April 1970, is expressed in percentages, as follows:

Belgium	. . . .	6.80
France	. . . .	32.60
Federal Republic of Germany	. . . .	32.90
Italy	. . . .	20.20
Luxembourg	. . . .	0.20
Netherlands	. . . .	7.30

Contributions from the three new members of the EEC were set out in the Treaty of Accession as follows, in percentages:

Denmark	. . . .	2.46
Ireland	. . . .	0.61
United Kingdom	. . . .	19.32

Only a percentage of these contributions, however, is to be paid during the transitional period after their accession; their contributions are to be brought up to the full amount in stages, increasing yearly as follows, again in percentages:

1973	. . . .	45.0	1976	. . . .	79.5
1974	. . . .	56.0	1977	. . . .	92.0
1975	. . . .	67.5

During this period the six original members are to contribute to the remainder of the budget after these amounts are paid, on the same percentage scale as previously.

"Own resources" financing system: The Community's definitive financing system started to come into force on January 1st, 1971. Over the seven years ending on January 1st, 1978, the Community is introducing a system whereby its budget will be provided by automatic payments made over by the member governments from the revenue they collect in import levies and duties, and part of the standard value-added tax introduced or being introduced in all the countries. From 1978 the Community will be financially autonomous. At the same time, the powers of budgetary control by the European Parliament will be increased.

During the first phase, up to the end of 1974, of the introduction of the system, the Community's resources were provided from:

- the total value of the levies collected on agricultural imports;
- an annually increasing proportion of the revenue from customs duties on other imports, starting with up to half of the total levies and duties (less 10 per cent returned to the member states for administrative costs of collecting duties and levies);
- direct contributions from the member states, according to an agreed key, to cover any shortfall.

Since the beginning of 1975 the Community's revenue from its six original members is drawn entirely from the levies and the total customs duties, and a proportion of the proceeds of value added tax. Direct contributions are no longer paid.

For the three new members this system is being introduced by stages over a transitional period which will continue until 1978.

An adjustment to the Community's financing system was agreed in principle by the heads of government at their meeting in December 1974 in Paris: members' contributions should be allowed to change to keep a closer relation to their shares in the gross national product of the Community; this was decided to avoid the danger of imposing unfair financial burdens on any of the member states.

At the same time a new system of accounting for expenditure is being introduced, dividing the Commission's budget into two categories: compulsory, obligatory under the treaties, and non-compulsory items. The European Parliament, with its increased powers of decision on the budget, has the final word on the non-compulsory expenditure, while the Council remains the ultimate authority for the compulsory category.

As a comparison with national public expenditure of the member states, the Commission's budget for 1975 represents about 2.2 per cent of all the budgets of the nine in 1974.

An advisory committee had been set up earlier to apply the regulation on the Community's own resources. Composed of up to five representatives for each member state, it is chaired by a representative of the Commission, which will provide the secretariat. Introduction of the Community's own resources required a treaty amending the Rome and Paris Treaties and the Merger Treaty.

Parliamentary control: At the Council meeting of December 22nd, 1969, the six governments agreed on a draft resolution on the powers of budgetary control to be granted to the European Parliament after 1975. The draft resolution provided for four stages in adopting the budget: (1) The Council draws up an estimate of the expenditure and of revenue, the latter including the rate of value-added tax to be apportioned to the Community's budget; (2) This draft budget may be amended by the European Parliament by a majority vote of its members, though any change in the VAT rate must be within the limits set by the Council Act establishing the Community tax; (3) The Council, acting by qualified majority vote, may amend the Parliament's amendments; (4) The Parliament may amend the Council's amendments in the three stages by a vote of a majority of its members and subject to three-fifths of the votes cast being in favour. Should the Parliament not have given a decision within a fixed period the Council's amendments made in the third stage shall be deemed to be adopted.

SUMMARY OF EEC TREATY (TREATY OF ROME)

PART I. PRINCIPLES

The aim of the Community is, by establishing a Common Market and progressively approximating the economic policies of the member states, to promote throughout the Community a harmonious development of economic activities, a continuous and balanced expansion, an increased stability, an accelerated raising of the standard of living and closer relations between its member states. With these aims in view, the activities of the Community will include:

- (a) the elimination between member states of customs duties and of quantitative restrictions in regard to the importation and exportation of goods, as well as of all other measures with equivalent effect;
- (b) the establishment of a common customs tariff and a common commercial policy towards third countries;
- (c) the abolition between member states of the obstacles to the free movement of persons, services and capital;
- (d) the inauguration of a common agricultural policy;
- (e) the inauguration of a common transport policy;
- (f) the establishment of a system ensuring that competition shall not be distorted in the Common Market;
- (g) the application of procedures that will make it possible to co-ordinate the economic policies of member states and to remedy disequilibria in their balance of payments;
- (h) the approximation of their respective municipal law to the extent necessary for the functioning of the Common Market;
- (i) the creation of a European Social Fund in order to improve the possibilities of employment for workers and to contribute to the raising of their standard of living;

- (j) the establishment of a European Investment Bank intended to facilitate the economic expansion of the Community through the creation of new resources; and
- (k) the association of overseas countries and territories with the Community with a view to increasing trade and to pursuing jointly their effort toward economic and social development.

Member states, acting in close collaboration with the institutions of the Community, shall co-ordinate their respective economic policies to the extent that is necessary to attain the objectives of the Treaty; the institutions of the Community shall take care not to prejudice the internal and external financial stability of the member states. Within the field of application of the Treaty and without prejudice to certain special provisions which it contains, any discrimination on the grounds of nationality shall be hereby prohibited.

The Common Market shall be progressively established in the course of a transitional period of twelve years. This transitional period shall be divided into three stages of four years each; the length of each stage may be modified in accordance with the provisions set out below.

Transition from the first to the second stage shall be conditional upon a confirmatory statement to the effect that the essence of the objectives laid down in the Treaty for the first stage has been in fact achieved, and that all obligations have been observed. Failing a unanimous vote by the Council of Ministers at the end of the fourth year, the first stage shall be automatically extended for a period of one year. A similar procedure may be followed at the end of the sixth year if the first stage has in fact been extended. If at the end of the seventh year a unanimous vote is not forthcoming to proceed to the second stage, the Council of

European Communities

Ministers shall appoint an Arbitration Board whose decision shall bind both member states and Community institutions. The second and third stages may not be extended or curtailed except by a decision of the Council acting by means of a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission. These provisions shall not have the effect of extending the transitional period beyond a total duration of fifteen years after the date of entry into force of the Treaty.

PART II. BASES OF THE COMMUNITY

FREE MOVEMENT OF GOODS

Member states shall refrain from introducing between themselves any new import or export customs duties, or charges with equivalent effect, and from increasing such duties or charges as they apply in their commercial relations with each other. Member states shall progressively abolish between themselves all import and export customs duties, charges with an equivalent effect, and also customs duties of a fiscal nature. Independently of these provisions, any member state may, in the course of the transitional period, suspend in whole or in part the collection of import duties applied by it to products imported from other member states, or may carry out the foreseen reductions more rapidly than laid down in the Treaty if its general economic situation and the situation of the sector so concerned permit.

A common customs tariff shall be established, which, subject to certain conditions (especially with regard to the Italian tariff), shall be at the level of the arithmetical average of the duties applied in the four customs territories (i.e. France, Germany, Italy and Benelux) covered by the Community. This customs tariff shall be applied in its entirety not later than at the date of the expiry of the transitional period. Member states may follow an independent accelerating process similar to that allowed for reduction of inter-Community customs duties.

Member states shall refrain from introducing between themselves any new quantitative restrictions or measures with equivalent effect, and existing restrictions and measures shall be abolished not later than at the end of the first stage of the transitional period. These provisions shall not be an obstacle to prohibitions or restrictions in respect of importation, exportation or transit which are justified on grounds of public morality, health or safety, the protection of human or animal life or health, the preservation of plant life, the protection of national treasures of artistic, historic or archaeological value or the protection of industrial and commercial property. Such prohibitions or restrictions shall not, however, constitute either a means of arbitrary discrimination or a disguised restriction on trade between member states. Member states shall progressively adjust any state monopolies of a commercial character in such a manner as will ensure the exclusion, at the end of the transitional period, of all discrimination between the nationals of member states in regard to conditions of supply and marketing of goods. These provisions shall apply to any body by means of which a member state shall de jure or de facto either directly or indirectly, control or appreciably influence importation or exportation between member states, and also to monopolies assigned by the state. In the case of a commercial monopoly which is accompanied by regulations designed to facilitate the marketing or the valorisation of agricultural products, it should be ensured that in the application of these provisions equivalent guarantees are provided in respect of the employment and standard of living of the producers concerned.

The obligations incumbent on member states shall be binding only to such extent as they are compatible with existing international agreements.

AGRICULTURE

The Common Market shall extend to agriculture and trade in agricultural products. The common agricultural policy shall have as its objectives:

- (a) the increase of agricultural productivity by developing technical progress and by ensuring the rational development of agricultural production and the optimum utilisation of the factors of production, particularly labour;
- (b) the ensurance thereby of a fair standard of living for the agricultural population;
- (c) the stabilisation of markets;
- (d) regular supplies;
- (e) reasonable prices in supplies to consumers.

Due account must be taken of the particular character of agricultural activities, arising from the social structure of agriculture and from structural and natural disparities between the various agricultural regions; of the need to make the appropriate adjustments gradually; and of the fact that in member states agriculture constitutes a sector which is closely linked with the economy as a whole. With a view to developing a common agricultural policy during the transitional period and the establishment of it not later than at the end of the period, a common organization of agricultural markets shall be effected.

FREE MOVEMENT OF PERSONS, SERVICES AND CAPITAL

Workers: The free movement of workers shall be ensured within the Community not later than at the date of the expiry of the transitional period, involving the abolition of any discrimination based on nationality between workers of the member states as regards employment, remuneration and other working conditions. This shall include the right to accept offers of employment actually made, to move about freely for this purpose within the territory of the member states, to stay in any member state in order to carry on an employment in conformity with the legislative and administrative provisions governing the employment of the workers of that state, and to live, on conditions which shall be the subject of implementing regulations laid down by the Commission, in the territory of a member state after having been employed there. (These provisions do not apply to employment in the public administration).

In the field of social security, the Council shall adopt the measures necessary to effect the free movement of workers, in particular, by introducing a system which permits an assurance to be given to migrant workers and their beneficiaries that, for the purposes of qualifying for and retaining the rights to benefits and of the calculation of these benefits, all periods taken into consideration by the respective municipal law of the countries concerned shall be added together, and that these benefits will be paid to persons resident in the territories of the member states.

Right of Establishment: Restrictions on the freedom of establishment of nationals of a member state in the territory of another member state shall be progressively abolished during the transitional period, nor may any new restrictions of a similar character be introduced. Such progressive abolition shall also extend to restrictions on the setting up of agencies, branches or subsidiaries. Freedom of establishment shall include the right to engage in and carry on non-wage-earning activities, and also to set up and manage enterprises and companies under the conditions laid down by the law of the country of establishment for its own nationals, subject to the provisions of this Treaty relating to capital.

Services: Restrictions on the free supply of services within the Community shall be progressively abolished in the course of the transitional period in respect of nationals of member states who are established in a state of the Community other than that of the person to whom the services are supplied; no new restrictions of a similar character may be introduced. The Council, acting by a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission, may extend the benefit of these provisions to cover services supplied by nationals of any third country who are established within the Community.

Particular services involved are activities of an industrial or artisan character and those of the liberal professions.

Capital: Member states shall during the transitional period progressively abolish between themselves restrictions on the movement of capital belonging to persons resident in the member states, and also any discriminatory treatment based on the nationality or place of residence of the parties or on the place in which such capital is invested. Current payments connected with movements of capital between member states shall be freed from all restrictions not later than at the end of the first stage of the transitional period.

Member states shall endeavour to avoid introducing within the Community any new exchange restrictions which affect the movement of capital and current payments connected with such movements, and making existing rules more restrictive.

TRANSPORT

With a view to establishing a common transport policy, the Council of Ministers shall, acting on a proposal of the Commission and after consulting the Economic and Social Committee, and the European Parliament, lay down common rules applicable to international transport effected from or to the territory of a member state or crossing the territory of one or more member states, conditions for the admission of non-resident carriers to national transport services within a member state and any other appropriate provisions. Until these have been enacted and unless the Council of Ministers gives its unanimous consent, no member state shall apply the various provisions governing this subject at the date of the entry into force of this Treaty in such a way as to make them less favourable, in their direct or indirect effect, for carriers of other member states by comparison with its own national carriers.

Any discrimination which consists in the application by a carrier, in respect of the same goods conveyed in the same circumstances, of transport rates and conditions which differ on the ground of the country of origin or destination of the goods carried, shall be abolished in the traffic of the Community not later than at the end of the second stage of the transitional period.

A Committee with consultative status, composed of experts appointed by the governments of the member states, shall be established and attached to the Commission, without prejudice to the competence of the transport section of the Economic and Social Committee.

PART III. POLICY OF THE COMMUNITY

COMMON RULES

Enterprises: The following practices by enterprises are prohibited: the direct or indirect fixing of purchase or selling prices or of any other trading conditions; the limitation or control of production, markets, technical development of investment; market-sharing or the sharing of sources of supply; the application to parties to transactions of unequal terms in respect of equivalent supplies, thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage; the subjection of the conclusion of a contract to the acceptance by a party of additional supplies which, either by their nature or according to commercial usage, have no connection with the subject of such contract. The provisions may be declared inapplicable if the agreements neither impose on the enterprises concerned any restrictions not indispensable to the attainment of improved production, distribution or technical progress, nor enable enterprises to eliminate competition in respect of a substantial proportion of the goods concerned.

Dumping: If, in the course of the transitional period, the Commission, at the request of a member state or of any other interested party, finds that dumping practices exist within the Common Market, it shall issue recommendations to the originator of such practices with a view to bringing them to an end. Where such practices continue, the Commission shall authorise the member state injured to take protective measures of which the Commission shall determine the conditions and particulars.

Re-importation within the Community shall be free of all customs duties, quantitative restrictions or measures with equivalent effect.

Aid granted by States: Any aid granted by a member state or granted by means of state resources which is contrary to the purposes of the treaty is forbidden. The following shall be deemed to be compatible with the Common Market:

- (a) aids of a social character granted without discrimination to individual consumers;
- (b) aids intended to remedy damage caused by natural calamities or other extraordinary events;
- (c) aids granted to the economy of certain regions of the Federal German Republic affected by the division of Germany, to the extent that they are necessary to compensate for the economic disadvantages caused by the division.

The following may be deemed to be compatible with the Common Market:

- (a) aids intended to promote the economic development of regions where the standard of living is abnormally low or where there exists serious under-employment;

- (b) aids intended to promote the execution of important projects of common European interest or to remedy a serious economic disturbance of the economy of a member state;
- (c) aids intended to facilitate the development of certain activities or of certain economic regions, provided that such aids do not change trading conditions to such a degree as would be contrary to the common interest;
- (d) such other categories of aids as may be specified by a decision of the Council of Ministers acting on a proposal of the Commission.

The Commission is charged to examine constantly all systems of aids existing in the member states, and may require any member state to abolish or modify any aid which it finds to be in conflict with the principles of the Common Market.

Fiscal Provisions: A member state shall not impose, directly or indirectly, on the products of other member states, any internal charges of any kind in excess of those applied directly or indirectly to like domestic products. Furthermore, a member state shall not impose on the product of other member states any internal charges of such a nature as to afford indirect protection to other productions. Member states shall, not later than at the beginning of the second stage of the transitional period, abolish or amend any provisions existing at the date of the entry into force of the Treaty which are contrary to these rules. Products exported to any member state may not benefit from any drawback on internal charges in excess of those charges imposed directly or indirectly on them. Subject to these conditions, any member states which levy a turnover tax calculated by a cumulative multi-stage system may, in the case of internal charges imposed by them on imported products or of drawbacks granted by them on exported products, establish average rates for specific products or groups of products.

Approximation of Laws: The Council, acting by means of a unanimous vote on a proposal of the Commission, shall issue directives for the approximation of such legislative and administrative provisions of the member states as have a direct incidence on the establishment or functioning of the Common Market. The European Parliament and the Economic and Social Committee shall be consulted concerning any directives whose implementation in one or more of the member states would involve amendment of legislative provisions.

ECONOMIC POLICY

Balance of Payments: Member states are charged to co-ordinate their economic policies in order that each may ensure the equilibrium of their overall balances of payments and maintain confidence in their currency, together with a high level of employment and stability of prices. In order to promote this co-ordination a Monetary Committee is established (see section on Organization, above).

Each member state engages itself to treat its policy with regard to exchange rates as a matter of common interest. Where a member state is in difficulties or seriously threatened with difficulties as regards its balance of payments as a result either of overall disequilibrium of the balance of payments or of the kinds of currency at its disposal, and where such difficulties are likely, in particular, to prejudice the functioning of the Common Market or the progressive establishment of the common commercial policy, the Commission shall examine the situation and indicate the measures which it recommends to the state concerned to adopt; if this action proves insufficient to overcome the difficulties, the Commission shall, after consulting the Monetary Committee, recommend to the Council of Ministers the granting of mutual assistance. This mutual assistance may take the form of:

- (a) concerted action in regard to any other international organization to which the member states may have recourse;
- (b) any measures necessary to avoid diversions of commercial traffic where the state in difficulty maintains or re-establishes quantitative restrictions with regard to third countries;
- (c) the granting of limited credits by other member states, subject to their agreement.

Furthermore, during the transitional period, mutual assistance may also take the form of special reductions in customs duties or enlargements of quotas. If the mutual assistance recommended by the Commission is not granted by the Council, or if the mutual assistance granted and the measures taken prove insufficient, the Commission shall authorise the state in difficulties to take measures of safeguard, of which the Commission shall determine the conditions and particulars. In the case of a sudden balance-of-payments crisis, any member state may take immediate provisional measures of safeguard, which must be submitted to the consideration of the Commission as soon as possible. On the basis of an opinion of the Commission and after consulting the Monetary Committee, the Council may decide that the state concerned shall amend, suspend or abolish such measures.

Commercial Policy: Member states shall co-ordinate their commercial relations with third countries in such a way as to bring about, not later than at the expiry of the transitional period, the conditions necessary to the implementation of a common policy in the matter of external trade. After the expiry of the transitional period, the common commercial policy shall be based on uniform principles, particularly in regard to tariff amendments, the conclusion of tariff or trade agreements, the alignment of measures of liberalisation, export policy and protective commercial measures, including measures to be taken in cases of dumping or subsidies. The Commission will be authorised to conduct negotiations with third countries. As from the end of the transitional period, member states shall, in respect of all matters of particular interest in regard to the Common Market, within the framework of any international organizations of an economic character, only proceed by way of common action. The Commission shall for this purpose submit to the Council of Ministers proposals concerning the scope and implementation of such common action. During the transitional period, member states shall consult with each other with a view to concerting their action and, as far as possible, adopting a uniform attitude.

SOCIAL POLICY

Social Provisions: Without prejudice to the other provisions of the Treaty and in conformity with its general objectives, it shall be the aim of the Commission to promote close collaboration between member states in the social field, particularly in matters relating to employment, labour legislation and working conditions, occupational and continuation training, social security, protection against occupational accidents and diseases, industrial hygiene, the law as to trade unions and collective bargaining between employers and workers.

Each member state shall in the course of the first stage of the transitional period ensure and subsequently maintain the application of the principle of equal pay for men and women.

The European Social Fund: See the section on Organization above.

The European Investment Bank: See the section on Organization above.

PART IV. OVERSEAS COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

The member states agree to bring into association with the Community the non-European countries and territories which have special relations with Belgium, France, Italy and the Netherlands in order to promote the economic and social development of these countries and territories and to establish close economic relations between them and the Community as a whole.

Member states shall, in their commercial exchanges with the countries and territories, apply the same rules which they apply among themselves pursuant to the Treaty. Each country or territory shall apply to its commercial exchanges with member states and with the other countries and territories the same rules which it applied in respect of the European state with which it has special relations. Member states shall contribute to the investments required by the progressive development of these countries and territories.

Customs duties on trade between member states and the countries and territories are to be progressively abolished according to the same timetable as for trade between the member states themselves. The countries and territories may, however, levy customs duties which correspond to the needs of their development and to the requirements of their industrialisation or which, being of a fiscal nature, have the object of contributing to their budgets.

(The Convention implementing these provisions is concluded for a period of five years only from the date of entry into force of the Treaty.)

PART V. INSTITUTIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

PROVISIONS GOVERNING INSTITUTIONS

For accounts of the European Parliament, the Council of Ministers, the Commission, the Court, the Economic and Social Committee, the Monetary Committee, the European Investment Bank, the European Social Fund and the Development Fund, see the section on Organization above.

Regulations shall have a general application and shall be binding in every respect and directly applicable in each member state. Directives shall bind any member state to which they are addressed, as to the result to be achieved, while leaving to domestic agencies a competence as to form and means. Decisions shall be binding in every respect for the addressees named therein. Recommendations and opinions shall have no binding force.

FINANCIAL PROVISIONS

Estimates shall be drawn up for each financial year for all revenues and expenditures of the Community, including those relating to the European Social Fund, and shall be shown in the budget.

The revenues of the budget shall comprise (apart from those contributions which are intended to meet the expenses of the European Social Fund, and apart from any other revenues) the financial contributions of member states fixed according to the following scale:

Belgium . . . .	7.9
France . . . .	28.0
Italy . . . .	28.0
German Federal Republic .	28.0

The financial contributions of the member states which are intended to meet the expenses of the European Social Fund shall be fixed according to the following scale:

Belgium . . . .	8.8
France . . . .	32.0
Italy . . . .	20.0
German Federal Republic .	32.0
Luxembourg . . . .	0.2
Netherlands . . . .	7.0

The Commission shall implement the budget on its own responsibility and within the limits of the appropriations made. The Council of Ministers shall:

- determine the methods and procedure whereby the contributions by member states shall be made available to the Commission; and
- establish rules concerning the responsibility of pay-commissioners and accountants and arrange for the relevant supervision.

PART VI. GENERAL AND FINAL PROVISIONS

- the elimination of double taxation within the Community;
- the mutual recognition of companies, the maintenance of their legal personality in cases where the registered office is transferred from one country to another, and the possibility for companies subject to the municipal law of different member states to form mergers; and

- (d) the simplification of the formalities governing the reciprocal recognition and execution of judicial decisions and arbitral awards.

Within a period of three years after the date of the entry into force of the Treaty, member states shall treat nationals of other member states in the same manner, as regards financial participation by such nationals in the capital of companies, as they treat their own nationals, without prejudice to the application of the other provisions of the Treaty.

The Treaty shall in no way prejudice the system existing in member states in respect of property.

The provisions of the Treaty shall not detract from the following rules:

- (a) no member state shall be obliged to supply information the disclosure of which it considers contrary to the essential interests of its security;
- (b) any member state may take the measures which it considers necessary for the protection of the essential interests of its security, and which are connected with the production of or the trade in arms, ammunition and war material; such measures shall not, however, prejudice conditions of competition in the Common Market in respect of products not intended for specifically military purposes.

The list of products to which (b) applies shall be determined by the Council in the course of the first year after the date of entry into force of the Treaty. The list may be subsequently amended by the unanimous vote of the Council on a proposal of the Commission.

Member states shall consult one another for the purpose of enacting in common the necessary provisions to prevent the functioning of the Common Market from being affected by measures which a member state may be called upon to take in case of serious internal disturbances affecting public order, in case of war or serious international tension constituting a threat of war or in order to carry out undertakings into which it has entered for the purpose of maintaining peace and international security.

In the course of the transitional period, where there are serious difficulties which are likely to persist in any sector of economic activity or difficulties which may seriously impair the economic situation in any region, any member state may ask for authorisation to take measures of safeguard in order to restore the situation and adapt the sector concerned to the Common Market economy.

The provisions of the Treaty shall not affect those of the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, nor those of the Treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Community; nor shall they be an obstacle to the existence or completion of regional unions between Belgium and Luxembourg, and between Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, in so far as the objectives of these regional unions are not achieved by the application of this Treaty.

The government of any member state of the Commission may submit to the Council proposals for the revision of this Treaty.

Any European state may apply to become a member of the Community.

The Community may conclude with a third country, a union of states or an international organisation agreements creating an association embodying reciprocal rights and obligations, joint actions and special procedures.

The Treaty is concluded for an unlimited period.

SUMMARY OF ECSC TREATY

THE EUROPEAN COAL AND STEEL COMMUNITY

The European Coal and Steel Community is based on a common market, common objectives and common institutions. The aims of the Community are to contribute to the expansion of the economy, the development of employment and the improvement of the standard of living in the participating countries through the creation, in harmony with the general economy of the member states, of a common market. With these aims in view, the institutions of the Community are to ensure that the common market is regularly supplied, while taking into account the needs of third countries; to assure to all consumers in comparable positions within the common market equal access to the sources of production; to seek the establishment of the lowest possible prices without involving any corresponding rise either in the prices charged by the same enterprise in other transactions or in the price-level as a whole in another period, while at the same time permitting necessary amortisation and providing the possibility of normal returns on invested capital; to ensure that conditions are maintained which will encourage enterprises to expand and improve their ability to produce and to promote a policy of rational development of natural resources, while avoiding undue exhaustion of such resources; to promote the improvement of the living and working conditions of the labour force in each of the industries under its jurisdiction so as to harmonise those conditions in an upward direction; to foster the development of international trade and ensure that equitable limits are observed in prices charged in foreign markets; and to promote the regular expansion and the modernisation of production as well as the improvement of quality, under conditions which preclude any protection against competing industries except where justified by illegitimate action on the part of such industries or in their favour.

The following are considered incompatible with the common market and are therefore abolished and prohibited:

- (a) import and export duties, or taxes with an equivalent effect, and quantitative restrictions upon the movement of coal and steel;
- (b) measures or practices discriminating among producers, buyers or consumers, especially as concerns prices, delivery terms and transport rates, as well as practices or measures which hamper the buyer in the free choice of his supplier;
- (c) subsidies or state assistance, or special charges imposed by the state, in any form whatsoever;

(d) restrictive practices tending towards the division or the exploitation of the market.

The Community binds itself to assist the interested parties to take action by collecting information, organising consultations and defining general objectives; to place financial means at the disposal of enterprises for their investments and participate in the expenses of readaptation; to assure the establishment, the maintenance and the observance of the normal conditions of competition, and take direct action with respect to production and the co-operation of the market only when circumstances make it absolutely necessary; and to publish the reasons for its action and take the necessary measures to ensure observance of the rules set forth in the Treaty.

THE INSTITUTIONS OF THE COMMUNITY

(The High Authority and the Council of Ministers of ECSC were merged with the Commissions and Councils of Ministers of the Economic Community and Euratom in July 1967.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PROVISIONS

The High Authority is empowered to consult governments and various interested parties such as enterprises, workers, consumers and dealers and their associations, as well as experts, and to gather such information as may be necessary to the accomplishment of its mission. It is not permitted to divulge information which by its nature is considered a trade secret, and in particular information pertaining to the commercial relations or the breakdown of the costs of production of enterprises. With this reservation, it must publish such data as may be useful to governments or to any other interested parties.

The High Authority may impose fines and daily penalty payments upon enterprises which evade their obligations under this title.

Financial Provisions: The High Authority is empowered to procure its funds by imposing a levy on the production of coal and steel, by borrowing, and by receiving grants. The levies are intended to cover administrative expenses, non-repayable assistance relating to readaptation, investments and financial assistance and expenditure devoted to encouraging technical and economic research. Funds obtained by borrowing may only be used to grant loans.

Investments and Financial Assistance: The High Authority may facilitate the carrying out of investment programmes by granting loans to enterprises or by giving its guarantee to other loans which they obtain. With the unanimous agreement of the Council, the High Authority may by the same means assist the financing of works and installations which contribute directly or mainly to an increase of production, to lower production costs, or which facilitate the marketing of products subject to its jurisdiction. The High Authority may require enterprises to submit individual projects in advance, and, having given the interested parties an opportunity to express their views, issue a reasoned opinion on any such projects. If the High Authority finds that the financing of a project or the operation of any proposed installation would require subsidies, assistance, protection or discrimination contrary to the present Treaty, it may issue a binding prohibition to the enterprise in question, forbidding it to use resources other than its own funds to carry out such a project.

The High Authority is obliged to encourage technical and economic research concerning the production and the development of consumption of coal and steel, as well as workers' safety in these industries. If the introduction of technical processes or new equipment, within the framework of the general objectives laid down by the High Authority, should lead to an exceptionally large reduction in labour requirements in the coal or steel industries, making it especially difficult in one or more areas to re-employ the workers discharged, the High Authority, on the request of the interested governments, may facilitate the financing of such programmes as it may approve for the creation, either in the industries subject to its jurisdiction or, with the agreement of the Council, in any other industry, of new and economically sound activities capable of assuring productive employment to the workers thus discharged, and shall grant non-repayable assistance as a contribution to payment of compensation, granting of re-settlement allowances and the financing of technical retraining of workers.

Production: The High Authority is to give preference to the indirect means of action at its disposal, such as co-operation with governments to stabilise or influence general consumption, particularly that of public services, and intervention on prices and commercial policy.

If, in the case of a decline in demand, it considers that the Community is faced with a manifest crisis, it must, after consulting the Consultative Committee and with the agreement of the Council, establish a system of production quotas. Failing this, any member state may bring the matter to the attention of the Council, which, by unanimous vote, may oblige the High Authority to establish a quota system. The High Authority may in particular regulate the rate of operation of enterprises by appropriate levies on tonnages exceeding a reference level defined by a general decision. The sums thus obtained will be earmarked for the support of those enterprises whose rate of production has fallen below the reference level.

If the Community is faced with a serious shortage of certain or of all the products subject to the jurisdiction of the High Authority, the latter must propose appropriate measures to the Council, unless the Council decides to the contrary by unanimous vote. On the basis of these proposals, the Council must establish consumption priorities and determine the allocation of the coal and steel resources of the Community among the industries subject to its jurisdiction, exports and other consumption. On the basis of the consumption priorities thus established, the High Authority is empowered, after consulting the enterprises concerned, to draw up production programmes which the enterprises are obliged to carry out.

Prices: Pricing practices contrary to the provision of Title I are prohibited and in particular unfair competitive practices, especially purely temporary or local price reductions, the purpose of which is to acquire a monopoly within the common market and discriminatory practices involving within the common market the application by a seller of unequal conditions to comparable transactions, especially according to the nationality of the buyer. In certain cases, the High Authority may fix maximum and/or minimum prices for one or more products subject to its jurisdiction, both within the common market and with regard to export.

Agreements and Concentrations: All agreements among enterprises, all decisions of associations of enterprises, and all concerted practices, tending, directly or indirectly, to prevent, restrict or distort the normal operation of competition within the common market are forbidden, and in particular those tending to fix or determine prices, to restrict or control production, technical development or investments, or to allocate markets, products, customers or sources of supply. However, the High Authority may authorise agreements to specialise in the production of, or to engage in the joint buying or selling of specified products, if it finds that this will contribute to a substantial improvement in production or distribution, or that the agreement in question is essential to achieve these results and is not more restrictive than is necessary, or that it is not capable of giving the interested enterprises any discriminatory powers or advantages. Similar regulations apply to concentrations.

Impairment of the Conditions of Competition: If any action of any member state is liable to provoke a serious disequilibrium by substantially increasing differences in costs of production otherwise than through variations in productivity, the High Authority, after consulting the Consultative Committee and the Council, may take the following steps:

If the action of the state produces harmful effects for coal or steel enterprises falling under the jurisdiction of the said state, the High Authority may authorise that state to grant assistance to such enterprises, the amount, conditions and duration of which shall be determined in agreement with the High Authority. The same provisions are to apply in the case of a variation in wages and in working conditions which would have the same effects, even if such variation is not the result of an action by that state.

If the action of that state produces harmful effects for coal and steel enterprises subject to the jurisdiction of other member states, the High Authority may address a recommendation to the said state with a view to remedying these effects by such measures as that state may consider most compatible with its own economic equilibrium.

If the action of the said state reduces differences in costs of production by granting a special advantage to, or by imposing special burdens on, coal or steel enterprises falling under its jurisdiction in comparison with the other industries in the same country, the High Authority is empowered to address the necessary recommendations to the state in question, after consulting the Consultative Committee and the Council.

Wages and Movement of Labour: The methods of fixing wages and social benefits in force in the various member states are not affected by the Treaty, subject to certain provisions.

If the High Authority finds that any wage levels are abnormally low, whether these levels are fixed by enterprises or by government decisions, it may address recommendations to the enterprises concerned or government interested. Similar action may be taken when a lowering of wages entails a drop in the standard of living of the labour force and at the same time is being used as a means of permanent economic adjustment by enterprises or as a means of competition between enterprises. This provision does not apply to:

- (a) overall measures taken by a member state to re-establish its external equilibrium, without prejudice to the possible application of the provisions dealing with the impairment of the conditions of competition;
- (b) wage decreases resulting from the application of a sliding scale established by law or by contract;
- (c) wage decreases resulting from a decrease in the cost of living;
- (d) wage decreases intended to correct abnormal increases previously granted under exceptional circumstances which no longer apply.

With the exception of (a) and (b) above, any wage decrease affecting the whole labour force of an enterprise or a sizeable proportion thereof must be notified to the High Authority.

The member states bind themselves to renounce any restriction, based on nationality, on the employment in the coal and steel industries of workers of recognised qualifications, subject to limitations imposed by the fundamental needs of health and public order. In the case of other (non-qualified) workers and where the expansion of production in the coal and steel industries might be hampered by a shortage of suitable labour, the member states agree to adapt their immigration regulations, and in particular, to facilitate the re-employment of workers from the coal and steel industries of other member states. Any discrimination in payment and working conditions as between national and foreign workers, without prejudice to special measures concerning frontier workers, are prohibited. Social security measures are not to impede the movement of labour.

Transport: In order to implement the application of such transport rates for coal and steel as will make possible comparable price conditions to consumers in comparable positions, discriminations in transport rates and conditions of any kind, which are based on the country of origin or of destination of the products in question are forbidden.

Commercial Policy: Unless otherwise provided in the Treaty, the responsibilities of the governments of the member states for commercial policy are not affected by its application. Minimum rates, below which the member states bind themselves not to lower their customs duties on coal and steel with regard to third countries, and maximum rates, above which they bind themselves not to raise such duties, may be fixed by unanimous decision of the Council upon the proposal of the High Authority, which may act on its own initiative or at the request of a member state. Between these limits, each government is to set its tariffs according to its own national procedure, upon the modification of which the High Authority may issue opinions. The High Authority is empowered to supervise the administration of import and export licences with regard to third countries in the cases of coal and steel. The member states bind themselves to keep the High Authority informed of proposed commercial agreements or similar arrangements as far as they relate to coal, steel or the importation of the other raw materials and of specialised equipment necessary for the production of coal and steel in the member states.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Among the numerous provisions of this title, the following are significant:

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The establishment of the Community does not in any way prejudice the system of ownership of the enterprises subject to the provisions of this Treaty.

As far as they are competent to do so, the member states shall take any appropriate measures to guarantee the settling of international accounts arising out of trade in coal and steel within the common market; they will lend each other assistance to facilitate such settlements.

If the High Authority considers that a state has failed in any of the obligations incumbent upon it by virtue of the Treaty, it shall, after permitting the state in question to present its views, take note of the failure in a reasoned decision accompanied by a justification. It shall allow the state in question a period of time within which to provide for the execution of its obligation. Such a state may appeal to the Court's general jurisdiction within a period of two months from the notification of the decision. If the state has not taken steps to fulfil its obligations within the period fixed by the High Authority, or if its appeal has been rejected, the High Authority may, with the agreement of the Council acting by a two-thirds majority:

- (a) suspend the payment of sums which the High Authority may owe to the state in question under the Treaty;
- (b) adopt measures or authorise the other member states to adopt measures which would otherwise be contrary to certain provisions of Title I, so as to correct the effects of the failure in question.

An appeal to the Court's general jurisdiction may be lodged against these decisions within two months following their notification. Should these measures prove ineffective, the High Authority shall refer the matter to the Council.

The decisions of the High Authority imposing financial obligations on enterprises shall have executive force.

After the period of transition, the government of any member state and the High Authority may propose amendments to the Treaty. Such proposals shall be submitted to the Council. If the Council, acting by a two-thirds majority, approves a conference of the representatives of the governments of the member states, such a conference shall be immediately called by the President of the Council, with a view to agreeing on any modifications to be made to the provisions of the Treaty. Such amendments shall come into force after ratification by all the member states.

The Treaty is concluded for a period of fifty years from the date of its entry into force.

Any European state may request to accede to this Treaty. It shall address its request to the Council, which shall act by unanimous vote after obtaining the opinion of the High Authority. Also by unanimous vote, the Council shall fix the terms of accession, which shall become effective on the day the instrument of accession is received by the government acting as depositary of the Treaty.

Council delegations are led by Ministers or by the Permanent Official Heads of Delegations. The Chairmanship is held for six months by each country in turn.

The Council is empowered to make decisions about a wide range of issues, including tariffs. Each country has one vote, and decisions must be unanimous where new obligations are involved, though on many issues a majority suffices. In 1974 meetings were held in Geneva in May, and in Helsinki in November.

TARIFFS AND QUOTAS

Import duties within EFTA were removed in eight stages up to the end of 1966, and between EFTA and Finland by 1967. All import quotas were removed by the end of 1966, whilst export quotas had been eliminated by the end of 1961.

FINLAND-EFTA ASSOCIATION AGREEMENT

Entered into force June 1961. First tariff reductions and relaxation of quotas took place on July 1st, 1961. The main principle of the Agreement is to establish a new free trade area where Finland will have the same rights and obligations towards EFTA members as they have among themselves.

OTHER EFTA ACTIVITIES

In recent years EFTA's work has been increasingly devoted to the problems of non-tariff barriers to trade. Part of this work has been based explicitly on particular articles in the Convention, especially those relating to the conditions of competition, as mentioned below.

Work is also being done on non-tariff barriers which are not specifically mentioned in the Convention. On these, EFTA's aim is to contribute to international agreements covering a wider area than that of the Association and, in the meantime, to seek in EFTA solutions to non-tariff barrier problems which will facilitate trade without limiting possibilities of finding wider agreements. Examples of the barriers being dealt with are differences in compulsory technical requirements for electrical and other products, and in rules for obtaining patent protection for new products.

BUDGET

Net expenditure in 1973-74: Swiss francs 6,178,051.
 Net budget for 1974-75: Swiss francs 6,987,616.

ACTIVITIES

The Convention defining the objectives of CERN provides "for collaboration among European States in nuclear research" and the "organization and sponsoring of international co-operation... including co-operation outside the laboratory". Of the two accelerators foreseen in the beginning, the 600 MeV Synchro-Cyclotron began operation in August 1957 and the 25-28 GeV Proton Synchrotron in November 1959. The second machine was not only the largest in the world at the time but the first to use the now established strong-focusing principle.

Both machines have been continually improved as regards performance and utilization. The current programme involves an increase by a factor 10 in the beam current of the cyclotron and a rise in output of the synchrotron of approximately 5 times. In 1965 the Council of CERN authorized the construction of Intersecting Storage Rings to be built alongside the synchrotron for research on colliding beams. Protons accelerated in the synchrotron are fed into the two intersecting rings in opposite senses and stored for up to a day. The beams can be made to collide in the intersecting sections. Construction was finished in March 1971.

In 1971 it was decided to build a new particle accelerator adjacent to the existing laboratory, now termed Laboratory I. Each laboratory is under the charge of its own Director-General but a fusion of the two will take place some time in the future. All members except Greece participate in the programme for Laboratory II.

The ISR as well as additional experimental and computing facilities have been built on 39.5 ha. of land in France, the rest of Laboratory I occupying 40.5 ha. in the Commune of Meyrin in Switzerland. The seat of the Organization is officially in Switzerland whilst the laboratory physically straddles the frontier.

Laboratory II also straddles the frontier, the area of land reserved being 412 ha. in France and 68 ha. in Switzerland. Building restrictions have been imposed on a further 509 ha. in France and 63 ha. in Switzerland to allow for a possible subsequent expansion. The accelerator—the Super Proton Synchrotron—is being built deep underground in a ring tunnel 2.2 km. diameter. The energy the accelerator will be able to reach is 400 GeV and the provision of research for the highest energies occupies the later part of the 8-year programme. It is foreseen that research at an intermediate energy, e.g. 200 GeV, can begin in the sixth year of the programme using the experimental facilities of Laboratory I.

The injector for the SPS is to be the existing proton synchrotron which will be then fulfilling the triple role of SPS injector, feed for the ISR and source of beams of particles for experiments at energies up to 28 GeV.

The majority of the research undertaken at CERN is carried out by mixed teams of physicists principally from the Universities and Research Centres of Europe. The scientists may be attached to CERN for a period of weeks only, or become temporary members of the staff for a year or so. Only a small proportion remain as permanent staff members. The majority of the CERN complement are concerned with machine design, development and operation.

To cater for a wide range of potential users the techniques of beam sharing have become highly developed. Major detection installations include a 2-metre liquid hydrogen bubble chamber and Gargamelle, a 12,000-litre heavy liquid bubble chamber. Coming into operation in 1973 and built under a tripartite agreement between CERN, the Commissariat à l'Energie Atomique of France, and the German Government, is a 3.7-m liquid hydrogen bubble chamber incorporating a superconducting magnet. A very large spark chamber within a superconducting magnet came into operation in 1972.

To provide the large computing capacity needed for the analysis of bubble chamber film and electronics experiments data, as well as scientific computation, CERN has built up an extensive network of computers, a number of which are working on-line. In the central facility a CDC 7600 is headed by a CDC 6500 and a CDC 6400 and they, in turn, are connected to a number of remote input/output stations. Most electronics experiments have computers built into the data-taking system; equipment for the automatic measurement and analysis of bubble chamber film also incorporates on-line computers.

Close collaboration has always been sought with the high energy physics laboratories of non-member States, and relations with comparable centres in the U.S. have from the beginning been very close. A system of exchange of scientists with the Joint Nuclear Research Centre of Dubna (U.S.S.R.) was initiated in 1960. This exchange has been developed and an agreement was signed with the U.S.S.R. State Committee for the Application of Atomic Energy in July 1967 for collaboration in research on the 70 GeV accelerator at Serpukhov, which began operation in November of the same year.

Under this agreement CERN has supplied certain equipment for beam extraction and separation while the Soviet authorities are making it possible for joint electronics experiments to be conducted on their machine and will make available bubble chamber pictures for analysis by CERN scientists.

FINANCE CONTRIBUTIONS

Both laboratories are supported by all twelve member states, except for Greece, which does not support Laboratory II. The proportional contributions of member states for 1975, 1976 and 1977 are based on their average national revenues over the years 1971, 1972 and 1973, as calculated by the UN Statistical Office.

Determination of policy in respect of remuneration for services rendered to users.

ACTIVITIES

Responsibility for Air Traffic Control: exercising operational, legal and financial responsibilities for air traffic control services in the upper air space of the member states.

Establishing of New Facilities: necessary for the performance of the following tasks: to prevent collisions between aircraft, to ensure the orderly and rapid flow of air traffic, to provide advice and information useful for the safe and efficient conduct of flights, to notify appropriate organizations regarding aircraft in need of search and rescue aid, and assist such organizations as required. These installations are, inter alia, air traffic control centres, air traffic research and experimental centres and schools for advanced and specialized training of personnel of air navigation services.

Studies and Plans: elaboration, in conjunction with the National Administrations of member states, of operational plans for air traffic services in the upper air space of the Benelux/Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland and United Kingdom and France regions. Fundamental study of a common system of air traffic control over Europe after 1980. Linked to this study a five-year programme of operational research is under way with a view to applying scientific methods to the choice of a future optimal system. Study of the impact of supersonic aircraft on control requirements and procedures. Study of the application of modern technology to the requirements of air traffic control. General operational studies of airspace organization, route networks and of the management of traffic flows, of future navigation systems and ATC methods and procedures, including the use of primary and especially secondary radar. Development of automated ATC systems including the exchange of data between adjacent centres.

Tests and Trials: real and fast time simulations of air traffic situations to test and evaluate existing and future proposed systems. Tests and trials of navigational aids and evaluation of navigational accuracy. Operational evaluation of the radar coverage of the EUROCONTROL area. Calibration of new radars.

Traffic Statistics and Forecasting: processing of traffic data for use in the planning of operational requirements and the calculation of route charges. Preparation of forecasts of future air traffic and development of improved forecasting methods.

Training: theoretical and practical training of operational and technical ATC staff and of computer programmers for both member and non-member states.

Co-operation: agreements for co-operation, aiming mainly at an exchange of technical information, have been concluded with Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Federal Aviation Administration of the U.S.A., Switzerland, Italy, Portugal, Austria and more lately Spain, as well as with the ICAO.

FINANCE

Budget (1975: Investment and Operating): 4,022 million Belgian francs.

Scale of members' contributions based mainly on their Gross National Product.

Included in this budget is an amount of 1,750 million Belgian francs for the joint financing of the operating costs of air traffic control services for the upper air space of the Benelux/Federal Republic of Germany region.

THE FRANC ZONE

MEMBERS

French Republic (Metropolitan France and the Overseas Departments and Territories, except the French Territory of the Afars and the Issas).

Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo People's Republic, Dahomey, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Mali, Niger, Senegal, Togo, Upper Volta.

The Franc Zone embraces all those countries and groups of countries whose currencies are linked with the French franc at a fixed rate of exchange and who agree to hold their reserves mainly in the form of French francs and to effect their exchange on the Paris market. Each of these countries or groups of countries has its own central issuing Bank and its currency is freely convertible into French francs. This monetary union is based on individual agreements concluded between France and the various States who, after attaining independence, opted for independent sovereignty either within or outside the French Community.

Mali withdrew from the Franc Zone in 1962, setting up her own currency, the Mali franc, and her own issuing Bank. However, in February 1967 she ratified a currency agreement with France covering her gradual return to the West African monetary zone, and France's guarantee of the convertibility of the Mali franc. Under the terms of the agreement, Mali was to reorganize her economy, and in May 1967 she devalued her franc by 50 per cent. The Mali franc returned to full convertibility with the French franc in March 1968, and agreement was reached on the establishment of a central issuing bank, to be jointly administered by France and Mali.

A number of states left the Franc Zone during the period 1958-73: Guinea, Tunisia, Morocco, Algeria, Mauritania and Madagascar.

CURRENCIES OF THE FRANC ZONE

French franc (=100 centimes): used in Metropolitan France, the Overseas Departments of Guadeloupe, French Guiana and Martinique, and in the Overseas Territory of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

1 CFA (Communauté financière africaine) franc=2 French centimes. Used in the monetary areas of West and Central Africa and also in the Overseas Department of Réunion and the Overseas Territory of the Comoro Islands.

1 Mali franc=1 French centime. Used in Mali, where it replaced the CFA franc in 1962.

1 CFP (Communauté française du Pacifique) franc=5.5 French centimes. Used in New Caledonia, French Polynesia and the Wallis and Futuna Islands.

1 New Hebrides franc (franc néo-hébridais)=6.1875 French centimes. Used in the Anglo-French Condominium of the New Hebrides.

CENTRAL ISSUING BANKS

Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale: 29 rue du Colisée, 75008 Paris; f. 1955 as the Institut d'émission de l'A.E.F. et du Cameroun; name changed in 1960 to Banque centrale des États de l'Afrique Equatoriale et du Cameroun; reconstituted under present title in 1973; issuing house for the five states of central Africa; Pres. N'DEINGAR MBATLENDANA; Dir.-Gen. CHRISTIAN JOUDIOU (France); Asst. Dir.-Gen. JEAN-EDOUARD SATHOUD.

Banque Centrale des États de l'Afrique de l'Ouest: 29 rue du Colisée, 75008 Paris; f. 1955 under the title "Institut d'émission de l'AOF et du Togo" and re-created under present title by a treaty between the West African states and a convention with France in 1962, both of which were modified in 1973; central issuing bank for the members of the West African Monetary Union; Pres. EDOUARD KODJO (Togo); Dir.-Gen. ROBERT JULIENNE (France). The headquarters of the bank are to be moved to Dakar, Senegal.

Banque Centrale du Mali: B. P. 206, Bamako, Mali; f. 1968; Chair. SEKOU SANGARE (Mali); Dir.-Gen. GEORGES DUSSINE (France).

Institut d'Émission des Départements d'Outre-Mer: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris; issuing house for the French Overseas Departments; Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOT.

Institut d'Émission d'Outre-Mer: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris; issuing house for the French Overseas Territories; Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOT.

Banque de France: 1 rue de la Vrillière, Paris; f. 1800; issuing house for Metropolitan France; Governor BERNARD CLAPPIER.

AFRICAN FRANC ZONE COUNTRIES

These countries are all the states, except Guinea and Mauritania, which were part of French West and Equatorial Africa, and Cameroon and Togo. These full members of the Franc Zone are still grouped within the currency areas that existed before independence, each group having its own currency issued by a central Bank.

West African Monetary Union (Union monétaire ouest-africaine): Dahomey, Ivory Coast, Niger, Senegal, Upper Volta (all parts of former French West Africa) and Togo, which joined in 1963. Established by Treaty of May 1962; according to the terms of a new co-operation agreement signed with France in 1973 and about to enter into force, the Central Bank is to be directed by an African governor and a fourteen-member Administrative Council; twelve members are nominated by the African states and two by the French Government.

Central African Countries: Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Gabon (countries of the former French Equatorial Africa) and Cameroon. A Convention of Monetary Co-operation was signed with France in 1972; the French Government nominates one-third of the members of the Administrative Council of the zone's issuing bank, one-third is nominated by Cameroon and the remaining third by the other countries.

EXCHANGE REGULATIONS

The CFA franc is freely convertible into the French franc at a fixed rate, through "Operations Accounts" established by agreements concluded between the French Treasury and the individual issuing Banks. The notes are backed fully by the resources of the French Treasury, which also provides the Banks with overdraft facilities.

The monetary reserves of the CFA countries are held in French francs in the French Treasury. Exchange is effected on the Paris market and foreign assets earned by member countries are pooled in a Fonds de Stabilisation des changes (Exchange Stabilization Fund) which is managed by the Bank of France. Part of the reserves earned by richer members can be used to offset the deficits incurred by poorer countries. Member countries negotiate each year their import programme with the French authorities.

New regulations drawn up in 1967 provided for the free convertibility of currency with that of countries outside the Franc Zone. Restrictions are to be removed on the import and export of CFA banknotes, although some capital transfers will still be subject to approval by the governments concerned.

When the French Government instituted exchange control to protect the French franc following the May 1968 crisis, other Franc Zone countries were obliged to take similar action in order to maintain free convertibility within the Franc Zone. The CFA franc was devalued following devaluation of the French franc in August 1969. In January 1974 the CFA and Mali francs were floated on the foreign exchange simultaneously with the French franc to maintain their fixed parities.

ECONOMIC AID

France's ties with the African Franc Zone countries involve not only monetary arrangements, but also include comprehensive French assistance in the forms of budget support, foreign aid, technical assistance and subsidies on commodity exports.

Official French financial aid and technical assistance to developing countries is administered by the following agencies:

Fonds d'Aide et de Co-opération—FAC: 20 rue Monsieur, 75700 Paris. In 1959 FAC took over from FIDES (Fonds d'Investissement pour le Développement Economique et Social) the administration of subsidies and loans from the French Government to the former French African States. FAC is administered by the Ministry of Co-operation, which allocates budgetary funds to it.

Caisse Centrale de Co-opération Économique—CCCE: 233 boulevard Saint-Germain, 75007 Paris. Founded in 1941, and given present name in 1958. French Development Bank which executes the financial operations of FAC. Lends money to member states and former member states of the Franc Zone. Dir.-Gen. CLAUDE PANOUILLOT.

Bureau de Liaison des Agents de Coopération Technique: 66ter rue Saint-Didier, 75116 Paris.

FRENCH COMMUNITY

The Community was created by the 1958 Constitution, adopted by referendum by the countries of French West Africa (with the exception of Guinea, which opted for total and immediate independence), French Equatorial Africa and Madagascar, which all chose to become member states of the Community. The field of the Community's competence included foreign policy, defence, currency, economic and financial policy, strategic materials and higher education. Between October and December 1958 all the States of the Community were granted internal autonomy.

A Constitutional Act of June 1960 introduced the possibility of concluding agreements whereby a member state could become independent without ceasing to belong to the Community. Six states—Central African Republic, Chad, Congo People's Republic, Gabon, Madagascar and Senegal—decided to become independent within the Community which was then called the "renewed Community", while all the other states preferred total independence. France has concluded co-operation agreements in international law with all these states (including Togo and Cameroon which included territories entrusted to France by international mandate and therefore could not be members of the Community).

The Articles of the Constitution dealing with the Community have not been expressly abolished but are no longer applied today and the various organs of the Community have fallen into abeyance. Liaison between France and the African states is conducted largely by the French Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Co-operation.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs: 37 Quai d'Orsay, 75007 Paris; Minister JEAN SAUVAGNARGUES.

Ministry of Co-operation: 20 rue Monsieur, 75007 Paris;
Minister PIERRE ABELIN.

CUSTOMS UNIONS

Under the terms of the first Yaoundé Convention, July 1963, all CFA countries and Madagascar became associate members of the European Economic Community. This Convention of Association stipulates the gradual abolition of tariff and quota restrictions for the whole Common Market, and therefore the guaranteed markets and prices for African produce in France are now being phased out.

The revision of the terms of the Yaoundé Convention was the subject of extensive negotiations with the European Economic Community, beginning in Brussels on October 17th, 1973. The new arrangements are due to take effect in 1975.

The following regional common markets within the Franc Zone have been formed:

Communauté Économique de l'Afrique de l'Ouest (CEAO)

Union Douanière et Économique de l'Afrique Centrale (UDEAC) (see chapter).

Organisation Commune Africaine et Mauricienne (OCAM):
a common market in sugar has been established (see chapter).

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

All the powers of the Bank are vested in a Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor and one alternate appointed by each member country.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Consists of nine Directors responsible for the conduct of operations and answerable to the Board of Governors. Seven are elected by Latin American countries, one by Canada and one is designated by the U.S.A.

FINANCIAL STRUCTURE

ORDINARY CAPITAL RESOURCES

Loans are made to governments, and to public and private bodies for specific economic projects. They are repayable in the currencies lent and their terms range from 10 to 25 years.

Authorized capital $6,213 million, of which $1,056 million is paid-in and $5,157 million is callable. The callable portion constitutes, in effect, a guarantee of the securities which the Bank issues in the capital markets in order to increase its resources available for lending.

FUND FOR SPECIAL OPERATIONS

The Fund enables the Bank to make loans for economic and social projects where circumstances call for special treatment, such as lower interest rates and longer repayment terms than those applied to loans from the ordinary resources, and possibility of repayments in whole or in part in local currency.

Authorized subscribed resources: $4,393,602,000.

OTHER FUNDS

Several donor countries have placed sums under the bank's administration for assistance to Latin America, outside the framework of the Ordinary Resources and the Bank's Special Operations.

The largest of these was the Social Progress Trust Fund of the United States, set up in 1961 under the Alliance for Progress programme. This amounted to $525 million, of which $494,191,000 was committed in loans for housing, water supplies and sanitation, rural development and education.

In the same year a fund of nearly DM33 million was given by the Federal Republic of Germany, to improve Bolivia's tin mines.

Britain set up a fund with the Bank in 1966, which now amounts to more than £4 million, and in 1971 and 1972 a further $4 million was contributed. The Holy See donated a Populorum Progressio fund of a million dollars in 1969, for land reform and assistance to the poorest areas.

Norway gave a fund of $2 million in the following year, and in 1973 Switzerland gave 30 million Swiss francs. The Canadians began a new fund of 1.5 million Canadian dollars in 1974, for project preparation.

Argentinian aid for its neighbouring countries is also transferred by this method.

The equivalent of $99.8 million has been lent from all these resources, excluding the Social Progress Trust Fund.

BOND ISSUES AND LOANS

To increase its lendable ordinary resources, the Bank has issued long-term bonds in the markets of eleven countries, and short-term bonds were purchased by Central Banks in Latin America, and by Israel. It also has loan agreements with a number of countries. These operations, as of September 30th, 1974, are as follows:

INTERGOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE FOR EUROPEAN MIGRATION—ICEM

9 rue du Valais, 1211 Geneva 14, Switzerland

Telephone: 32-36-00.

ICEM was established in 1951 to achieve the orderly migration of those Europeans who could not migrate without international assistance, to help resettlement of refugees in countries of permanent asylum, to sponsor immigration into the less developed countries in accordance with their economic needs. World membership: 32 nations and 7 observer nations.

COUNCIL

In the Council each member country has one representative and one vote. Meetings are normally held once a year in Geneva. Membership is open to any country subscribing to the principle of free movement of peoples and prepared to contribute to the Committee's administrative budget. The Council determines policy, reviews the activities of the Executive Committee, and approves the budget. A chairman is elected at each session.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Composed of representatives of nine member governments, elected annually, and eligible for re-election. The Committee meets twice a year, in spring and before the autumn Council session. Special sessions may be called if necessary.

SUB-COMMITTEE ON BUDGET AND FINANCE

Composed of representatives of five member governments elected annually by the Council. It is responsible for studying financial questions and making appropriate recommendations to the Executive Committee and Council.

SUB-COMMITTEE ON CO-ORDINATION OF TRANSPORT

Membership is open to any member government. It meets once a year, studies matters concerning transport and makes recommendations to the Council.

SECRETARIAT

Director: JOHN F. THOMAS (U.S.A.).

Deputy-Director: G. MASELLI (Italy).

ACTIVITIES

ICEM's objectives are threefold: to effect the movement of refugees to countries offering final resettlement; to meet the specific needs of overseas countries by providing migration from Europe in the sectors of their economies where government-sponsored migration is required; and to promote, through selective migration, the socio-economic advancement of Latin American countries as a vital form of development aid.

The tasks of ICEM range from helping an individual refugee or a national migrant to assisting member governments in the development of their migration programmes.

ICEM helps to select migrants and refugees for emigration to receiving countries, such as Australia, Latin America, South Africa and the United States of America. Upon request from member governments, ICEM also provides essential services such as counselling, orientation, medical examination, vocational and language training, placement and the organization of adaptation courses. Furthermore, ICEM arranges transport at a moderate cost, finances the movement of those refugees and migrants who are unable to meet their own expenses.

The movement of refugees to countries offering them opportunity and security is a major function of ICEM. To assure the efficient resettlement of 60,000 to 70,000 uprooted people each year ICEM closely co-ordinates its refugee activities with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United States Refugee Program and with other governmental and non-governmental organizations. ICEM implemented the processing and movements of 1,098,200 refugees from 1952 until October 1974.

ICEM's programmes for Latin America aim at making a contribution to the solution of development problems by providing skilled workers and technicians through immigration.

Immigrants with experience and professional knowledge of modern techniques form an important stepping-stone in the process of speeding up economic and social development. Through its selective migration programme ICEM is transferring qualified Europeans to vital sectors of industry, agriculture and education for which sufficient man-power cannot be found on the national labour markets. Training centres and demonstration projects have been established with immigrant instructors to teach local labourers and farmers improved methods.

FINANCE

The administrative budget is made up of mandatory contributions from member governments. The operational budget is made up of voluntary contributions; contributors may stipulate use to which their contributions are put.

Composed of the leading editors of these countries, the Committees recruit the membership, report to the Secretariat on developments affecting the press and conduct the business of the Institute in their countries.

MEMBERSHIP

Comprises three categories: full members, associate members and institutional members.

Full membership of the Institute is open to persons with responsibilities for editorial or news policy in newspapers, weekly or monthly journals, news agencies or broadcasting systems, who support the principle of freedom of the Press and desire to co-operate in achieving the Institute's objectives and who, in seeking membership, declare formally and by written statement their willingness to work for the achievement of Press freedom.

Associate membership is open to persons whose work is associated with journalism in its editorial aspects but who cannot qualify for full membership because they are not executives of newspapers or agencies, for example newspaper correspondents and commentators, members of journalism faculties, etc.

Institutional membership is open under the same conditions as for full and associate membership to communications departments of universities and colleges, schools and centres of journalism, press institutes and journalists' organizations in the press and broadcasting fields.

ACTIVITIES

Defence of Press Freedom

IPI takes the following action: publication of the facts in the monthly IPI Report; protests to governments; public protests spread over the world through news agencies, newspapers, radio and television; direct pressure on governments and direct intervention.

Meetings

Regional meetings have been a regular feature of the Institute's programme. These are held between newspapermen from pairs of countries to discuss mutual problems and misunderstandings and ways to improve relations through the press.

Seminars are arranged with the aim of improving the practices of journalism.

Economic and foreign editors have been brought together for seminars on the European Economic Communities and the Free Trade Area, and on European Economic Integration.

Training

A programme to train staff of Asian newspapers was launched in 1960 and a number of workshop seminars have been held with the aim of improving newspaper techniques. IPI Consultants have visited newspapers, particularly those published in Asian languages, to give advice and training to editorial and management staffs. The Institute's active work in Asia began with two plenary Asian meetings held in Tokyo in 1956 and in Kandy, Ceylon, in 1957. Since then, the Press Institute of India has been launched as a result of collaboration between IPI and a group of leading Indian newspaper publishers and editors. Other institutes followed in South Korea, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Malaysia, providing newspapers with their own bodies to study professional problems and train journalists.

In March 1963, the first IPI training course for African journalists opened in Nairobi, Kenya. Since then over 200 journalists from a dozen African countries, who have studied at IPI residential courses in Nairobi and in Lagos,

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Nigeria, have moved on to responsible posts and the IPI certificate of training has become recognized as the mark of a qualified journalist. Instruction has also been given to African newspaper cameramen and IPI has given the first course for African women journalists.

Research

A Research Section prepares studies on problems of international journalism. Information is frequently supplied on such questions as legislation affecting the press, professional standards and training in journalism.

International Press Institute

Library and Press Centre

This Centre is maintained at the headquarters of IPI in Zurich. Material on a wide range of press subjects, including news coverage, legislation and freedom of the press, is at the disposal of members.

BUDGET

The Institute is supported by members' subscriptions and donations from National Committees. It began with the aid of the United States Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations. The current African training scheme is financed by a $300,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

A grant of $813,700 was made by the Rockefeller Foundation in March 1965 to support the Asian Programme up to May 1968. In 1967 the Ford Foundation made a grant of $150,000 for a programme of activities to improve objective news coverage between countries.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE ORGANIZATION—INTELSAT

490 L'Enfant Plaza, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024, U.S.A.

MEMBERSHIP

Under the Definitive Agreements all states members of the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) and all states which were members of INTELSAT under the Interim Agreement may join the Organization. As of October 15th, 1974, there were 87 members of INTELSAT.

ORGANIZATION

Assembly of Parties

The Assembly of Parties is composed of governments which are parties to the Agreement. The Assembly has the power to consider "general policy and long-term objectives of INTELSAT consistent with the principles, purposes and scope of activities of INTELSAT . . ."

The Assembly may, inter alia, formulate views or make recommendations to the other organs in its consideration of general policy and long-term objectives; authorize the use of the INTELSAT space segment, or the provision of separate satellites by INTELSAT for specialized telecommunications services; take decisions on proposed amendments to the Intergovernmental Agreement and propose amendments to the Operating Agreement; consider complaints from the governments party to the Intergovernmental Agreement; select legal experts for arbitration tribunals; and confirm the appointment of the Director-General.

Each party in the Assembly has one vote. Decisions on substantive matters require the affirmative vote of two-thirds of those present and voting while decisions on procedural matters require the affirmative vote of a simple majority of those present and voting.

Ordinary meetings will be scheduled biennially.

Meeting of Signatories

The functions of the Meeting of Signatories include, inter alia, the consideration and expression of views to the Board of Governors on the Board's annual report and financial statements; consideration of Board reports on future programmes, decisions on proposed amendments to the Operating Agreement and expression of views and recommendations on amendments to the Agreement; consideration of and decisions on the Board's recommendations to increase the capital ceiling; the establishment of general rules, upon the Board's recommendations and for its guidance, concerning the approval of earth stations to access the INTELSAT space segment; allotment of capacity in the space segment and the establishment and adjustment of satellite utilization charges; consideration and expression of views on complaints of users.

The voting procedure is the same as in the Assembly of Parties.

Meetings will be held annually.

Board of Governors

The board of governors is composed of representatives of Signatories to the Operating Agreement.

The Agreement also provides that any five or more signatories, from the same ITU administrative region, may together select a single representative (Governor) on the board of governors. However, no more than two such groups from any one ITU region nor more than a total of five from all ITU regions are permitted to be so represented. In the event that two or more groups seek the same seat, the Meeting of Signatories is to determine which group is to be represented.

Voting rights are allotted to the governors in proportion to the investment share of the signatory or signatories that he represents. Important decisions require either (1) the support of at least four governors representing at least two-thirds of the investment shares, or (2) the support of all but three of the governors, regardless of the total investment share which this large numerical majority may represent. A simple majority of the governors, with each Governor possessing one vote, is required for action on procedural matters. On October 15th, 1974, the membership of the board consisted of 22 governors representing, either singly or in combination, a total of 61 signatories.

Meetings of the board of governors will be held as often as is necessary but at least four times a year.

Executive Organ

The Executive Organ is to evolve in two stages.

The first stage began in 1973 and is to continue until December 1976. During this stage, the Executive Organ is headed by a secretary-general, appointed by the board of governors and responsible to the board of governors for all management services other than those provided by the terms of a Management Services Contract with the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT). This Management Services Contract, which is for technical and operational services, is to continue until February 1979. The Management Services Contractor reports to the board of governors until the appointment of a director-general. Both the Executive Organ and COMSAT have their headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The Executive Organ has a staff of approximately 100, and consists of the office of the secretary-general, administration and conference affairs, finance, technical operations, and legal affairs.

By December 31st, 1976, a director-general, responsible to the board of governors, is to be appointed by the board and confirmed by the Assembly of Parties to head the

INTELSAT

Executive Organ and to assume all management responsibilities. The Management Services Contractor will then report to the director-general.

By February 1979 the permanent management arrangements for INTELSAT are to be implemented.

Secretary-General: SANTIAGO ASTRAIN.

ACTIVITIES

SATELLITES

As of October 1974, four INTELSAT IV satellites, in synchronous orbit, were providing a full global commercial communications service. Two of the satellites were positioned over the Atlantic, one over the Pacific and one over the Indian Ocean. An additional INTELSAT IV satellite, serving as a spare, is currently in orbit in the Atlantic Ocean Region. In addition, satellites of an earlier generation, "INTELSAT III", also serve as spares in the Pacific and Indian Ocean regions.

The INTELSAT IV satellite has a design life of 7 years and a capacity of from 3,000 to 9,000 telephone circuits, depending upon the operational arrangements adopted, or of 12 television channels, or combinations of these. A total of eight INTELSAT IV satellites has been ordered, to provide for possible launch or in-orbit failures and to enable spare satellites to be placed in orbit as reserves. The current operational plan within the INTELSAT system to provide service when the INTELSAT IV satellites approach saturation in the Atlantic in 1975 is to employ modified INTELSAT IV satellites known as INTELSAT IV-A to provide service until 1978. INTELSAT has contracted for three INTELSAT IV-A satellites.

INTELSAT is currently studying possible types of still more advanced satellites to be used in the future.

EARTH STATIONS

Earth stations which work with the INTELSAT satellites are the property of organizations in the countries in which they are located. INTELSAT establishes mandatory performance characteristics for these stations to ensure that the INTELSAT space segment functions effectively and that appropriate approval is obtained for access to and operation with the space segment.

As of July 31st, 1974, 91 standard earth station antennae carried commercial traffic via the INTELSAT system. These are distributed as follows:

Africa (10): Angola, Cameroon, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Kenya, Madagascar, Morocco, Nigeria, Senegal, Zaire.

Asia (20): People's Republic of China (3), Hong Kong (2), India, Indonesia, Japan (2), Korea, Malaysia, Pakistan, Philippines (2), Singapore (2), Taiwan (2), Thailand (2).

Australia and Oceania (5): Australia (3), Guam (U.S.A.), New Zealand.

Central and South America (15): Argentina (2), Brazil (4), Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, French Guiana, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Venezuela.

Caribbean (5): Barbados, Jamaica, Martinique, Puerto Rico (U.S.A.), Trinidad.

Europe and Middle East (29): Bahrain, Belgium, France (3), Federal Republic of Germany (3), Greece (2), Iran, Israel, Italy (2), Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain/Canary Is. (4), Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom (3), Yugoslavia.

North America and Hawaii/Alaska/Kwajalein Is. (7): Canada (2), U.S.A. (5).

TRACKING, TELEMETRY, COMMAND AND MONITORING FACILITIES

Four TT & C and monitoring stations are in operation: Fucino, Italy; Carnarvon, Australia; Paumalu, Hawaii; Andover, Maine, U.S.A. A monitoring station is also located at Goonhilly, United Kingdom. From the middle of 1975, monitoring facilities will also be provided at Zamen-goe, Cameroon, and at Tangua, Brazil.

SATELLITE CHARGES AND USE

INTELSAT establishes the charges for use of the space segment to cover estimated operating, maintenance and administrative costs and a return on capital.

The INTELSAT space segment charge was initially set in 1965 at $32,000 per year per defined unit of utilization. This charge has been reduced progressively and, from January 1st, 1974, it has been set at $9,000 per year per unit of utilization.

As of July 31st, 1974, a total of 10,017.5 units were in full-time service in the INTELSAT system, and the continuity of service from January to July 1974 is indicated by the following figures: 99.90 per cent for the total global satellite system, and 99.94 per cent for the average INTELSAT earth station.

DOMESTIC SERVICES

Where this would not hinder the official uses of the satellites, the space segment may be used by signatory states for their own interior communications. This service is used by Algeria, Brazil, Norway, U.S.A., Mexico and Spain.

ORGANIZATION

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Established in 1965 as the supreme organ of LAFTA, the Council is composed of the Foreign Ministers of all member countries and makes important policy decisions relating to regional integration.

CONFERENCE OF CONTRACTING PARTIES

The Conference of Contracting Parties is composed of delegations from each member country and makes decisions on matters that require a joint resolution of the Contracting Parties. Its functions are to take steps towards the implementation of the Treaty, to approve the annual Budget, to fix contributions, to elect a President and two Vice-Presidents and to appoint the Executive Secretary of the Permanent Executive Committee. It meets in regular session once a year, when trade negotiations are carried out, and in extraordinary session when convened by the Permanent Executive Committee.

PERMANENT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Committee, consisting of one representative of each contracting party, is the Permanent body of the Association and is responsible for supervising the implementation of the provisions of the Treaty. Its regular duties are to convene the Conference of Contracting Parties, to submit to the Conference an annual progress report and budget, to represent the Association, to carry out studies, suggest measures and submit recommendations to the Conference and to apply for technical assistance and collaboration. The Committee operates at the headquarters of the Association in Montevideo.

President (1974): FERNÁN CISNEROS DIEZ CANSECO (Peru).

SECRETARIAT

The technical and administrative functions of LAFTA are carried out by the Secretariat, which is directed by an Executive Secretary elected by the Conference for a term of three years. The appointment is renewable. The Executive Secretary participates in the work of the Council of Ministers, the Conference and the Committee.

The Secretariat is composed of the Departments of Trade Policy, Industrial Affairs, Economic Affairs, Agricultural Affairs, and Administration, and a number of specialized services.

Acting Executive Secretary: JUAN PASCUAL MARTÍNEZ (Argentina).

FUNCTIONS

The Latin American Free Trade Association is an inter-governmental organization, created by the Treaty of Montevideo in February 1960 with the object of increasing trade between the Contracting Parties and of promoting regional integration, thus contributing to the economic and social development of the member countries.

System of Tariff Reductions. The Treaty of Montevideo provides for the gradual establishment of a free trade area, which would form the basis for a Latin American Common Market. Reduction of tariff and other trade barriers is to be carried out gradually up to 1980 by two means, the National Lists and a Common List.

The National Lists form the basis for reductions of tariff and trade barriers between the member countries. Each country presents annually a list of those commodities on which it is prepared to grant reductions and agreement between the members shall be reached by negotiation. Reductions agreed in National Lists come into force on January 1st of the year following agreement.

The Common List includes those products on which complete exemption from all duties and charges shall obtain within the Free Trade Zone. The products represented on this list shall represent at least 25 per cent of the total trade of the area during the first three years, 50 per cent during the second three-year period, 75 per cent during the third three-year period, and the greater part of the intrazonal trade during the final three-year period.

The Treaty includes provisions for Special Lists for more favourable terms for less developed countries. Bolivia, Ecuador, Paraguay and Uruguay have obtained benefits under this clause.

Subregional Agreements. The Association approves in principle the drawing up of subregional agreements between its members, in accordance with the Declaration of the Presidents of America, signed at Punta del Este in April 1967, as being a means of encouraging the realization of a Latin American Common Market.

ACTIVITIES

Trade Liberalization Programme. The annual rounds of negotiations have given rise to approximately 11,000 tariff reductions incorporated in the National Lists. More than 7,000 preferential tariff reductions in favour of less developed member countries have been included in Special Lists. These concessions cover almost 80 per cent of trade between countries of the region.

Negotiations for a second Common List were begun in December 1967 and continued July–November 1968, but no agreement was reached. In October 1969, when negotiations for the Common List were resumed, the Contracting Parties adopted a protocol, drawn up in June 1969 by the Permanent Executive Committee, modifying the Treaty of Montevideo. The amendments provide for prolongation of the strict time limits set for the introduction of free trade in the area, and the transition period is to terminate in 1980 instead of in 1973.

Growth of Trade. Provisional statistics show that in 1973 intraregional trade of the eleven countries—including Bolivia and Venezuela which joined LAFTA in 1968—increased 283 per cent since the Treaty of Montevideo came into effect in 1961. Intraregional exports went up from $488 million in 1961 to $2,052 million in 1973, while intrazonal imports rose from $588 million in 1961 to $2,069 million in 1973. During the same period, regional trade (exports plus imports) with the rest of the world grew by 141 per cent.

Co-operation and Development. A number of industrial agreements have been completed in relation to electronics, chemicals, petro-chemicals, electrical appliances, pharma-

Latin American Free Trade Association

The Andean group of countries (Bolivia, Colombia, Chile, Ecuador and Peru) signed the Cartagena Agreement in May 1969 and in July 1969 the Permanent Executive Committee of LAFTA unanimously approved the establishment of an Andean Common Market. Venezuela joined the Cartagena Agreement in 1972.

A River Plate Basin Treaty (Tratado de la Cuenca de la Plata) was signed in Brasilia in April 1969, by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, to co-operate in joint development schemes in the area irrigated by the rivers which flow into the Plate estuary.

ceuticals, dyes and pigments, glass, electric generation, office equipment, photographic and phonographic supplies. The Permanent Executive Committee agreed in September 1969 on proposals for a regional policy for industrial development, integration of industry by sector, widening of markets, investment policy, and measures to be taken to assist the less developed countries of the region.

LAFTA has established a System of Payments and Credits to facilitate commercial operations between member countries. The system functions by means of a network of credit agreements between central banks, and a procedure of multilateral compensation, which is administered by the Central Reserve Bank of Peru. Operations channelled through this system have increased from $100 million in 1966, the first year of functioning, to almost $1,400 million in 1973. LAFTA has also established a credit mechanism, the Santo Domingo Agreement, to cover temporary balance-of-payments deficiencies of LAFTA partners in their regional trade. The member states pay contributions to a central fund, which in October 1974 amounted to $39 million.

LAFTA has adopted a policy of co-ordination and harmonization of legislation, principally through special intergovernmental agreements, such as the Agreement on Maritime Transport, the Protocol on Transit of Persons, and the Protocol on the Settlement of Disputes. A number of studies have been carried out on matters relating to integration, such as industrial property, harmonization of fiscal laws, customs legislation and the adoption by Contracting Parties of common positions with regard to third parties.

ORGANIZATION

PRESIDIUM

President: JOHANNES ANTONSSON (Sweden).

Vice-Presidents: ANKER JØRGENSEN (Denmark), ODVAR NORDLI (Norway), RAGNHILDUR HELGADOTTIR (Iceland), V. J. SUKSELAINEN (Finland).

COUNCIL

Meets annually in one of the Nordic capitals, electing the Presidium, which takes charge of the Council's work until the next session. Each delegation elects its own President, the Council President being the one from the country which is host that year. The other four are Vice-Presidents.

The Council consists of 78 delegates elected annually from the Parliament of each country (18 from Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden and 6 from Iceland) and of non-voting Government Representatives. Resolutions are passed in the form of recommendations sent to the Nordic Council of Ministers which must submit progress reports to the Council annually.

The twenty-second session was held in Stockholm in February 1974, and the twenty-third in Reykjavík in February 1975.

STANDING COMMITTEES

CHAIRMEN

Economic Committee: STURE PALM (Sweden).

Cultural Committee: GYLFI GÍSLASON (Iceland).

Legal Committee: K. B. ANDERSEN (Denmark).

Social and Environment Committee: ASBJÖRN HAUGSVEDT (Norway).

Communications Committee: BROR LILLQVIST (Finland).

The Council members are distributed on five standing committees. The economic committee has 22 members, the cultural committee 17, the legal committee 13, the committee on social and environment policies 13 and the communications committee 13. The committees meet during and between the sessions preparing the items to be put before the plenary session. Matters to be dealt with by the Council are either raised by the members, by the national governments or by the Nordic Council of Ministers.

SECRETARIATS

The Presidium secretariat has general responsibility in joint Nordic activities, and in particular for relations with the Council of Ministers.

The Nordic Council has a national secretariat in each capital. The heads of these secretariats form a collegium, which prepares the Nordic Council's work.

The Council of Ministers has a secretariat in Oslo, and there is a secretariat for cultural co-operation in Copenhagen.

SECRETARIES

Denmark: FRANTZ WENDT, Christiansborg Ridebane 10, DK-1218 Copenhagen K.

Finland: E. HULTIN, Pohjoismaiden neuvosto Eduskuntatalo-Riksdagshuset, SF-00102 Helsinki 10.

Sweden: CHRISTER JACOBSON, Nordisk Råd, Fack, S-103 10 Stockholm 2.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Has jurisdiction over the whole field of Nordic co-operation, as set out under the headings below. Direct discussions between the member governments take place in its sessions and informal meetings.

Each session brings together the ministers with responsibility in the member governments for the subject under discussion. Each government also appoints a member to co-ordinate the work of its ministers in Nordic affairs.

The Council of Ministers does not take formal decisions without the explicit support of the member countries, and is not a supra-national body.

Except in questions of procedure, unanimity is required; each country has one vote. The Council of Ministers makes its proposals to the Nordic Council, and presents it with an annual report on joint activities of the Nordic countries.

General Secretary: OLLI BERGMAN.

ACTIVITIES

ECONOMIC

Nordic Fund for Technology and Industrial Development: f. 1973 with a capital of 10 million Swedish kroner, to be increased in stages to 50 million. Makes grants and loans for industrial research and development projects of interest to more than one member country.

NORDTEST: f. 1973 as an international agency for tests and controls in the building materials industry. Testing methods are to be harmonized among the member states in a programme designed eventually to create a common Nordic market in the building trades.

NORDEL: f. 1963; common authority for electricity supply.

Energy: a common energy policy is under discussion.

Foreign aid: the national administrations for overseas development have carried out several projects as a group, and consult with one another frequently.

Other organizations: Iceland, Finland, Norway and Sweden are members of the European Free Trade Association (EFTA), which encourages further economic co-operation.

The same countries each have separate treaties with the European Economic Community, providing free trade; Denmark alone is a full member.

CULTURAL

Secretariat for Cultural Co-operation: Copenhagen; Dir. MAGNUS KULL.

Nordic Cultural Treaty: entered into force 1972; education, research and other cultural activities are systematically encouraged by common planning, with the policy of forming a Nordic cultural community. The Ministers of Culture and Education have set up a committee with working groups for this purpose.

Education: the Nordic Council aims to make a single educational system for Scandinavia. Many university qualifications are already valid in the whole region. The Council encourages the teaching of other Nordic languages in the schools of the member countries, and the translation of the national literatures. School curricula are to be harmonized.

Academic Institutions: created on the recommendation of the Nordic Council.

Nordic Institute of Theoretical Physics, Copenhagen.

Institute of Maritime Law, Oslo.

Institute of Asiatic Studies, Copenhagen.

Institute for Social Planning, Stockholm.

under the Secretariat for Cultural Co-operation. Awards a literature prize to a Scandinavian writer each year, and a prize for music, to a Scandinavian composer, every two years.

NORDVISION: the authority linking the national radio and television corporations,

LEGAL

The Nordic Council works towards uniformity of legislation and interpretation of the law. A large proportion of private law is already uniform throughout the Nordic countries.

Citizens of one Nordic country working in another are in many respects given the status of nationals; it has been proposed that they should be given the vote in their country of residence. Changing citizenship amongst Nordic countries has been simplified.

In view of the present increase in movement of labour and in tourism, the Legal Committee emphasizes the need for a plan for future legislative co-operation.

There are special extradition facilities between the Nordic countries, and the Council has recommended further stages towards co-operation between the police and the courts of the Nordic countries.

There is a permanent Council for Criminology, with a secretariat in Helsinki.

SOCIAL POLICY

Everywhere in Scandinavia, except in Iceland, work permits are not required by Scandinavian citizens. This situation is termed a free labour market, although there are certain restrictions for some of the professions such as doctors, dentists and nurses.

The systems of social security are very nearly uniform, and joint projects are carried out, such as research in health care.

THE ENVIRONMENT

Pollution of the sea, notably in the Baltic, the Gulf of Bothnia, the Öresund, the Skagerrak and the Kattegat, is treated as a common problem. Other aspects of conservation work are being studied by a special committee, together with the Nordic Council for Applied Research (NORDFORSK).

A convention on the protection of the environment was signed at the 22nd session of the Nordic Council, in Stockholm, in 1974.

FREE MOVEMENT

Passports are not required for travel between Nordic countries, either by Nordic citizens or others.

Nordic postal union: the national post and telecommunications systems all have uniform rules, and the railway and customs administrations have close links.

The postal banks and savings banks are so arranged that the customer may use branches in any of the Nordic countries.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Nordic Council

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

In the north of Finland, Norway and Sweden the Council has recommended improvements in land and air communications, and in telecommunications.

International highways, for example in the North Calott area, have been proposed.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION— NATO

Brussels 1110, Belgium

Founded in 1949 as an international collective defence organization linking a group of European states with the U.S.A. and Canada. Greece and Turkey joined in 1952, and the Federal Republic of Germany in 1955. France withdrew from the military side of NATO in 1966 and Greece did likewise in 1974.

in Greece's partial withdrawal from the Alliance. Greece, like France, will no longer be represented in certain committees, and Greek armed forces will not be at the disposal of NATO.

THE DEFENCE PLANNING REVIEW

As NATO is an international, not a supra-national organization, its member countries decide themselves the amount to be devoted to their defence effort and the form which the latter will assume. Thus, the aim of NATO's defence planning is to develop realistic military plans for the defence of the alliance at reasonable cost.

Under the annual Defence Planning Review, the political, military and economic factors are considered in relation to strategy, force requirements and available resources. The procedure for the co-ordination of military plans and defence expenditures rests on the detailed and comparative analysis of the capabilities of member countries.

INFRASTRUCTURE

Infrastructure is a term covering fixed installations such as airfields, telecommunications networks, fuel pipelines, etc., which modern armies need to operate efficiently. All those installations which are for the use of international forces are financed in common.

An infrastructure programme was first approved in 1952, and £231 million allotted. Since 1966 programmes have been planned on a five-year basis, the current period being 1970-74. The total cost of NATO common infrastructure since 1951 (including current five-year plan) is approximately £1,900 million.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY

(April 1949)

The Parties to this Treaty reaffirm their faith in the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and their desire to live in peace with all peoples and all Governments.

They are determined to safeguard the freedom, common heritage and civilization of their peoples, founded on the principles of democracy, individual liberty and the rule of law.

They seek to promote stability and well-being in the North Atlantic area.

They are resolved to unite their efforts for collective defence and for the preservation of peace and security.

They therefore agree to this North Atlantic Treaty:

ARTICLE 1

The Parties undertake, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, to settle any international dispute in which they may be involved by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered, and to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

ARTICLE 2

The Parties will contribute toward the further development of peaceful and friendly international relations by strengthening their free institutions, by bringing about a better understanding of the principles upon which these institutions are founded, and by promoting conditions of stability and well-being. They will seek to eliminate conflict in their international economic policies and will encourage economic collaboration between any or all of them.

ARTICLE 3

In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this Treaty, the Parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack.

ARTICLE 4

The Parties will consult together whenever, in the opinion of any of them, the territorial integrity, political independence or security of any of the Parties is threatened.

ARTICLE 5

The Parties agree that an armed attack against one or more of them in Europe or North America shall be considered an attack against them all; and consequently they agree that, if such an armed attack occurs, each of them, in exercise of the right of individual or collective self-defence recognised by Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, will assist the Party or Parties so attacked by taking forthwith, individually and in concert with the other Parties, such action as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force, to restore and maintain the security of the North Atlantic area.

Any such armed attack and all measures taken as a result thereof shall immediately be reported to the Security Council. Such measures shall be terminated when the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to restore and maintain international peace and security.

ARTICLE 6

For the purpose of Article 5 an armed attack on one or more of the Parties is deemed to include an armed attack on the territory of any of the Parties in Europe or North America, on the Algerian Departments of France (inapplicable since July 1962), on the occupation forces of any Party in Europe, on the islands under the jurisdiction of any Party in the North Atlantic area north of the Tropic of Cancer or on the vessels or aircraft in this area of any of the Parties. (Amended on the accession of Greece and Turkey.)

ARTICLE 7

This Treaty does not affect, and shall not be interpreted as affecting, in any way the rights and obligations under the Charter of the Parties which are members of the United Nations, or the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security.

ARTICLE 8

Each Party declares that none of the international engagements now in force between it and any other of the Parties or any third State is in conflict with the provisions of this Treaty, and undertakes not to enter into any international engagement in conflict with this Treaty.

ARTICLE 9

The Parties hereby establish a council, on which each of them shall be represented, to consider matters concerning the implementation of this Treaty. The Council shall be so organized as to be able to meet promptly at any time. The Council shall set up such subsidiary bodies as may be necessary; in particular it shall establish immediately a defence committee which shall recommend measures for the implementation of Articles 3 and 5.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

North Atlantic Treaty Organization

ARTICLE 10

The Parties may, by unanimous agreement, invite any other European State in a position to further the principles of this Treaty and to contribute to the security of the North Atlantic area to accede to this Treaty. Any State so invited may become a party to the Treaty by depositing its instrument of accession with the Government of the United States of America. The Government of the United States of America will inform each of the Parties of the deposit of each such instrument of accession.

ARTICLE 11

This Treaty shall be ratified and its provisions carried out by the Parties in accordance with their respective constitutional processes. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited as soon as possible with the Government of the United States of America, which will notify all the other signatories of each deposit. The Treaty shall enter into force between the States which have ratified it as soon as the ratifications of the majority of the signatories, including the ratifications of Belgium, Canada, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States, have been deposited and shall come into effect with respect to other States on the date of the deposit of their ratifications.

ARTICLE 12

After the Treaty has been in force for ten years, or at any time thereafter, the Parties shall, if any of them so requests, consult together for the purpose of reviewing the Treaty, having regard for the factors then affecting peace and security in the North Atlantic area, including the development of universal as well as regional arrangements under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security.

ARTICLE 13

After the Treaty has been in force for twenty years, any Party may cease to be a party one year after its notice of denunciation has been given to the Government of the United States of America, which will inform the Governments of the other Parties of the deposit of each notice of denunciation.

AIMS

Harmonization of Customs regulations.

Setting up an African Common Market.

Agreement on Double Taxation.

Regularization of insurance and other costs on trade exchanges.

Stabilization Funds in support of steady prices.

Harmonization of investment codes.

Since the 1974 Conference of Heads of State at Bangui, the aims of the organization have been expressed in a new form. This was made necessary by widespread loss of confidence among the member states, six of whom had withdrawn in the nine years since its founding.

In future OCAM intends to leave political matters to such bodies as the OAU, and will concentrate on pursuing its economic aims, such as to bring the economic communities of Africa within the framework of a single confederation. A solidarity and guarantee fund will be established, to improve OCAM finances and to guarantee loans from outside, and to assist the drought-affected countries of the Sahel.

Non-francophone countries are to play a greater part in the organization, which has generally become more African in its outlook.

AFRICAN CO-OPERATION

Accord africain et malgache du sucre (Common Sugar Agreement): Secretariat: Ndjamena, Chad; signed in June 1966, came into force in October 1966 and was adopted in a new form at the Port Louis Conference, Mauritius, in May 1973. Both the sugar-producing countries (Congo Republic and Madagascar) and the consumer countries benefit from this agreement, which provides for the fixing each year of a guaranteed price for sugar in OCAM countries and a quota for the exporting countries. This quota represents 70 per cent of the needs of the importing countries. A levy is imposed on sugar imported from non-member countries, though preference is given to European sugar (mainly from Belgium and France). This levy is placed in a common fund; Exec. Dir. ANTOINE ESSOMÉ.

Agence pour la sécurité de la navigation aérienne (ASNEGA): Bangui, Central African Republic. Transferred from Dakar in 1974.

African Computer Institute: Libreville, Gabon; f. 1971 to train computer specialists. In 1972 France made a donation of 85.7 million CFA francs, to enable the institute to increase the maximum student intake from 20 to 75.

Air Afrique: B.P. 21.017, Abidjan, Ivory Coast; provides international air services between the 11 member states and other countries (Cameroon withdrew from the airline in January 1971 and later set up her own national company); Pres. and Dir.-Gen. AOUSSOU KOFFI (Ivory Coast).

Centre de formation des statisticiens économiques: Kigali, Rwanda; moved to this location in 1974.

Comité des ministres des transports: Dakar, Senegal; f. 1962 to study transport problems within the former Union Africaine et Malgache (UAM); Sec.-Gen. CHEIKH FAL (Senegal).

Ecole Inter-Etats d'ingénieurs de l'équipement rural (EIER): P.O.B. 7023, Ouagadougou, Upper Volta.

KONAN BEDIÉ (Ivory Coast); Dir.-Gen. DENIS EKANI.

Organisation africaine et malgache du café (OAMCAF): Paris, France. The eight coffee producing countries of OCAM, including Togo, Dahomey and Ivory Coast, have formed themselves into the African and Malagasy Coffee Organization, which is treated as one unit for purposes of operation of the International Coffee Agreement. These countries receive a block quota under that Agreement and distribute it among themselves through their own consultative machinery.

Union africaine et malgache des postes et télécommunications (UAMPT): B.P. 44, Brazzaville, Congo; f. 1961; the UAMPT is a restricted union of Posts and Telecommunications set up to study problems of common interest and to promote the co-ordination of postal and telecommunications services in member countries. ## INTERNATIONAL ENERGY AGENCY

Set up by the OECD Council of Ministers in November 1974 to deal with the world energy crisis and future energy shortages.

MEMBERS

Austria	Italy	Sweden
Belgium	Japan	Switzerland
Canada	Luxembourg	Turkey
Denmark	Netherlands	United Kingdom
Federal Republic of Germany	Spain	United States of America

FUNCTIONS

The pact approved at the Council of Ministers calls for a reduction in dependence on imported oil, sharing in times of shortage or embargo, stocking, consultation with oil companies and relations with oil producers and the developing nations.

In the event of a reduction or anticipated reduction of 7 per cent in oil supplies to a member or members, the Agency may order oil reserves to be re-allocated amongst the members.

The Agency will oversee common efforts in conservation of supplies, research and development, nuclear enrichment projects and investment in new energy supplies.

GOVERNING BOARD

Composed of ministers of the member governments. Decisions may be taken by a weighted majority on a number of specified subjects, which include aspects of stockpiling, oil-sharing contingency plans and relations with the oil companies; a simple majority is required for procedural decisions and decisions implementing specific obligations in the agreement. Unanimity is required only if new obligations, not already specified in the agreement, are to be undertaken.

The Governing Board is assisted by a management committee and four standing groups.

Chairman: ETIENNE DAVIGNON (Belgium).

FUNCTIONS

The main purpose of the Agency is to increase nuclear generating capacity in the member countries. Also, it promotes scientific and technical co-operation and organizes international research; it advocates uniform legislation on health and safety, liability and insurance; and it surveys the resources of nuclear fuel and examines the role of nuclear energy in the future.

Further, it operates a security control system to prevent the use of joint undertakings for military purposes.

Long-term Role of Nuclear Energy in Western Europe: began in 1964. Chair. B. ALER (Sweden).

Working Group on Gas-cooled Fast Reactors: in 1971 a programme was set up in eight European countries to develop this type of reactor, and a Co-ordinating Group to supervise. The work is carried out by a number of research centres. The Gas Breeder Reactor Association in Brussels, formed by a number of industrial groups, also participates. Chair. P. MOSER (Switzerland).

JOINT PROJECTS

EUROCHEMIC (European Company for Chemical Processing of Irradiated Fuels): Mol, Belgium; international company f. 1959 to build and operate plant for reprocessing used uranium fuels from nuclear reactors. Since 1966 it has treated well over 100 tons of irradiated fuels from more than 20 reactors.

In 1969 the Société de Fluoruration de l'Uranium (SFU) was formed, to build an adjacent installation for converting uranyl nitrate, taken from the plant, into uranium tetrafluoride, which is needed for the process of uranium enrichment.

The shareholders are governments, public authorities and industrial bodies in 13 European countries. Chair. of Board Dr. W. SCHMIDT-KÜSTER (Federal Republic of Germany); Man. Dir. Dr. E. DETILLEUX.

Halden Project: Halden, Norway; experimental boiling heavy water reactor, which became an OECD project in 1958. From 1964, under a new agreement with the participating countries, the reactor has been used in a new programme of research, including tests of prototype fuel elements. By the end of 1975, when this agreement ends, expenditure on the project is expected to amount to $22 million. Nuclear energy authorities in eight countries, and an industrial group in the Federal Republic of Germany, are supporting the project. Chair. Prof. J. PELSNER (Federal Republic of Germany); Project Man. J.-E. LUNDE.

Dragon Project: Winfrith, Dorset, U.K.; a high-temperature reactor, which was completed in 1964; its full design power of 20 megawatts was achieved in 1966. The project has been extended until 1976, and the overall budget for the 17 years is £47 million.

In 1969 it was decided to make commercial use of the system as a power supply for industry in the member countries.

It is supported by atomic energy authorities in six countries, and by EURATOM. Chair. Dr. P. MARIEN (EEC); Chief Exec. Dr. L. R. SHEPHERD.

International Project in Food Irradiation: began in 1971; tests are carried out on foods that have been preserved by irradiation processes, to see if the quality of the food has been affected. Research is also conducted on the methods of testing. Most of this work is carried out under contract in specialist laboratories in the member countries, and the programme has a central office at the German Federal Research Institute for Food Preservation, Karlsruhe. The scheme is jointly sponsored by three international agencies—NEA, IAEA and FAO, and 22 countries are participating. Chair. P. BALLIGAND (France); Project Leader D. J. CLEGG.

COMMON SERVICES

NEA Computer Programme Library: in the EURATOM Joint Research Establishment at Ispra, Italy. The Library and the Neutron Data Compilation Centre (see below) are linked with the equivalent services in the U.S.A. and,

THE HIGHWAY

The total mileage of the Pan American Highway System, including alternative routes, is 49,315 miles of which 27,513 are paved.

Mexico. The Highway has four sections converging on Mexico City. The eastern road enters at Laredo, Texas, with branches to Brownsville and McAllen, Texas; the Central Highway runs from El Paso, Texas; the Pacific Highway is along the west coast from Nogales, Arizona; and the Constitution Highway begins at Piedras Negras.

Guatemala. The Highway through Guatemala has been completed and paved throughout. An additional road from the Talisman Bridge to the border with El Salvador has been added.

El Salvador. Paved throughout. An alternative route from La Hachadura on the Guatemalan border to the junction with the Pan American Highway has been added.

Honduras. Paved. A 57-mile branch road leads to Tegucigalpa, the capital.

Nicaragua. Paved throughout. The Highway joins the Atlantic Highway at San Benito.

Costa Rica. On the southern section the bridges were completed in 1963.

Panama. Thirty-eight miles east of Panama City the road ends. Construction of the 574-mile Darien Gap between Chepo, Panama, and the Highway in Colombia, now under construction, will complete the Highway.

Venezuela. The Highway runs from La Guaira, via Caracas to the Colombian frontier at Cúcuta.

Peru. Highway is planned to enter at La Tina. In the south the Highway forks, the Franklin D. Roosevelt Highway continuing southward into Chile and the main route going east and south into Bolivia.

Chile. Highway runs due south to Santiago. At Los Andes a branch turns east to Argentina. The Uspallata Pass section is closed for six months every year owing to heavy winter snows, when cars may be shipped by rail through the Transandine Railroad Tunnel.

Bolivia. Two routes lead from the Peruvian frontier to La Paz, whence the Highway continues southward to the Argentinian frontier at Villazón.

Argentina. Four routes converge on Buenos Aires. Eastward from Los Andes in Chile; southeast from Bolivia; south along the west bank of the Paraguay and Paraná rivers from Asunción in Paraguay; and south-west from Uruguiana in Brazil and joining the Asunción road at Santa Fé.

SEATO COUNCIL

The Seato Council consists of the Foreign Ministers of the seven member countries; responsible for common policy of the organization. The Council usually meets once a year in the capital cities of member countries. Most recent meeting in New York, in September 1974.

Following decisions taken at the thirteenth annual meeting of the SEATO Council in New York on September 28th, 1973, the military and civil sides of the organization have been merged.

PERMANENT WORKING GROUP meets weekly and is made up of diplomats of the member countries and from the Thai Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Group's duty is to carry out preparatory work on proposals and policy matters for the Council Representatives.

MILITARY ADVISERS GROUP: This group directs SEATO military activities and is responsible to the SEATO Council. Each member nation nominates one high-ranking officer at Chief of Staff or Theatre Commander level as its military adviser.

EXPERT STUDY GROUPS: Convened from time to time to provide advice on subjects such as community development, counter-subversion, culture, economics, education, information, labour and security.

Advisory and Training Division.

Exercise and Planning and Support Division.

OFFICE OF SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS: responsible for planning and implementing a programme designed to supplement national efforts for economic and educational development.

ACTIVITIES

PROJECT ASSISTANCE

Today SEATO activities are concentrated upon small-scale schemes in rural, and often sensitive, areas. These are contributing positively to raising living standards, inculcating the habit of self-government at local levels, and helping to impede the survival of subversive forces. SEATO-assisted projects are organized by the Cultural and Economic Affairs Office, and financed by the joint budget plus additional bilateral aid funds from SEATO members.

Health: SEATO assists the rural health services of Thailand with the provision of equipment for health centres and assistance in training auxiliary health workers. A national family planning programme has just been started.

Three major research centres have been initiated (see below). In order to assist the Thai Government's Clean Water Programme for Rural Schools, 16 wells have been dug in north-east Thailand and teams trained to continue the well-drilling scheme in the north and north-east of the country. The Philippine and Thai Child-Care Programmes receive assistance for equipment, salaries and training.

Development: SEATO is helping the Thai Government resettlement programme for hilltribe evacuees from areas exposed to Communist subversion. There are approximately half a million tribesmen distributed throughout the mountainous areas of northern Thailand.

The organization has constructed an earthwork dam for a multi-tribal resettlement village in Nan Province, and is embarking upon the construction of a cannery for local produce. An associated project is the Hilltribe Agricultural Extension Centre, where cash crops suitable for the hilltribes are being identified and reared. SEATO members continue to support a Hilltribe Research Centre and radio station, both in Chiang Mai, Northern Thailand.

A SEATO-Thai Rural Development Technical Assistance Centre was set up at Ubon in north-east Thailand in 1962. The Centre encourages villagers within its service area to exercise, initiate and formulate their own development plans, for which it provides technical assistance. Since 1970, SEATO has conducted a Village-of-the-Year Award Programme in conjunction with the Thai and Philippine Governments. Prizes are awarded annually in each country to villages exhibiting the most marked improvements in community development.

SEATO has contributed funds for the construction of multi-purpose centres (providing medical, educational and administrative facilities) for the poorer barrios of Central Luzon, Philippines. Funds are also being donated to purchase rice and corn mills to be managed by co-operatives.

Education: The SEATO Cultural Programme, launched in 1957, today places emphasis on education in rural areas, especially where minority groups need special help. A Rural Education Assistance Programme was launched in 1973—ten scholarships will be granted under the Programme to children from rural and hilltribe areas, and assistance will be given to train village and hilltribe teachers.

Grants continue to be awarded under the Cultural Programme to post- and undergraduate students from the regional SEATO countries. A total of 156 grants for postgraduate studies were awarded between 1959 and 1973. SEATO also provides scholarships to the Asian Institute of Technology. Altogether $12,000 is awarded annually in study grants.

The Fellowship and Advisory Programme, an amalgamation of the previous SEATO Research Fellowship Awards and the SEATO Professorship programme, will operate to meet the specific requirements of the regional members. The organization is continuing to give assistance to vocational and technical training schools (see below). During 1973-74 funds were set aside for basic tools and equipment, and a water-supply and irrigation system, for the Technical Training Centre for Central Luzon at Magalang, Pampanga Province.

SEATO-INITIATED PROJECTS

It is SEATO policy to help projects it has launched to become independent. This makes it possible to begin new projects; the projects listed below were begun by SEATO and are now independent, whilst continuing to receive bilateral aid from SEATO members.

SEATO Medical Research and Clinical Research Laboratories, established in Bangkok in 1960 and 1963 respectively, are centres for research and training in tropical diseases.

Cholera Research Laboratory, established in Dacca in 1960, is one of the world's largest institutes of research into the disease, employing more than 800 scientists, nurses, field workers and technicians. Studies conducted show that cholera can now be treated effectively at small cost by the oral therapy method developed at the laboratory.

Asian Institute of Technology (AIT) was founded in 1959 as the SEATO Graduate School of Engineering. It became an independent institution, under the management of an international Board of Trustees and its Executive Committee, in 1967. Over 550 students from all over Asia graduated between 1959 and 1972.

Vehicle Re-build Workshop was established in 1965 as a joint Thai-Australian military project under SEATO auspices to handle the repair and maintenance of Thai military and government vehicles.

Vocational and Technical Training Schools: SEATO assistance has helped to establish 20 vocational training schools in the major towns of Thailand; Technical Training Centres in Karachi and Dacca; and, in the Philippines, a Textile Workers' Training Centre (now integrated within the programme of the Marikina School of Arts and Crafts) and a Labour Market Information and Statistics Service Project.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Military Technical Training School is a joint Australian-Thai project providing training for technical supervisors, foremen, skilled workmen and instructors of the Royal Thai Armed Forces. The school has been expanded to accommodate a Motor Mechanics Training Centre, and an Electronics Wing is scheduled for completion in early 1975.

Meteorological Telecommunications Project, launched by SEATO in 1961-62 to improve the telecommunications system for collecting meteorological and aeronautical information in the Philippines and Thailand, is now nationally operated with continuing U.S. assistance.

Agricultural Research Project was commissioned by SEATO in 1968, bringing together a team of consultants in the various fields of agricultural research; a report, containing far-reaching recommendations, was presented in March 1969.

South-East Asia Treaty Organization

Cultural Projects were initiated originally to encourage the arts. The reconstruction of Pimai, a Khmer temple in Thailand, was undertaken with the assistance of a French architect; SEATO literary prizes were awarded annually from 1968 to 1973.

Following the Canberra Agreement of 1947, the Commission was set up in 1948 and moved to its present headquarters in 1949. In 1951 Guam and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands were brought within the scope of the Commission. Western Samoa, which attained independence in 1962, was accepted as a member Government in 1965 and formally acceded to the Agreement in July 1965. Nauru became a member of the Commission in July 1969, and in May 1971 Fiji also acceded to the Canberra Agreement. In 1962 the Netherlands, one of the original members, withdrew when it ceased to be responsible for Dutch New Guinea (now West Irian).

Each territory has its own programme of economic and social development. The Commission assists these programmes by bringing people together for discussion and study, by research into some of the problems common to the region, by providing expert advice and assistance and by disseminating technical information.

ACTIVITIES

The Commission organizes conferences of technical experts, seminars and training courses. It finances study tours by technical officers, promotes research and collects, prepares and distributes information. The work of the Commission falls within three fields:

ORGANIZATION

COUNCIL OF HEADS OF STATES

Secretary-General: PIERRE TCHANQUE (Cameroon).

FUNCTIONS

The main provisions of the Union, embodied in the Treaty of Brazzaville, aim to rationalize and harmonize the tariff and tax systems of the four member states, and include:

Customs Union: The group of four states constitutes a free trade area, in which the circulation of persons, merchandise, services and capital is free, with certain exceptions. A common external tariff, additional to previous duties and fiscal charges, is levied on all imports entering the region, except on goods from members of the European Economic Community and of the former Union africaine et malgache de Coopération économique. A common investment code has been established.

ARTICLE TWO

The contracting parties declare that they are ready to participate in the spirit of sincere co-operation in all international actions aimed at safeguarding international peace and security and will fully dedicate their efforts to the realization of these aims. The contracting parties will strive for the adoption by agreement with other States desiring to collaborate in this matter of effective measures for the general reduction of armaments and the prohibition of atomic, hydrogen and other weapons of mass destruction.

ARTICLE THREE

The contracting parties shall consult each other on all important international questions affecting their common interests, being guided by the requirements of strengthening international peace and security. They shall consult with each other without delay at any time when in the opinion of any one of them a threat arises of armed attack on one or several States signatory to the Treaty, in the interests of ensuring joint defence and the maintenance of peace and security.

ARTICLE FOUR

In case of armed attack in Europe on one or several States signatory to the Treaty, by any State or group of States, each State signatory to the Treaty, by way of exercising the right to individual or collective defence, in conformity with Article 51 of the UN Charter, shall render the State or States subjected to such attack immediate aid individually and by agreement with other States signatory to the Treaty, with all the means which it shall deem necessary, including the use of armed force. The States signatory to the Treaty shall immediately consult each other as to the joint measures which must be taken to secure and maintain international peace and security. The measures adopted on the basis of this Article will be reported to the Security Council in conformity with the Articles of the UN Charter. These measures will be terminated as soon as the Security Council launches measures necessary for the restoration and maintenance of international peace and security.

ARTICLE FIVE

The contracting parties have agreed to set up a Joint Command of their armed forces to be placed, by agreement between the Powers, at the disposal of this Command acting on the basis of jointly established principles. ## HISTORY

Western European Union is a development of the Brussels Treaty signed by Belgium, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom in 1948. That Treaty provided for collective self-defence, mutual automatic military assistance in the event of a repetition of hostilities and for collaboration in economic, social and cultural matters between these five states. At the time of its signature, the Treaty was a unique instrument, creating the most closely-knit international co-operative association ever known. Furthermore, it contributed directly to the creation of larger similarly combined efforts: on the military side NATO, and on the civil side the Council of Europe.

As a sequel to the collapse in 1954 of the plans for creating a European Defence Community, a nine-power conference was convened in London in order to attempt to reach a new agreement. In particular some means had to be found of associating the defence effort of the Federal Republic of Germany with NATO. The conference was attended by Ministers representing Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. A document was drawn up stating that the occupation régime in Germany would be ended and that Germany would join NATO; the former Brussels Treaty would be strengthened and extended, and Germany and Italy would be invited to accede to it.

These decisions were embodied in a series of agreements, signed in 1954, which form the substance of the seven-power Western European Union, the seven powers being Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom. The ratification of these agreements was completed by May 6th, 1955, on which date Western European Union came into being.

On the ratification of the agreements, Western European Union was also charged with the specific task of settling the future of the Saar. Under a Franco-German agreement, the Saar was to have a European Statute within the framework of WEU, provided that this Statute was approved by a referendum. A Commission was set up in May 1955 to supervise the referendum, which was held on October 23rd, 1955. The result showed that the Saar majority had voted against the adoption of the European Statute and had furthermore expressed a wish to be incorporated in the Federal Republic of Germany. The Saar then became a Land of the Federal Republic of Germany, but remained linked economically to France. The final incorporation of the territory, now re-named Saarland, took place on July 5th, 1959.

The activities of the four main social and cultural committees were transferred to the Council of Europe in June 1960.

The Council of WEU has formally approved certain relaxations of the restrictions on German arms production imposed by Protocol III of the revised Brussels Treaty. They concern specified long-range and guided missiles, influence mines, and the construction of certain ships and submarines.

In July 1963, following the suspension of negotiations for Britain's entry into the Common Market, it was agreed that the WEU Council would meet at quarterly intervals and that the economic situation in Europe would be an item regularly on its agenda. The Commission of the EEC would be invited to be represented during the discussion of this point. These meetings continued between 1963 and 1970. Although political consultation continues, discussions on the economic situation have been suspended since the re-opening at the end of June 1970 of negotiations for the enlargement of the European Economic Community.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Western European Union

Several proposals were put forward at Council Meetings held during 1968 for closer political and defence consultations within the framework of WEU and, specifically, for discussions relating to Britain's role in Europe.

At a ministerial meeting in Luxembourg in February 1969 the United Kingdom's proposal for a meeting to discuss the Middle East situation was approved by all members except France. This meeting, organized by the WEU Secretariat in London later in the month, was boycotted by France, who declared that she would not attend ministerial meetings until further notice, because the convening of the present meeting without the unanimous approval of WEU members was a breach of treaty.

France rejoined the Council in June 1970.

THE BRUSSELS TREATY

(as amended by Protocol No. 1, signed in 1954, modifying and completing the Treaty)

ARTICLE I

Convinced of the close community of their interests and of the necessity of uniting in order to promote the economic recovery of Europe, the High Contracting Parties will so organise and co-ordinate their economic activities as to produce the best possible results, by the elimination of conflict in their economic policies, the co-ordination of production and the development of commercial exchanges.

The co-operation provided for in the preceding paragraph, which will be effected through the Council referred to in Article VIII as well as through other bodies, shall not involve any duplication of, or prejudice to, the work of other economic organisations in which the High Contracting Parties are or may be represented but shall on the contrary assist the work of those organisations.

ARTICLE II

The High Contracting Parties will make every effort in common, both by direct consultation and in specialised agencies, to promote the attainment of a higher standard of living by their peoples and to develop on corresponding lines the social and other related services of their countries.

The High Contracting Parties will consult with the object of achieving the earliest possible application of recommendations of immediate practical interest, relating to social matters, adopted with their approval in the specialised agencies.

They will endeavour to conclude as soon as possible conventions with each other in the sphere of social security.

ARTICLE III

The High Contracting Parties will make every effort in common to lead their peoples towards a better understanding of the principles which form the basis of their common civilisation and to promote cultural exchanges by conventions between themselves or by other means.

ARTICLE IV

In the execution of the Treaty the High Contracting Parties and any organs established by them under the Treaty shall work in close co-operation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Recognising the undesirability of duplicating the military staffs of NATO, the Council and its Agency will rely on the appropriate military authorities of NATO for information and advice on military matters.

ARTICLE V

If any of the High Contracting Parties should be the object of an armed attack in Europe, the other High Contracting Parties will, in accordance with the provisions of Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, afford the Party so attacked all the military and other aid and assistance in their power.

ARTICLE VI

All measures taken as a result of the preceding Article shall be immediately reported to the Security Council. They shall be terminated as soon as the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security.

The present Treaty does not prejudice in any way the obligations of the High Contracting Parties under the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. It shall not be interpreted as affecting in any way the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

ARTICLE VII

The High Contracting Parties declare, each so far as he is concerned, that none of the international engagements now in force between him and any of the High Contracting Parties or any third State is in conflict with the provisions of the present Treaty.

None of the High Contracting Parties will conclude any alliance or participate in any coalition directed against any other of the High Contracting Parties.

ARTICLE VIII

1. For the purposes of strengthening peace and security and of promoting unity and of encouraging the progressive integration of Europe and closer co-operation between them and with other European organisations, the High Contracting Parties to the Brussels Treaty shall create a Council to consider matters concerning the execution of this Treaty and of its Protocols and their Annexes.

2. This Council shall be known as the "Council of Western European Union"; it shall be so organised as to be able to exercise its functions continuously; it shall set up such subsidiary bodies as may be considered necessary: in particular it shall establish immediately an Agency for the Control of Armaments, whose functions are defined in Protocol No. IV.

At the request of any of the High Contracting Parties the Council shall be immediately convened in order to permit them to consult with regard to any situation which may constitute a threat to peace, in whatever area this threat should arise, or a danger to economic stability.

The Council shall decide by unanimous vote questions for which no other voting procedure has been or may be agreed. In the cases provided for in Protocols II, III and IV it will follow the various voting procedures, unanimity, two-thirds majority, simple majority, laid down therein. It will decide by simple majority questions submitted to it by the Agency for the Control of Armaments.

ARTICLE IX

The Council of Western European Union shall make an annual report on its activities and, in particular, concerning the control of armaments to an Assembly composed of representatives of the Brussels Treaty Powers to the Consultative Assembly of the Council of Europe.

ARTICLE X

In pursuance of their determination to settle disputes only by peaceful means, the High Contracting Parties will apply to disputes between themselves the following provisions:

The High Contracting Parties will, while the present Treaty remains in force, settle all disputes falling within the scope of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the International Court of Justice by referring them to the Court, subject only, in the case of each of them, to any reservation already made by that Party when accepting this clause for compulsory jurisdiction, to the extent that that Party may maintain the reservation.

In addition, the High Contracting Parties will submit to conciliation all disputes outside the scope of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

In the case of a mixed dispute involving both questions for which conciliation is appropriate and other questions for which judicial settlement is appropriate, any Party to the dispute shall have the right to insist that the judicial settlement of the legal questions shall precede conciliation.

The preceding provisions of this Article in no way affect the application of relevant provisions or agreements prescribing some other method of pacific settlement.

ARTICLE XI

The High Contracting Parties may, by agreement, invite any other State to accede to the present Treaty on conditions to be agreed between them and the State so invited.

Any State so invited may become a Party to the Treaty by depositing an instrument of accession with the Belgian Government.

The Belgian Government will inform each of the High Contracting Parties of the deposit of each instrument of accession.

ARTICLE XII

The present Treaty shall be ratified and the instruments of ratification shall be deposited as soon as possible with the Belgian Government.

It shall enter into force on the date of the deposit of the last instrument of ratification and shall thereafter remain in force for fifty years.

After the expiry of the period of fifty years, each of the High Contracting Parties shall have the right to cease to be a party thereto provided that he shall have previously given one year's notice of denunciation to the Belgian Government.

The Belgian Government shall inform the Governments of the other High Contracting Parties of the deposit of each instrument of ratification and of each notice of denunciation.

SUMMARY OF PROTOCOLS

PROTOCOL No. I

This Protocol is incorporated in the text of the revised Treaty as printed above.

PROTOCOL No. II

This Protocol sets upper limits on the size of the land and air forces which the members of WEU maintain on the continent of Europe in peace-time and place under the command of the Supreme Allied Commander, Europe. For Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the Netherlands these limits are the same as in the Annex to the EDC Treaty; for Luxembourg the limit is one regimental combat team, while for the United Kingdom it is four divisions and the Second Tactical Air Force. The level of naval forces are determined annually by NATO. These limits are not to be increased except by unanimous agreement, and the level of internal defence and police forces are also to be established by internal agreement. Finally, the United Kingdom agreed not to withdraw or diminish her forces in Europe against the wishes of the majority of her partners, except in the event of an acute overseas emergency.

PROTOCOL No. III

Under the third Protocol, the Federal Republic of Germany undertook not to manufacture atomic, chemical or biological weapons, or certain other weapons on a list (including guided missiles, warships and strategic bombers) which can be amended by the Council of WEU by a two-thirds majority. The Federal Republic agreed to supervision to ensure that these undertakings were respected and the other members agreed that their stocks of various weapons would be subject to control.

PROTOCOL No. IV

This Protocol provided for the setting up of the Agency for the Control of Armaments, which has the task of ensuring that the commitments contained in the third Protocol are observed. A Resolution was also passed setting up the Standing Armaments Committee. (See Organization above.)

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Albania lies between 39° and 43° N. latitude and between 19° and 21° E. longitude; it is bordered by Yugoslavia to the north and east, Greece to the south and the Adriatic and Ionian Seas to the west. The maximum length of the country is 336.2 km. and its maximum breadth is 148.2 km. Much of Albania is mountainous, particularly northern Albania where the mountains continue the Crna Gora chain of Montenegro, and in the east along the Macedonian border. Albania is one of the highest countries in Europe, having an average height of 708 metres above sea-level. Throughout its history, Albania has been subjected to earthquakes. Climate is Mediterranean throughout most of the country. The Adriatic and Ionian Seas play a moderating role in the country's climate, although frequent cyclones in the winter months make the weather unstable. The average temperature is 14° C. in the north-east and 18° C. in the south-west. The language is Albanian, the principal dialects being Gheg (north of the Shkumbini river) and Tosk (in the south). The literary language is being formed on the basis of a strong fusion of the two dialects with the phonetic and morphological structure of Tosk prevailing. Religion no longer plays a significant part in Albanian life, and all religious institutions have been closed. Before the foundation of the People's Republic, Islam had been the predominant faith, with very small numbers of Catholics in the north and Greek Orthodox in the south. The flag (proportions 7 by 5) is red, with a two-headed black eagle, above which is a gold-edged, five-pointed red star. The capital is Tiranë (Tirana).

Recent History

The Albanian Party of Labour was founded in 1941. The leader of the Party, Enver Hoxha, led the Liberation Army against the Germans and the Italian occupation of Albania. During the war years Albania suffered severe losses—28,000 killed and 43,000 deported out of a population of 1.1 million. Independence was finally proclaimed in 1944, and in 1946 Albania became a People's Republic. Enver Hoxha has been in the seat of power since that date. In the immediate post-war years, Albania was largely a dependency of Yugoslavia, the two countries establishing a monetary and customs union. Yugoslavia's influence and aid was gradually replaced by that of the Soviet Union, and after the breach between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union in 1949, Albania remained a firm ally of the latter under Stalin. Following the death of Stalin in 1953, Albania became alienated from the Soviet Union over Khrushchev's policy of rapprochement with Yugoslavia. Relations deteriorated until in 1961 diplomatic relations with the U.S.S.R. were broken off. The Soviet Union's place as Albania's main ally and benefactor was taken by the People's Republic of China. Albania virtually ceased to participate in the activities of CMEA in 1961 and in 1968 she withdrew from the Warsaw Pact. In most aspects of political and ideological policy Albania's position has been identified with that of the People's Republic of China. In 1971 Albania sponsored the motion whereby the People's Republic of China gained admission to the United Nations, of which Albania herself had been a member since 1955. Repeated Soviet overtures towards normalization of relations between the Soviet Union and Albania have been emphatically rejected. Recently, however various international contacts have been developing, and trade and diplomatic relations have been established with many countries, including, notably, Greece, Yugoslavia and several west European countries. The general elections of October 1974 showed a 99.9 per cent vote in favour of the Democratic Front.

Government

Albania is a People's Republic with a one-party system of government. The supreme legislative organ is the People's Assembly, elected for a four-year term by all citizens over 18 years of age. The Assembly elects a Presidium which fulfils the functions of Head of State as a collective organ of leadership under the President of the Presidium. The Council of Ministers is appointed, and can be dismissed, by the People's Assembly. The Constitution explicitly recognizes the special position of the Albanian Party of Labour which works closely with the Government and is the main policy making body. At its congresses the Party elects the Central Committee which, in turn, elects the Political Bureau.

The primary organs of local government are the District People's Councils, which are elected for a three-year term by all citizens over 18 years of age. As with the People's Assembly, candidates are nominated by local organizations of the Party of Labour, the Democratic Front, Trade Unions, the Labour Youth Union, the Women's Union or by other mass organizations. The People's Councils elect Executive Committees made up of a Chairman, Deputy Chairman, Secretary and members. In cases of conflict in the People's Councils, disputes are referred to the People's Assembly or to government departments. Tirana, the capital, is divided into ten townships.

Defence

Defence in Albania is conducted under the auspices of the People's Army which was founded in 1943. Military service lasts for two years in the Army, and three years in the Air Force, Navy and paramilitary units. According to western estimates, the total strength of the armed forces was 38,000 in 1973, comprising Army 30,000, Air Force 5,000 and Navy 3,000. The internal security forces numbered 5,000 and the frontier force 10,000. Defence expenditure in 1973 was estimated at 589 million lekë. A defence agreement with China was reported to have been concluded after the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Economic Affairs

Before liberation in 1944 Albania was an extremely backward country. Its semi-feudal social system was dominated by Italy to the extent that the economy was half-feudal, half-colonial. Before liberation 80 per cent of the population was illiterate, and 87 per cent of the people worked in agriculture. By 1965 Albania had been turned into a socialist agrarian-industrial country. The Albanian economy operates on the principles of the public ownership of the means of production, planned management of the national economy and a certain level of financial autonomy for the enterprises. Each individual enterprise operates under the auspices of a single state plan. The year 1951 saw the beginning of long-term planning, with the first Five-Year Plan (1951-55). Successive plans have reorganized industry and agriculture on collectivist lines. The principal indices of economic development during the fourth five-year period, 1965-70, are as follows: Industrial production rose by 83 per cent and agricultural production by 28 per cent. State investment increased by 55 per cent, as did the national income, while real income per capita grew by 17 per cent. Freight transport increased by 53 per cent, and retail trade by 45 per cent. Industrial production rose at an annual rate of 12.9 per cent. Production of capital equipment doubled between 1965 and 1970, while the production of consumer goods grew by 58 per cent. This rate of economic development is being accompanied by the most rapid rate of population growth in Europe. A projected total population of 2,445,000 by 1975 represents an annual growth rate of 2.8 per cent from 1970. The fifth Five-Year Plan (1971-75) aims to develop production through extensive capital investments and large industrial building projects. Exports are expected to increase by 67 per cent in comparison with the previous plan.

Industry now utilizes natural resources, and Albania refines her own oil. Important items in production include copper and iron, agricultural raw materials, machinery and equipment, chemical materials, fertilizers, building materials and textiles. Industrial products account for about 80 per cent of Albania's exports. Whereas in 1938 industrial production accounted for 9.1 per cent of total production in the country, in 1970 it accounted for 66.8 per cent, output increasing 64-fold. Agricultural production has increased threefold since before the Second World War, and the area of cultivable land has doubled; recently, however, agricultural production has fallen short of planned targets. During the post-war years there has been an extensive socialist transformation of the countryside: land reclamation, mechanization and complete collectivization of agriculture, utilization of chemicals, etc. Albania's principal exports include chrome and ferro-nickel ore, copper wire, bitumen, tobacco and cigarettes, timber and furniture, textiles, craftwork, canned foods, wine and other beverages, fruit and vegetables, etc.

Albania's breach with the Soviet Union in the years 1960-61 damaged the Albanian economy. The Soviet Union withdrew all aid, left many projects only half-completed, ceased supplies of industrial equipment and cancelled economic agreements. The economic blockade imposed on Albania by the U.S.S.R. left her virtually in total European isolation. In recent years trade and contacts with China have increased considerably and the Albanian economy has overcome the setbacks of 1960-61. Particular progress has been made in the spheres of copper, chromium, nickel and coal production and electric power generation. Crop yields have increased considerably, particularly wheat and maize. In 1970 Albanian industry supplied 70 per cent of consumer requirements which had previously been imported. A predominant part of Albania's foreign trade is now with China. A joint Sino-Albanian shipping company was formed, having 14 ocean-going ships with a total tonnage of 50,000 tons, and in June 1965 an agreement was signed which, with subsequent trade protocols, provides Albania with financial, technical and material aid. This has greatly helped achieve the complete electrification of the country in 1970. With the completion of the Mao Tse-tung hydro-electric plant and the Korçë thermo-electric plant in 1971, total power output reached 2,000 million kWh. In 1969 a special protocol was signed in Peking which allowed for Chinese participation in many new Albanian export industries. In 1970 Albania signed a long-term trade and economic agreement with China, in accordance with which China granted long-term interest-free loans.

Some 95 per cent of Albania's foreign trade is with the socialist countries, although trade with non-communist countries is growing annually. Albania is currently trading with 40 countries of the world and has signed trade protocols with various socialist, Western and developing countries.

Transport and Communications

There are 302 kilometres of railway track in Albania linking the main cities (including branch lines), all of it built since 1944; a line linking Elbasan with Prenjas was completed in 1968. Rail transport accounts for 30 per cent of all land transportation and 6,354,000 passengers travelled by rail in 1971. Roads now link the remotest regions of the country although, despite progress in the sphere of road building the lesser roads, particularly in the highlands, are mostly unsuitable for motor transport. A total of 55,934,000 passengers travelled on road services in 1967. There is a marked absence of private automobiles in Albania, and bicycles and mules are widely used. Albania has a developing sea transport; over 104,000 tons of goods were transported by sea in Albanian ships in 1967. Ships use the main ports of Durrës, Vlorë and Sarandë. Under the 1966-70 Five-Year Plan, several targets in the field of transport were exceeded, the volume of goods transported increasing by 53 per cent. There is a new airport at Rinas for international flights, but there is no internal air service.

Social Welfare

In Albania all medical services are free of charge. There are now hospitals, clinics and maternity homes throughout the country which provide free treatment for the entire population. In 1969 there were 158 hospitals and 1,400 physicians. Between 1965 and 1970, the number of the population to one doctor dropped from 1,870 to 1,180. The 1969 health budget amounted to 238,542,000 leks, 5.3 per cent of the state budget, while in 1971 socio-cultural expenditure accounted for 25.8 per cent of the budget. Kindergartens and nursery schools receive subsidies of 68 and 66 per cent respectively. There is a non-contributory state social insurance system for all workers, and a pension system for the old and disabled. Income tax has been abolished for all workers, employees and co-operative members, government expenditure being met by surpluses earned by state enterprises. Albania is thus one of the first communist countries in Europe to be free of direct taxation for her people. A state social insurance law came into force on January 1st, 1967, which provides many social benefits for the population in addition to free medical attention.

Education

By 1956, illiteracy had been wiped out among persons under 40 years of age. About 20 per cent of children in the age group of three to six years attend nursery school (kopshtë); children between the ages of seven and fifteen years attend an "eighth-grade school" which is compulsory. Secondary schools in Albania may be divided into three main categories, namely twelve-year schools (shkollat 12-vjeçare) giving four-year courses which complete the education of the eighth-grade school, secondary technical-professional schools (shkollat e mesme tekniko-profesionale) which combine vocational training with a general education, and lower vocational schools (shkollat e ultë profesionale) which train workers in the fields of agriculture and industry, etc. The school-year in secondary schools lasts six and a half months. In addition, all pupils must spend two and a half months working in industrial or agricultural production and one month in military training. In the 1972-73 school year there were 699,000 students enrolled at eighth-grade, secondary and high schools. Approximately one in every three persons is undergoing education. In the same year 30,200 students were enrolled at higher education institutes in Albania; the State University of Tirana has 8,283 full-time and 7,800 night and correspondence students, with another 2,384 registered at its branches throughout the country. The university has 7 faculties, 5 scientific research institutes, and several annexes in the regions. Students at higher education institutes spend seven months of every year at the institute, two months in production work, one month in physical culture and military training, and two months on vacation.

Tourism

The prospect of mass tourism is not welcomed by many Albanians, but in 1970 Enver Hoxha, First Secretary of the Party of Labour, specifically stressed the need to develop tourism. All aspects of tourism in Albania are handled by Albturist, the official state tourist department. The development of tourism began in 1956 but has been seriously encouraged by the state only since about 1968. There are few recognized resorts apart from Durrës, although great potential exists in the beauty spots on the coast and in the scenery of the interior. Visas are essential for foreign visitors. A very favourable exchange rate of about 24 lekë to £1 sterling is in operation for tourists.

Sport

Sport is officially encouraged in Albania, association football and volleyball being among the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

1975: May 1st (May Day), November 7th (Victory of the October Socialist Revolution), November 28th (Proclamation of Independence), November 29th (Liberation Day 1944).
